NOT FALSE, BUT FICKLE.

LORD BYRON.

Thou art not false, but thou art fickle,
To those thyself so fondly sought;
The tears that thou hast forced to trickle
Are double bitter from that thought;
'Tis this which breaks the heart thou grievest,
Too well thou lovest—too soon thou leavest

The wholly false the heart despises,
And spurns deceiver and deceit,
But she who not a thought disguises,
Whose love is as sincere as sweet—
When she can change who loved so truly,
It feels what mine has felt so newly.

To dream of joy and wake to sorrow,
Is doom'd to all who love or live;
And if when conscience on the morrow
We scarce or fancy can forgive,
That chented us in slumber only,
To make our waking thoughts more lonely.

What must they feel whom no false vision,
But truest, tenderest passion warmed?
Sincere, but swift in sad transition
As if a dream alone had charmed?
Ah! sure such grief is fancy's scheming,
And all thy change can be but dreaming.

A Confession of Faith.

DECEMBER 26th, 1876.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

You will please allow me space in your paper for publication of a valuable piece written by my sister a short time before her death, and published in the Banner of Holiness. I feel in hopes that it may be a help to the many readers of your paper, and especially her relatives. MRS. S. E. W.

EXPERIENCE.

DEAR BRO. BROOKS: Having read several experiences in the Banner of Holiness, and being very much blessed by them, I thought perhaps someone would be blessed in reading my experience. The longer I thought about it, the more it became impressed upon my mind that I ought to send it to you for publication. And especially so when I read Sister Rollo's experience, for it was through her that the Lord brought me to see that, if I would believe on Him and put my whole trust in Him, I should be wholly sanctified and enjoy perfect love. Praise His holy name for that rich boon, perfect love!

According to the Bible, I gave myself to the Lord, or "remembered my Creator in my youthful days." I was convicted of sin when ten years old, and saw that unless I repented of my sins and sought forgiveness of the Lord, I would be sure to be lost. I felt that, though a child, I was very wicked; for I had been very untruthful and disobedient to my mother, even when she was on her death bed. In a few months she was called away. I then resolved, more than ever, to seek the Lord, and to meet her in heaven. Time passed. I was nearly fourteen years old. I had no religion yet, but I determined never to stop praying to the Lord until He forgave me. The second Sunday night in December, 1854, as I was praying, He spoke peace to my troubled soul. I stopped praying to listen. And I thought, what is this? I found that it was a blessing from the Lord. Oh, I felt so happy. I resolved next morning to tell a friend, and did so. She told me that I had religion, which I believed, and felt that I had been born again—that I was no more a sinner.

Six months afterward I joined the Baptist Church. I lived up to the rules of my church as nearly as I could. But sometimes I was far from God, which no one knew but myself and my God. About the first of June last Bro. Skinner came to our neighborhood and preached on sanctification and holiness. I thought, some people may be sanctified, but I can not be, for I have so many vexations. I let my temper overcome me at times, and say and do things that I have to be repenting of so much of the time. I thought the blessing unattainable by me. I was told that Sister Rollo was sanctified. I asked the Lord if there was such a blessing for me, to give it to me. I endeavored to make the consecration, and asked time and again, but no answer came. I began to inquire what was the reason. I found that I had not made a full consecration, and could not consequently exercise faith. I then began to read the Bible, and in reading I applied the verses that suited my case. Midnight came, and I thought to try to sleep, and to seek the Lord next day. And this I did. I began to have faith, and believed He would soon answer my prayer, which he did as I walked away from my place of prayer. And the blessing came to me on the 2d of July, 1875. I was impressed that I must now fully love and serve the Lord. I know the Lord had blessed me, but I was not sure I was sanctified. I asked the Lord, if the blessing he gave me was sanctification, to convince me of it, that I might not be deceived. As I went to my work I sang, "Hallelujah, Thine be the glory." My heart was full. I prayed for faith and for spiritual strength. I received strength immediately. I determined to go and tell Sister Rollo that the Lord had blessed me. My cup so ran over with joy that I could not speak for a time. I was then confirmed in my faith, and believed that I had received the blessing of sanctification.

I had promised the Lord I would tell it to everyone if he would bless me. I was called on in a few hours to take up the cross and testify for Jesus. And then again, I was asked to pray in public, which I did. I felt that I had been blessed in taking up the cross, and bountifully rewarded for testifying for Jesus. I pray to the Lord for strength continually to testify. I want everybody to know that there is a loving Savior waiting to bless, if we willingly come to Him. I love everybody, and especially sinners and backsliders. I want to see them turning from the broad road that leads to death. By the grace of God I am determined to spend the rest of my days in loving and serving Him, the author and finisher of my faith. MRS. POLLY ANN CRISLER.

The Life and Services of Some Kentucky Bohemians.

Craddock, J. G., Czar Supreme of the Paris True Kentuckian—Born where the Lexington Court-house now stands, and discovered by Boone on his first trip to Kentucky. In early life he was put out on first base in a little game of love, by the girl's father, and from that time to this has eschewed matrimony and sleeps on foot in a corner. He has been the innocent cause of more love-sack females dying with their shoes on than any other man in Kentucky, but his charitable disposition has made all things even. In all of these sad cases, where his own heart has been touched with that sorrow that makes all the world akin, he has never been known to refuse his regular rates of publishing obituary notices or to decline an invitation to a county fair.

Davis, Thomas, editor of the Maysville Republican, born on the north fork of the Licking river, near where Boone killed his first catamount, and soon after that event young Davis was educated for the ministry, but in early life fell from grace and backslid into the printing business. This circumstance caused much sorrow in the family of Colonel Craddock, of the True Kentuckian, and is supposed by many to have been the cause of Tilden's never marrying.

Gaines, Samuel, of the Hopkinsville New Era, half cousin of Democratic gains, was also born since the resolutions of '98 were brought into existence. Mr. Gaines is a married man and father of seventeen children, all of whom, like their sire, take their liquor and politics straight. His editorials are unlike those in any other journal in existence; he is so full of humor that the characteristic is apparent in the advertisements in the New Era. He has amassed a large fortune by puffing Tilden at thirty cents a line and not charging the same to Bates & Locke.

Larue, Colonel Dick, editor of the Bowling Green Pantagraph. The subject of this sketch is a native of Chucka-Luck, Hardin County; was born during the recent fratricidal unpleasantness between some fellows residing on opposite sides of Mason Dixon's line; was made corporal for gallant services at the siege of Shepherdsville, and at the conclusion of peace, was promoted Colonel of the Seventeenth regiment of Elizabethtown Hussars. The Colonel is related to Larue County by marriage, exactly in what manner, whether the county was named for him or he for the county, is unknown.

Morcy, A. J., editor-in-chief of the Cynthiana News; born in Ireland about the time cork-screws were invented, came to America in the Mayflower, and landed in Cynthiana. He went on a voyage of discovery to Falmouth in 1850, and actually made a circuit around Berry's Station on foot, has been married frequently, and is the father of the term bulldozing. He has been a large tax-payer since the United States Internal Revenue laws have been in force. It is said that Mr. Morey is to receive the emoluments of the Cynthianna Postoffice from Tilden when inaugurated President.—Louisville Commercial.

A Business Girl of Chicago.

When a Chicago girl received a dispatch from Wisconsin, announcing that her lover was going off with consumption, she telegraphed to his friends:

"Has poor Jeffrey kept up his life insurance?"

The friends telegraphed back:

"Policy for $10,000 in your favor is paid up till May 9, 1877. Poor Jeffrey can not last after the first cold snap."

The young lady then wondered philosophically how she would look in black, and telegraphed to Jeffrey:

"Darling—I will be with you on Tuesday, never to quit you during life. Lurline."

"It will be a sad loss to you, my love," said her mother.

"Yes, ma." sobbed the girl, "but the loss is fully covered by insurance."—Chicago Tribune.

THE following is a passage from a letter used as evidence in a San Francisco breach-of-promise suit: "It one atom of the deep, deep love I feel for you is scattered throughout the whole world, I could stake my life it will fill, if allowed to do so, the entire human race, and thence will derive the word commonly used as love. Good-bye, my dearest dear. Yours till death and beyond it and eternity." The writer was asked what he meant by such language, and he replied: "Oh, I couldn't reasonably be expected to explain such stuff."

Had a Shawl on.

The man who always makes a guy of himself by wearing a shawl when cold weather is in town, put it on one morning last week and started down the street. An acquaintance met him and said:

"Why don't you buy an overcoat? Too poor? I've got a good one, only worn one winter, I'll sell you cheap."

The man in the shawl turned red in the face, and refused to recognize his acquaintance. An Irish woman came out of a store a little further on, and, seeing him, said:

"Faith, an' how the styles do change. Nixt ye'll see the wimmin wid overcoats."

The man in the shawl pretended not to hear and passed by. Just as he was stepping into a store door, a miscrable looking boy, with his shirt hanging out, spied him and yelled out in a tone of strong sarcasm:

"Oh! luk at 'im. W'y don't yer git on a dress an' a hussel an' be done with it?"

And the man in the shawl turned round and shook his fist and danced up and down and swore. Then he went into the store and hid the offending shawl in the cellar, and took a solemn oath he never would wear it again.—Rockland Courier.

Uncle Remus' Politics.

"You ain't heerd de news, is you?" asked a well dressed darkey of old Uncle Remus yesterday.

"W'at news is dat?"

"Why Giner'l Grant's gwine ter 'naugerate Chamberlain?"

"Gwine ter do w'ich?"

"Gwine ter 'naugerate Chamberlain."

"Who's Chamberlain?"

"Dat Souf Carliny man."

"En who's gwine ter 'naugerate Grant?"

"Dunno. Hayes, I 'spec."

"Well, dey ain't no kin ter me," said Uncle Remus, thoughtfully, "an' I ain't oneasy 'bout none uv 'm. Gimme a two dollar bill an' I'm in favor uv free guv'ment and red licker right along, but w'en I'm hankerin' arter a dram I kinder disremember w'ich is w'ich and who is who, an' dat's de de'sease w'at I got now."

And then Uncle Remus walked off singing:

"We is all a waitin' fer de las' great day,
Oh, Lord! Hallylujarum!
But hit ain't no use fer de niggers fer to stay,
Oh, Lord! Hallylujarum!
No use fer ter wait fer de glory crown,
While Gabriel's shootin dem angels all aroun',
Oh, Lord! Hallylujarum!"

—Atlanta Constitution.

Thought So Too.

As a citizen was driving up Jefferson avenue in a cutter, yesterday, keeping to the right, as the law directs, he encountered a man coming down with a similar rig. The latter wouldn't turn out, and presently the horses came to a stand-still, with noses almost touching.

"Why don't you turn out?" shouted the man going up.

The other stood up in his sleigh with unsteady motion, looked right and left, and thickly answered back:

"Which one of you is hollering at me?"

"Which one? Why, there is only one of me."

"Zhat so? Looks to me zif there was two horses an' two cuzzers right ahead."

"I guess you are drunk," said the man going up, as he pulled clear of the track to get by.

"I zhink so. I can see fourteen street-cars down zhere, plain's day, though I know zhat they never 'low over ten to get on one switch to once. Want to drive zhis horse down town fr me?"

"DEAR George," she said in a plaintive tone, and great tear drops gathered in her hazel eyes, "dear George, I'm sure this horrid trouble has resulted in war, as you said it would; I see it in your face, dearest. But oh, George, don't go off to the wars and leave me to suffer a thousand deaths without you—don't! There's a dear," and she kissed him fondly.

In the presence of his young wife George Van Duzenberry hesitated; but it was only for an instant. The gleam came back to the steel-gray eyes and the lines of determination to the face, and he hastily buckled his powder-flask and bullet-pouch about him. Then, snatching his trusty rifle from the rack, he disengaged himself from the arms of his sobbing wife, and passed hurriedly out of the back door. With nostrils aflame he scudded lightly over the new-fallen snow, exclaiming:

"A fresh rabbit-track on these premises means meat for dinner!"—Cincinnati Commercial.

A SAN FRANCISCO young lady received an invitation to attend the theatre the other evening just as the Chinaman came for her wash. She hurriedly made out a list of the washing, and answered the invitation. Then she sent the list to the young man and kept the answer to his note. There was soon a very much confused young man, a very much mortified young woman, but no theatre going for either of them that night.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

ARTIFICIAL humbugs—girls.

HEIGHT of fashion—ladies' hair.

A cow bell—a beautiful milkmaid.

MOVING for a new trial—courting a widow.

OUR charity should be large if we expect it to cover our multitude of sins.

WE are argus-eyed in reading the faults of others and blind to those of ourselves.

ALMOST any young lady has public spirit enough to be willing to have her father's house used for a court-house.

THE best temperance lecture is a good salt mackeral. If the man that eats one don't take water then he is a hopeless case.

"LOOK here boy," said a nervous gentleman to a lad munching candy at a lecture, "you are annoying me very much." "No I ain't, neither," said the lad; "I'm gnawing this 'ere candy."

"MOTHER, have I any children?" asked an urchin of seven summers, "Why, no! What put that into your head?" returned the surprised parent. "Because I read about children's children," answered the acute juvenile.

AN old black woman, reciting her "speerunce," said she had been to heaven. "Did you see any of de colored ladies dar?" asked a younger sister. "Oh, you git out; do you suppose I went in de kitchen, when I was dar?"

GERMANY grows faster than any country in Europe except Great Britain. It now has 42,726,844 people, and has been sixty years in doubling. The greatest increase was in Saxony. There is an excess of 362,730 females over males.

IF I was as flat-footed as you I would not be afraid of slipping on the sidewalk." "Yes," was the response, "some people are flat on one end and some on another." And then the first chap looked thoughtful, and went down street.

WITH the exception of the pyramid of Cheops, the spire of the Strassbourg Cathedral, 464 feet in height, has hitherto been the most elevated building in the world. It has now been exceeded by the lately completed spire of the Roman Cathedral, which is 430 feet high.

A NEGRO, having been brought up before a magistrate, and convicted of pilfering, the magistrate began to remonstrate. "Do you know how to read?" "Yes, massa—little." "Well, don't you ever make use of the Bible?" "Yes, massa, strap razor on him sometimes."

THE Imperial hunt, which takes place in a tract of country to the north of Corea in China every three years, for the purpose of supplying the Imperial table with dainties and of exercising the soldiers who take part in it, is to be abandoned for the present on account of the impoverished state of the exchequer.

The Virginia Chronicle tells some droll stories of Nevada life. One of the latest concerns a dog who had a wonderful scent. His master was proudly boasting how far the animal could track him, and concluded his yarn with the triumphant query: "What d'ye think about that?" "Do you want to know what I think about it?" said one of the bystanders; "well, I think you'd better go and take a bath?"

AN Englishman was accosted thus—"What will you take to stand all night in the tower of St. Paul's?" "A beef steak and a pint of beer," was the frank reply. The next one thus accosted was a Scotchman. Says Sandy, "What'll ye gie?" Lastly came along Patrick, and when asked what he would take to stand all night in the tower of St. Paul's, he wittily answered, "An' sure an I'd be apt to take a bad cowld."

IN the week ending Nov. 26, the number of paupers in London was 81,630, of whom 37,415 were in workhouses, and 44,265 received out door relief. Compared with the corresponding week in 1875, 1874 and 1873, these figures show a decrease of 2,766, 11,102, and 20,932 respectively. The marked decrease of late years is largely due to the vigorous action of certain charitable societies, which have routed out the idle, serving in the way of employment and relief from established societies.

A YOUNG English lady is engaged in making a cloak entirely of partridge feathers. In it will be at least 10,000 feathers of different sizes, the lower portion of the cloak being made of the tail feathers and then ranging up. The breast feathers come next, while the variegated plumage around the neck of the bird encircle the white throat of the lady. It will require about one hundred partridges to fill out the regular course of feathers, which are placed in layers similar to the way they grow on the bird.

Two months from to-morrow is inauguration day. Then we will see who is who.

PRESIDENT GRANT contemplates visiting Havana after the expiration of his term of office.

THE Congressional Investigating Committee that went to South Carolina will report that Hampton and Hayes carried the state.

THE amount of silver disbursements from the United States Treasury to the twenty-eighth ult. aggregated $25,511,509 38 of which $15,345,512 62 was for the redemption of fractional currency, and $10,115,966 78 was silver paid in lieu of checks.

ON the 23rd of last month a horrible tragedy occurred near Russellville in this state. The victim of the shooting was a man named Wheeler. The murderer, whose name is Rutherford, after having killed Wheeler by shooting, split his head open with the stock of the gun.

SOME places in the East, a desire to have the office of President of the United States abolished is being manifested. They are talking about petitioning Congress to pass amendments to the Constitution to that effect. It is proposed to substitute an Executive Council therefor.

ALMOST another Brooklyn horror was that which occurred at Ashtabula, Ohio, on the twenty-ninth of last month. A westward bound train, composed of two locomotives and thirteen coaches, while passing over an iron bridge at that place broke through the bridge and one locomotive and all the coaches were precipitated a distance of seventy feet into the river. The wreck took fire and the number of lives lost by the disaster is estimated at two hundred.

KATE CLAXTON, one of the actors who so miraculously escaped death in the Brooklyn disaster, appeared, for the first time since that eventful night, on the stage in Washington, on the 25th ult., in the play entitled "The Two Orphans." During the snow scene, some one in the gallery cried fire, and the audience was at once panic-stricken and commenced a pell-mell rush for the street, but after great exertions on the part of the troupe, quiet was restored, when it was ascertained the alarm was created by a lady's fainting in the audience.

IN pursuance to the call of the National Democratic Executive Committee, a mass meeting was held in Burlington, on Monday, January 1st, 1877, for the purpose of selecting delegates to the Louisville Convention which meets on the 8th inst. for the purpose of counseling upon the present state of public affairs.

The meeting was called to order by Dr. A. Sayre, Chairman of the County Democratic Executive Committee, who stated its object.

On motion of Dr. S. S. Scott, Dr. A. Sayre was appointed Chairman and W. L. Riddell, Secretary of the meeting.

On motion of Capt. L. C. Norman that a committee of three be appointed to draft resolutions suitable to the occasion, the Chairman appointed Capt. L. C. Norman, Capt. Geo. W. Terrill and Dr. S. S. Scott.

The Committee reported the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, By the people of Boone County in mass convention assembled, that we believe Samuel J. Tilden and Thomas A. Hendricks have been legally elected to the offices of President and Vice-President of the United States, and that it is the duty of the Democratic party, and all other law abiding citizens, to resist any force or violence that may be used to prevent them from entering upon the discharge of the duties of their respective offices.

Resolved, That we have the most profound confidence in the courage and patriotism of our Representatives in Congress, and we call upon them to stand by the laws and Constitution of the country, and see that those who have been legally and fairly elected by the people to the highest offices within their gift shall be inaugurated, and that the will of the majority shall not be defeated, neither by fraud nor force, and to this end we now solemnly pledge them our earnest and undivided support. And be it further

Resolved, That our Delegates to the State Convention to be held in the City of Louisville on the 8th inst., be instructed to use their most earnest efforts to secure such action by said Convention as shall convey to the Great Democratic and Conservative Party of the North the most hearty assurance from us, that should they deem it proper to meet force to force to overcome the fraud and treachery of those who in their efforts to maintain power would overturn our Republican Institutions by force, that we of Kentucky will not be found wanting in the great struggle for constitutional liberty.

On motion of Dr. S. S. Scott, the Chairman appointed the delegates by Districts as follows: Burlington—F. Riddell, B. K. Sleet; Union—L. C. Norman, F. Dickey; Walton—L. L. Youell and Reuben Conner; Bellevue—S. P. Brady; Verona—Dr. R. L. Finnell; Petersburg—Capt. Geo. W. Terrill and J. Frank Grant; Taylorport—Wm. Watts and Jerry Murphy; Carlton—Omer Kirtley; for the county at large—Dr. S. S. Scott.

On motion of Dr. S. S. Scott, every citizen of the county was appointed a delegate to the Louisville convention, and are requested to attend.

On motion of Capt. L. C. Norman, the Secretary was directed to furnish the Cincinnati Enquirer, the Louisville Courier Journal, the Commonwealth, the Ticket and the Boone County RECORDER each, with a copy of the proceedings of the meeting for publication.

The meeting then adjourned.

The substantial men of business, without regard to party, unite in urging on Congress a manner of counting the electoral votes which shall be above suspicion and satisfactory to the country, no matter who wins. They express the demand of the whole people. Will the Senate heed their words?—N. Y. Sun.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Dec. 29th, 1876.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

We are having cold weather and a very dull Christmas, on this side of the Father of Waters. We have had light, cold, spitting snow every day, without exception, for a week, and with all we have not enough on the ground for the beaux to give their sweethearts a gentle sleigh-riding, or for the boys to give the girls an old-fashioned snow-balling.

THE RECORDER, of last week, came to hand by due course of mail, and as business is pretty well suspended on account of the holidays, and the very unfavorable weather, we have read nearly every sentence in it, and find ourselves considerably edified and refreshed thereby.

By the way, it is 18 years to-day since your correspondent, for the first time, put his foot in this, the future great city of the West, and perhaps it may not be uninteresting to your readers, for us to mention a few of the important changes that have taken place with us since then. At that time there were only five, (partly unfinished) railroads centering in our city, and to-day, we have eighteen and trunks, with a multiplicity of branches, so that we can to-day, board a train, and reach New York, San Francisco, St. Paul, New Orleans, or Jacksonville, Florida, without change of cars. We had then, only one street railroad in the city, but now we have them on nearly every street in the city, and it may be interesting to those of limited means, for us to inform them, that one of the aforesaid roads is nine miles in length and that the fare for that distance is only five cents for the entire route—a very cheap ride, indeed. It is no less a fact that at this day every five minutes, day and night, we have steam cars running underneath almost the entire of our city; while we with equal pleasure record the fact, that, at this day, the iron horse, by means of the mighty span that connects us with all the East, blows his nose upon the middle of the Father of waters with as much freedom and safety, as upon terra firma. We can not, however, as yet, quite reach your town without change of cars, but we may be able to do so by the next Centennial.

We could not at that day find a grain elevator in or about the city, but now we have six with an aggregate capacity of 10,000,000 bushels, and we are daily loading bulk grain for all parts of the East and South.

In 1869, (seventeen years ago) if memory serves me correctly, our national census was 136,000. In 1870—313,000, and to-day we claim not less than 500,000, and many wise heads set our population down at 550,000, though we think the former figures nearer a correct estimate of the number of souls within our limits at this time.

How far we have progressed in intelligence, piety and work that fit and prepare men for the life beyond the river, your correspondent does not pretend to say, but we are forcibly reminded every day that there are many avenues in this city, as well as all large cities, that lead to "His Satanic Majesty's Kingdom," and we fear many there be that go therein.

While we thus speak of our growth as a city, we suppose it to be but fair to say—which we can say without fear of contradiction from an intelligent source, that there never was a time in the history of our city, when there were as many men and women out of employment as at this time, and how many a poor fellow with us is going to get through the winter with body and soul together, the good Being above only knows. But as we do not like to write upon gloomy subjects we will leave this part of the subject under consideration for a more propitious season, or until a final settlement of the Presidential muddle.

We notice with pleasure the interest your people are taking in popular education, and we have known of your School Commissioner, H. J. Foster, all our life, but have never had the pleasure of meeting him. Your correspondent thinks he can claim the honor of hearing the first address ever delivered in your town in favor of popular education, which was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Dillard, of the Baptist Church, about the year of 1843, and it was anything but a popular address, as the people in those days favored private or select schools, in preference to a common school system.

It seems to us, that your county ought to afford a Normal or High School, in order that every young gentleman or lady in your midst, might have at least a classical education, if not collegiate adornments. The graduates of our Normal School are fitted and prepared for teaching, and the course of our High School, is now such, as to qualify graduates for almost any calling or profession in life. Let us say every St. Louisian is proud of our public school system.

One more item and we are done for this time. On yesterday evening "Miss Susie," daughter of Elder Enos Campbell, pastor of the Central Christian Church, this city, and Walter L., son of the late S. S. Church, former pastor of First Christian Church, this city, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. Thus by a practical operation of the law, a Campbell becomes a Church. The happy pair left the same evening for the Queen City, their adopted home, carrying with them the congratulations of many home friends.

You see I have written you quite a lengthy letter, but being the last one I will write you this year I hope you will be able to stand "it."

Sending you compliments of the season, I am as ever

YOURS, BOB. A. LONG.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Plattsburg.

Among the most notable events of the holidays was the marriage of Mr. Lister Smith, of our Burg, to Miss Sarah J. Nichols, of Ashby Valley. The wedding ceremonies were administered by the Rev. J. A. Kirtley at the residence of the bride's aunt.

A. C. Foster, who was once a resident of our town, but left his home several years ago, has lately written to his sister that he is now in Nashville, Tennesse, and that he has been in delicate health.

The Rev. Bristow preached three able discourses at Ashby, on Friday and Saturday preceeding Christmas.

DON JUAN PRIM.

Union.

Quite a number of our old friends and former residents made this their retreat to while away the holidays. Prominent among them were Mr. W. P. Corbin, of Illinois, and Dr. Thomas Dickey of Ohio, nor would we fail to mention the presence of Dr. J. D. Furnish, who has been attending the Ohio Medical College.

The Christmas Tree at Richwood, given for the Sunday School children, was a success in every particular. Superintendant William Hudson, displayed good taste in arranging the presents. The singing was good and the music on the organ was delightful, the same was under charge of Mrs. Lizzie Collins.

Mr. John D. Smith, the gentleman spoken of in the second Book of Chronicles, and lady visited friends here during holidays.

VULCAN.

Big Bone Ridge.

Mr. H. J. Foster, School Comissioner, visited the school in this district on the twenty-first of last month. There are many teachers, who, no doubt, would accept as a favor any suggestions in regard to their work; and this seems to be the object of the law requiring that the schools should be visited not only by Commissioner but Trustees also. An opinion prevails among the Teachers, that county and neighborhood meetings ought to be held, at least, quarterly, for the improvement of their qualifications, and to awaken a greater interest in their work. Nothing is more evident than the fact that there is not enough system in the management of our schools and there is probably no better way to remedy the defect than for Teachers and friends of the cause to meet and take counsel in regard to these highly important matter. Our Commissioner might appoint a committee to arrange for a meeting or take the liberty to make such arrangements himself.

Loud complaint is heard from every quarter that general hardtimes is making fearful ravages upon the masses, rich and poor, high and low, without regard to age sex or condition. Uncle Sammy J., the call of, to arms, from the lofty perch may be necessary to roll back the surging waves, and let the sons of liberty with lighted torch, be ready to march at the tap of the drum!!!

O. H. SHEM AL.

Petersburg.

Mr. A. S. Piatt, while walking through the hall at home one day last week, slipped on the oilcloth covered floor and fell heavily, his head striking a brick near by. Although not considered seriously hurt at the time, he gradually continued to sicken until last Friday night about eight o'clock, when he breathed his last. Mr. Piatt was one of our best and oldest citizens, having occupied the home where he died, for many years.

Last week the Masonic and Odd Fellows fraternities at this place elected officers for the coming year. In the Masonic Lodge W. S. Keene was elected W. M.; O. T. Porter, S. W.; J. Ed Terrill, J. W.; D. Riggs, S. D.; Wm. Stott, J. D.; Dr. W. H. Terrill, Treas.; J. N. Earley, Sect.; Geo. R. Loder, Steward and Tyler.

In the Odd Fellows Lodge, Solon Earley was elected N. G.; Wm. Wingate, V. G.; Chas. Schramm, Sect.; S. G. Botts, Treas.; Rev. W. S. Keene is Chaplain.

Geo. Fetzenmeir, by a fall into an empty beer tub at the mill, one day last week, broke his arm just above the wrist. He fell a distance of ten feet.

The performances of the Lyceum were well patronized both evenings last week by large and orderly audiences. On Thursday evening the entertainment was not so good on several accounts; the play was a difficult one, required long study, much practice, familiar acquaintance, a large stage with abundant scenery, &c., &c. But Friday the plays were much easier and comic, and each actor or actress seemed determined to make the last evening a success. The receipts at the door was nearly $40, which at the low price of 10 cents each shows liberal patronage.

Florence.

The old disease which originated with father Adam and mother Eve, when they first cast sheep's eyes on each other in the Garden of Eden, has broken out here afresh, and bids fair to be an epidemic. It is hoped it will not leave us until every bachelor and maid, widow and widower, have had a touch of it. The first persons attacked, were Fernando (familiarly known as Bud) Carpenter and Miss Araminta Harris. They called in the Rev. Benjamin Lampton, and as he had prescribed for a good many cases of the same kind before, he quickly cured them by making them bone of one bone, and flesh of one flesh. They were married at the residence of the bride's parents, in Kenton, and next day had a reception at Mr. Wood Carpenter's—father of the bridegroom. This was one of the finest affairs of the kind that ever came off in this part of the county. There were over two hundred persons at the reception. The next party attacked, were a runaway couple from Independence. Mr. F. B. Adams and Ora Wilson. The parents of the young lady objected to the match but the voice of Cupid was more potent than that of the old folks, so Mr. Adams got a friend to bring his bride to Florence on a visit, while he went to Covington and procured a license, came to Florence, found Rev. Bristow, and was soon united in the holy bonds. And thus proving the truth of the old saying that "love laughs at locksmiths." This was their third attempt to run away. "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." The next parties were Mr. John Duke and Miss Emma Field, and Mr. Albert Rice and Miss Naomi Swetnam. These two couple concluded to go down and see Uncle Ed Stephens, a noted doctor in such diseases. They stated their case to him, comprehending the situation at a glance, he, by a few talismanic words and the laying on of hands, quickly cured them, passed the cake and wine and sent them on their way rejoicing. The next pair were Mr. Jesse R. Corwine and Miss Fannie Swetnam. They sent for Rev. Bristow last Thursday evening and the "two souls with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one" were quickly united. The wedding was strictly private, none but members of either family being invited.

The Masonic Lodge celebrated St. John's Day by a public dinner and installation. There was a good attendance of members and friends, a nice dinner, and everything passed off satisfactorily. The following are the officer elected and installed for the ensuing year: W. M., Jas. Howe; S. W., Len. McGlasson; J. W., Mike Rouse; Secy., Butler Carpenter; Treas., Wood Carpenter; S. D., Alex Marry; J. D., George Brown; Tyler, Asa Meachem.

Venus Lodge I. O. O. F. elected the following officers at their last meeting: N. G., J. R. Clatterbuck; V. G., Geo. G. Hoover; Secy. G., H. A. Cantler; Treas. G., Richard Blankenbeker. There will be a public installation of the officers elect at the Christian Church on Saturday next at 2 p. m. Rev. W. S. Keene will deliver an address—subject Odd Fellowship. The public is invited.

THE SUN.
1877. NEW YORK. 1877.
The different editions of THE SUN during the next year will be the same as during the year that has just passed. The daily edition will on week days be a sheet of four pages, and on Sundays a sheet of eight pages, or 56 broad columns; while the weekly edition will be a sheet of eight pages, of the same dimensions and character that are already familiar to our friends.
THE SUN will continue to be the strenuous advocate of reform and retrenchment, and of the substitution of statesmanship, wisdom and integrity for hollow pretence, imbecility and fraud in the administration of public affairs. It will contend for the government of the people by the people and for the people, as opposed to government by frauds in the ballot-box and in the counting of votes enforced by military violence. It will endeavor to supply its readers—a body now not far from a million of souls—with the most careful, complete and trustworthy accounts of current events, and will employ for this purpose a numerous and carefully selected staff of reporters and correspondents. Its reports from Washington, especially, will be full, accurate and fearless; and it will doubtless continue to deserve and enjoy the hatred of those who thrive by plundering the Treasury or by usurping what the law does not give them, while it will endeavor to merit the confidence of the public by defending the rights of the people against the encroachments of unjustified power.
The price of the daily SUN will be 55 cents a month or $6 50 a year, post paid, or with the Sunday edition $7 70 a year.
The SUNDAY edition alone, eight pages, $1 20 a year, post paid.
The WEEKLY SUN, eight pages of 56 broad columns, will be furnished during 1877 at the rate of $1 a year, post paid.
The benefit of this large reduction from the previous rate for the WEEKLY can be enjoyed by individual subscribers, without the necessity of making up clubs. At the same time, if any of our friends choose to aid in extending our circulation, we shall be grateful to them, and to every person who sends us ten or more subscribers from one place will be entitled to one copy of the paper for himself without charge. At one dollar a year, postage paid, the expenses of paper and printing are barely repaid; and, considering the size of the sheet and the quality of its contents, we are confident the people will consider THE WEEKLY SUN the cheapest newspaper published in the world, and we trust also one of the very best. OUR first visitor Monday morning didn't say "happy New Year," but threatened to put a head on us if we don't put a knob on our door. He sat down and commenced whetting his Billy Barlow on his boot. Our hair commenced getting upon end and thoughts of the past flashed rapidly across our frightened brain. He run his head down into his pocket—we breathed quickly and short—he drew a pistol—no—a pocket-book, and what next?—subscribed for the RECORDER. Our hair went down al right; we still live; we stood our ground bravely and would like to have repeated such an encounter.

THE WEBSTER TRIAL.

Special Term of the Criminal Court—A Two Days' Trial—The Testimony in Full—A Verdict of Not Guilty.

Criminal Court convened again Thursday at 1 p. m., and the Sheriff having summoned a venire of fifty men, the work of impaneling the jury commenced. Out of thirty-six examined, the following twelve were accepted and sworn as jurors for the trial:

W. T. Aylor,	Joel Brown,
John L. Bruce,	Cy Bruce,
Cy Cowen,	J. M. Cloud,
Noah Clore,	G. T. Gaines,
M. Rich,	H. W. Riley,
W. S. White,	Richard White.

The attorney for the Commonwealth read the indictment to the jury, and the defense entered the plea of not guilty. The witnesses for the Commonwealth were called and sworn, and the hearing of the testimony on behalf of the State was commenced.

J. H. BRETT,

The first witness put on the stand, testified that he knew Webster while he (Brett) lived in Walton; knew Alexander Milliner same length of time; knew that Milliner was shot but didn't know who by; first I saw of Milliner after being shot, met him coming in the door of the bar-room at the Snow House in Walton; Milliner had his arm on my shoulder and said "Joe," saw the blood running; laid Milliner down on the floor; think he was dead by the time I had laid him down; examined his body; saw a wound on his left side; the ball passed through the fleshy part of the arm into, but not through, the body; Milliner lived not to exceed five minutes after he was shot; Milliner had been in Walton an hour or more before the shooting; had seen Webster there also; didn't know where Webster had been the short time I saw him; left him leave on the 'bus, and thought that he drove the 'bus away, but was not certain; Webster was on the right side to drive; saw no pistol and heard no quarreling before the shooting; the 'bus was just starting when Milliner came in the door; don't remember who was present, except Joe Arnold, when I laid Milliner on the floor; couldn't say what month it was, nor what day of the month, but it was in the warm weather in 1875; the 'bus had been standing before the bar-room door some time when the shooting was done; thought Mr. Wm. Wake was on the 'bus when it was driven away; thought I saw Geo. Burgis in the 'bus; Milliner's body was kept at the hotel till next day.

Cross-examined—I was bar-keeper at the Snow House, in Walton, for Mr. Thos. Berry; couldn't say where Milliner came from when shot; about five minutes before, saw Milliner standing beside the 'bus, with one foot on the step; Webster was driving the 'bus; can't say that Webster was on the 'bus at the time; Milliner came to Walton on the noon train; never heard Milliner mention Webster's name at all.

Re-examined by Commonwealth—The shooting was done after dinner; saw Milliner talking to Mr. Burgis in the 'bus; his left side was toward the 'bus and his back toward the hotel; the horses in the 'bus were headed toward Williamstown; couldn't say which way the ball ranged; couldn't mention anything that passed between Burgis and Milliner, but was satisfied that Milliner was talking to Burgis in the 'bus.

WM. WAKE

Had seen Milliner once or twice; knew Webster; was present when Milliner was shot; was sitting on the back at the time (here the 'bus was proven a hack); before the shooting saw Milliner and Burgis standing up the street talking; Webster called to Burgis to come on, it was time to go; Burgis came; Milliner came down the sidewalk behind Burgis; Burgis got in the hack; Webster picked up the whip and lines; Milliner was coming toward the hack, and Webster stepped around in front of me and fired his pistol; didn't see the pistol; couldn't see where Milliner stopped when he stepped off the sidewalk coming toward the hack; had heard no conversation between Milliner and Webster; Webster threw the pistol under an oilcloth and didn't take it out till he got to Crittenden; witness didn't know Milliner was shot till a boy told him; saw nothing of Milliner after the shot was fired; Burgis had just got in the hack; one other person was on the seat with witness and Webster; didn't know who he was; witness was sitting between Webster and the stranger; Webster had the lines when the shot was fired; Milliner came down the street with his left side toward the hack; Webster went to Williamstown that evening; saw nothing of him after supper till a couple of weeks ago; once on the way to Williamstown Burgis told Webster not to drive so fast.

Cross-examined—Milliner followed Burgis to the hack; Milliner came down the sidewalk till he turned and came square toward the hack; don't remember the position of Milliner's hands.

THOMAS BERRY

Was acquainted with Milliner; was in Walton the day Milliner was killed; Milliner and I came from Cincinnati on the 4 p. m. train that day; saw Milliner and Geo. Burgis in conversation near the Postoffice; witness went up stairs in the Snow House and looked out the window; saw Milliner standing with his left foot on the step of the hack in front of the hotel; heard report of the pistol; saw Milliner turn round and the blood gush out of his mouth; saw pistol in Webster's hand; didn't know how long Webster had been in Walton; witness and Milliner had been there about three-quarters of an hour; didn't see Webster and Milliner together; Webster was in the bar-room when Burgis and Milliner met; when witness came down stairs Brett was laying Milliner down on the floor; did not hear Milliner speak after he was shot; don't think he lived a minute; saw the smoke from the pistol; thought there were one or two men between Milliner and Webster when Webster drew back with pistol in hand; the hack went out of town pretty lively after the shooting; Webster had been in Walton nearly every day for two or three months, except for two weeks previous to the shooting, during which time the hack had been stopped; think pursuit after Webster was commenced just before dark; the shooting took place about 4 p. m.; it was about the 1st of July or last of June, 1876.

G. W. HOLDER

Was not personally acquainted with Milliner; was in Walton the day Milliner was shot; didn't see shooting; was on the street and heard the report of the pistol; looked around and saw Milliner stagger and go toward the bar-room; saw Webster with pistol in hand facing toward Milliner; can't say which hand the pistol was in; saw Webster leaning forward with pistol pointed; Milliner looked like he was standing with face toward the door of the hack; Webster was standing on the front part of the hack; Webster left on the hack after the shooting; did not examine the wound or see it done by anyone; the shooting was in the summer of '75; can't say how long I have known Webster; the first time I saw him after the shooting he was under arrest at Sparta; don't know where he was in the meantime; he was the last man I saw have hold of the lines on the hack when it left Walton; the hack went out at a good rate of speed.

Cross-examined—I was about twenty steps from the hack when the shooting was done; couldn't see which way Milliner wheeled after being shot; the first I saw of Webster he was standing in shooting position with pistol in hand; had not noticed either him or Milliner before that.

MASON SUNGATE

Knew Milliner and Webster; was at Walton when Milliner was shot; got off the train there; Webster came to Walton on the hack that morning; saw Milliner and Burgis talking near the Postoffice; at that time the hack was standing in front of the Snow House; Burgis came and got in; Milliner followed him; heard a pistol snap; saw Milliner look up; about that time the pistol went off; Webster was on top of the hack and Milliner's left side toward him; saw the pistol; but one shot was fired; the horses started; didn't know what became of the pistol; when Milliner wheeled around, his back was toward Webster; didn't know whether or not the pistol snapped but once; Milliner was on the pavement when he saw the blood fly from his mouth; saw no motion nor heard no conversation between Milliner and Webster.

Cross-examined—Didn't see Milliner and Burgis start from the Postoffice; was looking toward the hack and leaning against the porch post; saw Burgis just before he got in the hack; Milliner walked up to the hack just after Burgis got in; couldn't say that he noticed Milliner's right hand; Milliner had been standing by the hack maybe a minute, or probably two seconds; Burgis was sitting on the front seat, and on the end next to Milliner; was some ten feet from the sidewalk to the hack; I could not see the eyes, nose or mouth of Milliner.

THOMAS BERRY RECALLED.

I was one of the Coroner's jury; examined Milliner, and found no arms, not even a pocket-knife; the inquest was held in about fifteen minutes after the shooting was done; I stood by the side of Milliner during the fifteen minutes; Brett had laid Milliner down and was just taking his hands off of him when I came in the room; I was not a particle excited; had seen men killed before.

J. H. BRETT RECALLED.

Saw Milliner's body examined about fifteen or twenty minutes, minutes after the shooting; was in the bar-room all the time; saw no arms; couldn't say how many men there were in the bar-room, but there were a good many.

S. S. EDWARDS

Knew Milliner and Webster; saw Burgis and Milliner come from the Postoffice toward the hack; Milliner came to the back and was talking to someone in the back; heard the report of the pistol, and saw Milliner going back and the blood gushing out of his mouth; saw Milliner going toward the bar-room door; Webster got up to the hack when the shot was fired; heard Milliner's voice talking to the person in the hack; was sitting on my horse in rear of the hack waiting to get to speak to Milliner on business; when Milliner turned, he turned his face toward the rear of the hack; couldn't say who drove the hack away; knew Milliner was shot and went up to Conwyer's for a doctor.

Cross-examined—The back was about 15 inches from the sidewalk; Milliner was standing against and looking right in the hack; my horse was in the street with his head about even with the hack; couldn't say that any part of the hack was between me and Milliner; don't know which way Milliner's eyes were turned.

G. H. KENKLE

Knew Milliner and Webster; saw the latter the evening before Milliner was killed; I keep a gun-shop in Williamstown; Webster came to my shop and wanted a pistol put on shooting order; said Burgis would pay for it; the pistol carried a good-sized ball; Webster took the pistol away with him; heard that Milliner was shot next day.

H. HAYES

Knew Milliner and Webster; was living in Williamstown when Milliner was killed; I think Milliner's home at the time of the killing was in Cincinnati; think Webster lived near Williamstown; heard of the killing that night after it was done; saw Webster in Williamstown that evening; do not know where he went that evening; never saw him after that till he was arrested; don't know whether or not he was in the county during the year following the shooting; never saw anybody hunting him.

JOSEPH CLUBE

Knew Webster and Milliner; I live on the pike between Crittenden and Williamstown; the evening of the shooting, saw someone riding on the hind part of the hack, and took it to be Webster; couldn't say positive that I saw Webster that day, unless it was him riding on the hind part of the hack.

This closed the evidence on behalf of the Commonwealth. The Sheriff was sworn and took charge of the jury. Court then adjourned till 9 a. m. Friday.

FRIDAY.

Court met at 9.30 a. m.

The witnesses for the defense were called and sworn. The first witness put on the stand was

GEORGE BURGIS.

I reside in Williamstown, Grant County; knew Milliner and Webster; was in company with them in Walton in 1875, about July 1; left Williamstown late that morning in company with Webster, Wm. Wake and two or three others in my hack; the witness described the hack as an ordinary one, with one seat behind and one before, a door with glass lights on each side, the drivers seat on the outside; some baggage was strapped on the rumble; three could sit on the seat; for the driver there was a foot support about 1½ feet wide; they arrived at Walton about 10 or 11 o'clock a. m.; did not see Milliner when he got to Walton; thought he arrived on the 4 p. m. train; didn't see him till the train arrived; saw Milliner at the hotel; when the train arrived Webster was at the depot with the hack; first saw Milliner about half way between the depot and hotel, carrying a basket; Webster was then at the depot; think Tom Berry was just behind Milliner; Milliner came in the bar-room where I was, took a drink, and asked me to take a drink; I refused; Milliner and I came out and had a conversation near the Postoffice; think the hack had driven up to the hotel; Webster was driving one of his own horses and one of mine; the Postoffice is about 200 or 300 feet south of the hotel; the sidewalk in front of the hotel is tolerably wide, and is made of stone; the porch extends over a part of it; think there was a curbing outside the sidewalk; the hack was not more than 3 or 4 feet from the curbing; four persons, all strangers, were in the hack; Mr. Wake and an old gentleman, also a stranger, was on top with Webster, who was on the west end of the seat; think he was standing on the sidewalk during my talk with Milliner at the Postoffice; think the conversation lasted 15 or 20 minutes, after which I got in the hack with Webster, who was driving; took the whip and lines in hand; he was on the far end of the seat from the hotel; I had to step a step or so from the sidewalk to get in the hack; I sat on the front seat, back toward the horses; was on the end of the seat next the hotel; could see through the window on the right; there was a window in the back and front of the hack; did not see Milliner after getting in the hack till seated; Milliner was three or four steps from the hack when first noticed; think he walked down toward the hind end of the hack, halted, turned round and came back toward the hack; don't remember seeing Tungate; my best recollection is, Milliner didn't get to the hack; saw no one at the rear end of the hack on horseback; Milliner, when approaching the hack, faced and looked toward Webster; could see his face plain; was looking through the front window next the hotel; Milliner came in direction of hack; was near the hack—within 3 feet, or nearer; before Milliner turned toward the hack, he had his right hand in his pocket; think his left hand was hanging loose; when he walked to the hack he didn't much more than make a halt; think he was looking toward the front seat—his eyes were looking that way; he was advancing that way; didn't notice any change in his countenance; had had various conversations with Milliner in regard to Webster; Milliner had my bar-room rented; had heard Milliner say he would rather shoot the d—d s—n of a b—h (Webster) than to shoot a mad dog, and that he would do it; I heard him say that at my home, on the porch, but two or three nights before the killing; Milliner's neighbors and acquaintances considered him a very dangerous and rough man; he must have weighed 200 pounds; was a heavy set, muscular man; his general character was bad as to peace and quiet; during the conversation with Milliner at the Postoffice, he saw Webster standing against a post at the hotel, and remarked, "I ought to kill the d—d s—n of a b—h now;" that was about five minutes before the shooting; told Webster about the threats made before; told him to watch Milliner—that he had said he was going to kill him on sight; this was two or three days before the shooting.

Cross-examined—In a conversation on the porch at my house one night, Milliner said someone had shot at him that night on the pike, and that he thought it was Webster did it; gave no reason for thinking so; had heard a quarrel between them; Webster and Milliner once had a fuss in Milliner's bar-room, because Webster refused to pay for a game of billiards in advance; Milliner drew a pistol on him; he drew no pistol; two or three days before the shooting, Milliner said he intended to kill Webster on sight; I told Webster of the threat next day; told him about the shooting; said nothing to him about Milliner the day of the shooting; the hack was at the station when I first saw Milliner; think Milliner was sober; during the Postoffice conversation Webster was 20 or 30 feet from us; can't say that Milliner was excited; the only remark he made about Webster during the conversation was, "I ought to kill the d—d s—n of a b—h now;" he talked a little bit louder than before; Wake and the stranger were nearer Milliner than Webster was; the top of the hack is two or three feet higher than a man's head; didn't see Milliner and Webster meet; when Milliner stepped up to the hack he spoke to someone, I didn't know who; don't think Milliner even touched the hack; think it was three or four feet from the hack to the back when the shot was fired; Webster drove the hack away after the shooting; after the shot was fired, Milliner walked toward the hotel; saw him spit blood; Webster drove the hack to Williamstown; he staid in town over two days; the killing was talked of on the street immediately after the hack got there; he left town that night; saw him no more for one year; understood attempts were being made to arrest him; saw the Deputy Sheriff go out and come back; Milliner's threats were communicated to Webster when no one was present.

JAMES T. WILLIS.

I reside in Williamstown, Grant County; am Clerk of the Grant County Circuit Court; went to Cincinnati the day of the killing of Milliner; got on the 8 a. m. train at Walton; Milliner and Tom Berry were on the train; had a conversation with Milliner; rode part of the way in Milliner's lap; going down we were talking about Milliner's being shot at the Sunday night before; Milliner said Webster had shot at him, and that he intended to kill the d—d s—n of a b—h; Milliner returned on the train that afternoon; made the same threats coming back; didn't see the shooting; was at home the night Milliner said he was shot at; am not positive that it was Milliner that night; Milliner was a very stout man; I had known him several years; he had had several difficulties about Williamstown; never heard Milliner's character discussed; heard him speak of killing Webster also while in Cincinnati that day.

Cross-examined—Don't know how the conversation commenced; think I was questioning Milliner about having been shot at; he said Webster did the shooting, and that he intended to kill him; Milliner wanted to borrow a pistol from me while in Cincinnati, and again coming out on the train; I told him I had no pistol; he then searched me for one; talked about other things during the trip; don't think I saw Webster at all; didn't go back home with Burgis and others; left Walton before the shooting; Milliner said Webster had been hired to shoot him; he had an account against George Burgis; it was a very long one; said Burgis would not settle with him; that Burgis was afraid of him, and had hired Press Webster to kill him; don't remember that he said anything about apprehending any future attack from Webster.

WM. HAYES

Knew Milliner and Webster; knew Milliner about four years; had heard some say that Milliner was fussy, and some that he was a clever fellow.

Cross-examined—Milliner complained of being crippled part of the time; know that he was crippled in one of his arms from being killed; it was a year before he was killed; he was wounded in the arm at Williamstown; he was a plasterer; don't know that he did any work in 1876.

WM. WAKE.

Saw Milliner and Burgis talking near the Postoffice; Milliner followed Burgis down the sidewalk with his right hand in his pocket; he went down opposite the hack and turned off toward the hack; couldn't see him after he turned off; Webster's back and side were rather toward Milliner; never spoke to Milliner in my life.

JOHN THOMPSON.

I live five miles above Williamstown; knew Milliner and Webster; didn't see the killing; in a conversation with Milliner six or seven miles above Williamstown, he said Webster had tried to kill him with a knife once in a bar-room, and that he intended to kill the d—d s—n of a b—h if he got his eyes on him; this was in the forenoon of the day he was shot at; his reputation for peace and quiet was bad; heard come say he was dangerous; some said they would not be afraid of him; he would weigh 200 or 210 pounds; don't know much about a pot-gutted man; considered Milliner tolerably fleshy.

Cross-examined—Milliner said he believed Webster wanted to kill him, and he was not going to give him the advantage; was told about Milliner's being on the Sunday night Monday morning on the railroad; in conversation between myself, Fite and Milliner, Fite asked Milliner if he was not afraid to come up in that part of the country on account of the indictments against him; he said Webster was all that he was afraid of; no one was present when I communicated the threats to Webster; told him about four miles above Williamstown; the evening of the killing, rode part of the way to Williamstown on the hind part of the hack.

WM. WAKE RECALLED.

Webster drove the hack from Walton to Williamstown the afternoon of the killing; he sat upon the seat; Mr. Thompson got on the hind part of the hack at Crittenden.

ALFRED FOWELL

Lives in Grant County, about 8 miles above Williamstown; knew Milliner and Webster about six years, generally saw them once or twice a week; Milliner's reputation for peace and quiet with some was bad; most of the people talked about his fighting and shooting; he was a very stout man; never saw anything that indicated he was a cripple; had heard him make threats against Webster, he and Webster fell out at my house; he ordered Webster out of the house; the latter said he didn't like to go out, and if he had done anything wrong he asked pardon; Milliner said he would give him half a minute to get out, and drew a pistol on him; Webster went out; this was about two months before the shooting.

JOHN KITE.

I live near Big Bone Springs; lived there in 1875; in '73 or 4 lived two or three miles east of Williamstown; knew Webster and Milliner; met them frequently; heard Milliner make threats against the defendant one morning in a stable; said the defendant had annoyed him and he would kill him; one morning the defendant had taken down some gear, and Milliner, in talking about it, said he would kill him; the stable belonged to Burgis, and was next door to Milliner's barroom; Milliner's reputation for peace and quiet was bad, and he was regarded as a dangerous man.

Cross-examined—Had heard Milliner make the threats against the defendant, the hostler and others about the stable.

THOS. BERRY RECALLED.

When the shot was fired, or just before, I thought Milliner was going to get in the hack; he put his left foot on the step; didn't notice the position of his hands; this was about one minute after I had gone in the house; had had time to walk up stairs, which was seven or eight steps; heard Milliner say someone had shot at him on the Sunday night before, and that he had been told it was defendant, and that he intended to kill him; saw defendant at the station; in conversation about defendant, Milliner said he was going to get a navy.

This closed the testimony in the case, and court adjourned for dinner, during which time the instructions were prepared.

Webster is 26 years of age, about 5 feet 7 or 8 inches high, dark complected, with dark hair and black eyes, mustache and chin whiskers, and would weigh about 125 pounds.

The entire afternoon was consumed in arguing the case—John Conn, of Grant, and Judge P. U. Major for the defence, and Col. Warren Monfort for the Commonwealth. The jury went to their room after supper, and, after about an hour and a half's deliberation, brought in a verdict of not guilty. signed H. W. Riley, foreman.

THE OLD LOG HOUSE.

There's an old log house on my father's farm,
All silent, and lonely, and still;
Not a sound of mirth is ever heard now
In the old log house on the hill.

But fondly I think of the bygone days,
Where, with brothers and sisters dear,
Not a happier home in the country around,
Could be found either far or near.

But my father builded another house,
And my brothers are gone afar;
And the log house is deserted now,
And defaced with many a scar.

The rabbit and squirrel play hide-and-seek
With mice o'er the oaken floor;
But they quickly beat a hasty retreat
When the owl flies in at the door.

The "twittering swallow," now builds its nest
On the rafters going to decay;
And the robin and sparrow have made their
On the logs for many a day. [house

The little room where my brother and I
Oft listened to the weird whip-poor-will,
Is open now to the birds and bats,
And they come there without fear or ill.

But poor-will is missed from his nightly seat
On the apple tree near the door—
For there's no one there to answer him back,
As we've done a thousand times o'er.

The primroses blown uncared-for now,
And the "blue-eyed violets blow;
And the cottage-rose that my sister loved
Climbs in at the casement low,

As if it would ask, "Where are they all gone
That used once to caress and to love
Us poor flowers, neglected now
In the rank weeds that o'er us rove?"

But the friendly vine, on the old black logs,
Still clings there, loving and true,
As if it would hide the marks of decay
From the passing traveler's view.

Oh, my heart still clings to the dear old home,
And the times of my childhood there;
And I'd rather live o'er those blessed days
Than to dwell in a palace fair.

Interesting to Freemasons.

Some time since the Chicago Democrat denounced Edmond Roynane, the Masonic expose lecturer, as an impostor. Armed with a big record book, Roynane went to the Democrat office, and the following conversation ensued:

"Is the editor of the Democrat in?"

"Yes, sir. Be seated. I am the person you seek."

"My name is Edmond Roynane. I am a Mason. Your paper says that I am not. Here is the proof that I am. In this book."

"Yes, I see the name here, but are you the person named?"

"Yes, sir—the very same."

"Are you a Mason?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where were you made a Mason?"

"In the city of Chicago."

"And your name is Edmond Roynane?"

"Yes, sir."

"The person named in this book of record?"

"Yes, sir."

"You are a liar!"

"A what?"

"A deliberate liar. Ladies (there were a few lady callers in the sanctum at the time), permit me to introduce you to Edmond Roynane, a deliberate liar. Look on him to know how a liar looks, a thief and a swindler."

"How dare you call me a liar in the presence of ladies?"

"Because you are one in the presence of God."

"I am not a liar."

"Then you are not a Mason."

"Yes I be—a Mason."

"Then you are a liar."

"I am a liar anyway, am I?"

"Yes, a deliberate liar."

"How so?"

"If you are not a Mason, you are a liar when you say that you are. If you are a Mason, then you are a liar when you go about the country telling what you promised, on your honor as a man, never to reveal, and never to tell a person you did not know to be a Mason. You are a liar in either case. If you are not a Mason you are a thief, because you obtain money from dupes when you promise to reveal to them the secrets of Masonry. If you are a man trusted with secrets, under voluntary obligations on your part, uttered in the presence of witnesses, pledged by your belief in God, then you are a liar and a thief in stealing these secrets and selling them."

"I am not used to being called a liar in the presence of ladies."

"I beg the pardon of the ladies for this seeming vulgarity, but in the presence of truth, virtue and goodness, a liar is still a liar, and stands rooted to the floor, powerless to resent that which, to an honest man, would be an insult."

"But I am a Mason."

"You are not a Mason, for a Mason never gives away or sells his secret or the secret of his brothers. You may deceive those who are not wise and who wish to be gulled, but you can not deceive me. If you will lie about one thing you will lie about another. There is the door. A liar will steal. Get out of here instantly, and never pollute the place with your dirty, lying presence again. Ladies, I beg your pardon for such language—it is the only kind I have for liars, thieves and swindlers like the coward and craven wretch who will, by the porter, be kicked into the street if he does not go there at once of his own accord."—Chicago Democrat.

Great Prices for Pictures.

More valuable works of art and elegance have been offered at auction in New York within the last three months than have ever before been so exposed for sale in the same time in America.

Of all these sales, that of the Johnston collection of paintings, now in progress, is the most remarkable, both for the quality of the pictures and their intrinsic value. It is indeed the most important sale of a private collection of works of art we have ever had. The prices so far obtained have been on the average fully up to the value of the pictures, and in some cases beyond it. The sales began on Tuesday evening, when one-third of the paintings were disposed of for the extraordinary sum of over $138,000. Among those thus sold were included the most expensive works of the collection, but the sum obtained for the whole will easily put this sale ahead of any of the sort on this side of the Alantic, and make it compare favorably with the the greatest picture auctions of London and Paris.

The price of pictures during the last fifteen or twenty years has appreciated enormously. They have come to be worth not only their weight in gold, but almost in rubies. The growth of wealth among the great manufacturers of England, and their ambition to possess pictures once confined to the nobility, and simultaneous spread of the same ambition and a like taste among the rich men of this country, have tended to cause this advance in the price of pictures of approved merit, or by famous painters. So large are the present value of such paintings that they are beyond the reach of everybody except the wealthiest. Of our picture buyers, Mr. Johnston has been among the most liberal and public spirited, and that he has selected his gallery with discretion is shown by the avidity with which his pictures are sought now that he is forced to sell them, and by the high prices they bring.

Of the pictures sold on the first night of the auction, those who obtained highest prices were Turner's "Slave Ship," which brought $10,000; Meissonier's "Soldiers at Cards," a painting of only about six by nine inches, which was run up to $11,500; Muller's "Roll Call of the Last Victims During the Reign of Terror of the French Revolution," which fetched $8,200; a little landscape by Diaz, without a figure in it, and only about nine inches square, which brought $2,650; and Madrazo's "Interior of Santa Maria," which was captured, after spirited competition, at $4,600. Many others were disposed of at prices of $1,000 and over.

The pictures, as a rule, were, as pictures now go, worth about what was paid for them. Experience shows that paintings bought with skill and discrimination, are a good investment for those who have the money to spare to put in them. Great as the prices obtained for the celebrated works we have named were, it is probable that their purchasers will ten years from now be able to get still more for them. It is hard for a person not accustomed to estimate the values of paintings to understand how a little canvas by Meissonier, which you might cover with your hand, and about which there is no element of sentiment or poetry, which does not stimulate the imagination or satisfy the fancy, and whose merits are solely in the great technical skill of the artist, in which point he stands at the head of living painters—it is hard to see why such a picture should be worth over $11,000. The reason of its salable value, however, is that there is but one Meissonier, and the number of the products of his easel is of course limited. The late Mr. A. T. Stewart paid $60,000 for a Meissonier, and all this artist's pictures readily command proportionate prices.

Turner's picture is the very opposite of the Meissonier. It is so subtle in in its sentiment, and so bizarre in its color and treatment that nine observers out ot ten would pass it by as a mere blotch of paint. Not many years ago, a rich man of New York ordered one of Turner's paintings, and paid a great price for it. When he received the canvas from the ship, it looked to his eye so spotted and confused in color that he concluded the picture had been damaged by salt water, and was much alarmed. He found out afterward, however, that it was just as Turner had painted it, and that his taste for that sort of art needed cultivation—or, rather, that he needed to get up on Turner's own level to see things as the artist did. Turner was a great painter, but his works do not appeal to the ordinary taste and interest.

We are glad Mr. Johnston's collection is bringing such prices. He was always liberal in opening his gallery to visitors, even to the inconvenience of his household, and has been an honest lover of art for its own sake.—N.Y. Sun.

GIRLS, don't devote all your thoughts to fashion; exchange your silks and satins for lawns and calicoes; shut up the piano and dive into a washtub; throw away your fancy needle work and tackle a red-hot stove in the kitchen. Instead of receiving Brown, the banker's son, in the parlor, look out for Bill Burns, the blacksmith's son, as he goes home from work; kiss his dirty face through a broken pane of glass awhile; when he learns his trade and you know your business, get married, go to housekeeping by yourselves, help each other, live happy, raise a family that will be an honor to your names and credit to themselves, die happy, and the angels will not turn their backs upon you up there.

An Idle Word.

How inadvertently spoken, and yet how frequently with serious and painful results? How many hearts has an idle word severed—how many broken? For true is it that a thoughtless expression will make a breach between those that fate, in its visitation, could not divide; hearts that would have struggled together through the storms of life, that would have clung to each other for strength when its buffetings had almost overwhelmed them—that would have braved all the changes of fluctuating fortunes, and still see in their own unchanging love a gleam of brightness through the blackest cloud. And yet an idle word—one—has separated hearts like these. The breach once made, others step in to make it wider and wider; false pride, mistaken feelings, the sudden bitterness the heart can feel even toward those it loves, all aid the work of cruelty; the distance increases day by day, until, finding it impossible to return, like the wrecked mariner, they give up in despair and sit down to mourn over their fate, careless, it seems, whether they live or die. And this is not the romance of youthful affection, though there is perhaps more suffering from the early disappointments of the heart than the more serious ones of after life produce. No, it is witnessed in the experience of everyone; in the friendships of life, in the family circles, in business; what misunderstandings, what ruptures, what bickerings, strife and irreconcilable differences have arisen from one idle word. It may have been spoken in jest, in a spirit of levity, in an attempt to be witty, or it may have been said innocently or inadvertently, with no motive or intent, and still, for some cause of which you were totally ignorant, a certain party applied the remark, and in a moment a firebrand was kindled. Jokes are dangerous articles to play with; they are a sort of month grenades that are apt to explode before you are aware of it. A joker should understand their nature, and the nature of his company, well before he introduces them. He may suppose they will recommend him to favor, but he is frequently mistaken. The man who labors to be witty loses his breath and is considered to have rather a weak mind. Never was there a truer sentence written, and one which, view it in every way, must result in the same conclusion, that "A silent tongue showeth a wise head."

BOWLING GREEN PANTAGRAPH: Near fourteen miles, on almost a direct line southeast from this place, there is a singular and mysterious pit in the ground. It is situated on a high bluff, in a wild, flinty locality, tangled with vine, bramble, briers, bushes, trees and shrubbery, on the waters of Drake's Creek, below the mouth of Trammel. The aperture is a dark, gaping hole, cleft through the stony crags as though the bluff had at some time cracked and split. The opening is some ten feet long and four feet wide at the widest part, its rocky, yawning lips being spread something in the shape of a horse-collar, the apex, so to speak, pointing westward. By some of the people in that region it is known as "Hell Hole," while others call it "Indian Pit." One remarkable feature of the abyss is that there issues from its deep depths, ceaseless as the rounds of the seasons, a volume of misty vapor, which, especially on crisp, frost mornings, can be seen ascending above the tree tops and floating off on the air, whitened with rays of the rising sun. Flint, boulder-shaped stones, and others worn by the friction of time to perfect roundness, are scattered profusely all about the place, as though thrown high by some unknown upheaval and showered back like rattling hailstones of all sizes and dimensions. In the fall and winter this fog volume is warmer than the cutting blasts that sweep along the deep gorge. In summer the mist is cooler and not so dense. The pit widens from the top in its downward course, and woe to any living thing once swallowed through its dark mouth. Throw a boulder or stone into it, and not the faintest echo ever reaches the ear as to whither it went. Some seasons since a party of persons assembled at the pit, determined to fathom its hidden bottom. They were provided with a strong cord over six hundred feet long, to which was tied a steelyard-weight. They dropped the weight into the hole and paid out the line. Down, down and down went the line till not a foot of cord was left, while not a sound came to tell the tale of its subterranean passage. No bottom was reached, and the weight was withdrawn damp and unsoiled, as though it touched nothing but mist and darkness on its soundings.

Slade, the Spiritual Medium.

"Dr." Slade is a man who claims to have communication with one section or other of the other world. He holds a slate under the table and says the spirits write communications on it. Well, there never was any doubt that something or somebody wrote on the slate, for the writing was there. Americans seemed to take it for granted that Slade told the truth, or else didn't care whether he did or not. Slade, however, went to London, some time since, and there he found a different kind of people. They didn't believe a word he said, and finally caught him, they alleged, in writing the communications himself. The result was that Slade was arrested for vagrancy, convicted and sentenced to three months' imprisonment. The head of old England seems to be pretty level.—Western Rural.

THE CLOSING YEAR.

The following lines, by the late GEO. D. PRENTICE, of Louisville, have been published and read and admired wherever the English language is spoken. Had he written nothing else, this production alone would have secured him a high place among the first of living poets. In sublimity of thought and beauty of expression, it stands almost without a rival. The length of time it has been out of print, and its appropriateness to the occasion—the recent close of the Centennial year—induces us to present it to our readers.

'Tis midnight's holy hour, and silence now
Is brooding like a gentle Spirit o'er
The still and pulseless world. Hark! on the winds
The bell's deep tones are swelling—'tis the knell
Of the departed year. No funeral train
Is sweeping past, yet, on the stream and wood,
With melancholy light, the moonbeams rest
Like a pale, spotless shroud; the air is stirred
As by a mourner's sigh; and on you cloud
That floats so still and placidly thro' heaven,
The Spirits of the Seasons seem to stand—
Young Spring, bright Summer, Autumn's solemn form,
And Winter with his aged locks—and breathe
In mournful cadences, that come abroad
Like the far wind-harp's wild and touching wail,
A melancholy dirge o'er the dead year,
Gone from the Earth forever.

'Tis a time
For memory and for tears. Within the deep
Still chambers of the heart, a specter dim,
Whose tones are like the wizard-voice of Time
Heard from the Rock of Ages, points its cold
And solemn finger to the beautiful
And holy visions that have passed away,
And left no shadow of their loveliness
On the dead waste of life. The specter lifts
The coffin-lid of Hope, and Joy, and Love,
And, bending mournfully above the pale,
Sweet forms that slumber there, scatters dead flowers
O'er what has passed to nothingness. The year
Has gone, and with it many a glorious throng
Of happy dreams. Its mark is on each brow,
Its shadow in each heart. In its swift course
It waved its scepter o'er the beautiful,
And they are not. It laid its pallid hand
Upon the strong man—and the haughty form
Is fallen; and the flashing eye is dim.
It trod the hall of revelry, where thronged
The bright and joyous—and the tearful wail
Of stricken ones is heard, where erst the song
And reckless shout resounded. It passed o'er
The battle-plain, where sword and spear and shield
Flashed in the light of mid-day—and the strength
Of serried hosts is shivered, and the grass,
Green from the soil of carnage, waves above
The crushed and moldering skeleton. It came
And faded like a wreath of mist at eve;
Yet, ere it melted in the viewless air,
It heralded its millions to their home
In the dim land of dreams.

Remorseless Time—
Fierce Spirit of the Glass and Scythe—what power
Can stay him in his silent course, or melt
His iron heart to pity! On, still on,
He presses, and forever. The proud bird,
The condor of the Andes, that can soar
Thro' heaven's unfathomable depths, or brave
The fury of the Northern hurricane,
And bathe his plumage in the thunder's home,
Furls his broad wings at nightfall and sinks down
To rest upon his mountain crag. But Time
Knows not the weight of sleep or weariness,
And Night's deep darkness has no chain to bind
His rushing pinion. Revolutions sweep
O'er earth, like troubled visions o'er the breast
Of dreaming sorrow—cities rise and sink
Like bubbles on the water—fiery isles
Spring blazing from the ocean, and go back
To their mysterious caverns—mountains rear
To heaven their bald and blackened cliffs, and bow
Their tall heads to the plain—new Empires rise,
Gathering the strength of hoary centuries,
And rush down like the Alpine avalanche,
Startling the nations—and the very stars,
Yon bright and burning blazonry of God,
Glitter awhile in their eternal depths,
And, like the Pleiad, loveliest of their train,
Shoot from their glorious spheres and pass away.
To darkle in the trackless void. Yet Time,
Time, the Tomb-builder, holds his fierce career,
Dark, stern, all-pitiless, and pauses not,
Amid the mighty wrecks that strew his path,
To sit and muse, like other conquerors,
Upon the fearful ruin he has wrought.

Among Alligators.

The schooner Ann E. Carll, of Northport, has been reported wrecked on Larjo Key, south coast of Cuba. Capt. Tyler, her commander, has reached here. He says they were making a very quick passage, when a hurricane struck the vessel. She was driven at its mercy for four days, and on the fifth went ashore on this Key, a small, desolate sand island. Great numbers of alligators swarmed around during the first night, and came near devouring the crew, being kept off by a fire. The snapping of their huge jaws was heard on every side. The Key is about sixty miles from the main land, and out of the usual track of vessels. Soon after the Carll had thus been wrecked, her crew were the fortunate means of saving a Spanish and an English crew, whose vessels had gone to pieces, and Capt. Tyler, finding that he must divide his scanty store of provision with these brothers in misfortune—there being near thirty-five persons on the island—and that starvation must soon end them, sent his mate and one seaman in a boat to Cienfuegos, about 100 miles distant, with instructions to ask assistance. The Spanish Government, as soon as possible, sent a gunboat with provision for the relief of the shipwrecked crews, who were found in an almost famishing condition. Capt. Tyler shot with his rifle three alligators that were skinned and eaten.

WHY is the letter "s" like a lamb? Because it is the beginning of sheep.

The Vain Attempt of a Spiritualist to Raise the Dead in Iowa.

A horrible story is related by the Ida County (Ia.) Pioneer of an affair which occurred at the appropriately named village of Hell's Bend, in that county. About the middle of November Mr. Heycock was taken down with typhoid fever, and Dr. Rice, of Smithland, was summoned to render medical aid. The patient was getting along as well as could be expected under the circumstances, the patient being quite low before medical aid was received. One day a Spiritualist residing in that vicinity, Frank Biglow, called at the house of Mr. Heycock, won the confidence of the family, and boldly asserted that he could perfect a rapid cure upon Mr. Heycock through the medium of spiritualism, providing they would let him have his own way. After a short time of consideration, Mrs. Heycock informed Biglow that they were at his mercy. Biglow threw out all the medicine prepared by Dr. Rice, and sent the Doctor word not to make another visit. From this time no medicine was administered save Biglow's spiritual aid. He commenced talking and groaning to the patient, rubbing his brow, pulling his beard, &c. Mr. Heycock finally sank into a kind of stupor, and seemingly suffered less pain, which led the wife and Biglow to the belief that he was recovering. Visitors were finally forbid coming. In the course of a day or two a few of the citizens again went to the house and asked admission, which was granted. There, in bed, lay the dead body of Mr. Heycock, the eye-sockets already turning black. One of the visitors exclaimed, "He is dead!" Biglow said, "He is not dead, but sleepeth," at the same time endeavoring to blow out the light. The neighbors then suggested that the body be laid out for burial. Biglow objected, and said: "If my brother be dead, I can raise him to life again," and rising upon his feet, stretching out his arms over the corpse, and lifting his eyes toward heaven, he shouted at the top of his voice: "Come forth, my dear brother! Grave! give back thy dead!" He then kneeled over the dead body, saying, "Open thy eyes, my dear brother," at the same time pushing the eyelid open with his thumb (thinking no one saw him), and, with a feeling of satisfaction, he turned to the bystanders and yelled, "Praise the Lord." But, to his surprise, the "brother" did not rise worth a cent. The citizens again wanted possession of the body for interment, but the spiritual doctor stubbornly refused, saying, "I can raise thy brother at the end of the third day." Heavy blankets were then piled upon the corpse by Biglow to retain the animal heat. The doors were locked and no lights were used during three days, but what else transpired is not known. At the end of the third day Mrs. Heycock sent word to a few of the neighbors to come and bury the body. They came, and among them were the most stout and hardy men of the neighborhood, but they became faint and sickened upon entering the room, on account of the unendurable stench resulting from the decomposition of the body. They were compelled to bring ice from the river, which they placed around the body to freeze it, before they could arrange it in the coffin. Mr. Heycock was about 45 years of age, and was recently from Wisconsin. He was by faith an Adventist, and was highly respected by all his acquaintances. The whole neighborhood is filled with great indignation over the affair.

Now is the time to trot out paragraphs about remarkable winters—winters that have distinguished themselves by being either colder or warmer than the law allows. No well-regulated newspaper will neglect this duty. Referring back to our files, we find that in 1172 the temperature was so high that leaves came out on the trees in January and birds hatched their broods in February. In 1289 the weather was equally mild, and the maidens of Cologne wore wreaths of violets and corn-flowers at Christmas and Twelfth Day. In 1421 the trees flowered in the month of March, and the vines in the month of April. Cherries ripened in the same month of April. Peaches appeared in May, and the little boys commenced to fall out of apple trees a little later. In 1572 the trees were covered with leaves in January, and the birds hatched their young in February, as in 1172. In 1508 the same thing was reported, and it is added that the corn was in ear at Easter. To the best of our memory, there was in France neither snow nor frost throughout the winters of 1538, 1607, 1609, 1617, 1650; finally in 1662, even in the north of Germany, the stoves were not lighted, trees flowered in February, and out-door bouquets were showered on the newspaper offices without number. It seems but as yesterday. Coming to later dates, the winter of 1846-1847, when it thundered at Paris on the 28th of January, and that of 1866, the year of the inundation of the Seine, may be mentioned as very mild.

It is agonizing to see a young man escort your girl to the cars, carrying an umbrella which he borrowed from you the day before.

Bachelors.

Few conditions in life are free from trouble, with probably the single exception of being the husband of a cross wife. In that case you are only to do as you are told. But of all others, the most trying ordeal is that experienced by the cynjoyer of single blessedness. In the first place, he is acquainted with everbody's young and lovely wife. When she meets him in the stores, just because he has no one else to buy for, she wants him to buy her a new dress. If he doesn't buy it he is "stingy." If he does, he has the most brilliant prospect, at no distant day, of getting shot by her husband as a reward of merit.

Should he take a stroll with a neighbor's daughter, several of the young men of his neighborhood watch to waylay him, and all the other girls of his acquaintance are watching their opportunity to snub him. If he remains in the unpleasant enjoyment of his fate, all unite in saying he can not get anyone to have him, and if he marries, all the wicked men and bad boys of his neighborhood gather together to charivari him.

With the exception of the married man, there is no other being on earth more to be pitied. For our part, we have sympathized with him for a long time, but we can do nothing for him. His good nature, benevolent disposition, and religious awe of the girls and women, place him beyond the reach of any aid but his own.—Magazine.

THE experiments of two ingenious shoemakers are now exciting some attention among the curious, the result being the production of good leather from the skin of a human being, and the manufacture of a handsome pair of boots from it. The skin was taken from the heart, stomach and back of a man in a dissecting-room, who had died suddenly from accident, and upon whom decay had not yet begun to act. It was placed in a solution of hemlock and white oak barks, used in tanning, and in three weeks from the first steeping appeared as the upper leather and legs of the boots in question, the soles being made of cowskin. The tanning created a light brown color, and the leather proved somewhat warmer than calf-skin and more porous. It appears that, after allowing for the necessary waste, the skin of an average-sized man will make two pairs of boots, including the soles, but the latter would not be sufficiently hard for economical use.

Why She Voted.

We had the honor not long since of seeing one of the first ladies who voted in the United States. She cast her ballot in Wyoming, and gave the following reason why she voted, laughing as heartily as any of her hearers: She was standing in a store one day, when a large dog came in holding a basket in his mouth. It was election day, and some men, talking about the late Woman Suffrage act passed in the territory, said that Jack (the dog) should be allowed to put his votes in if the women were, for he certainly had just as much sense about such things. The lady said she made up her mind instantly to go to the polls and vote, though she had no idea of doing so before that man so slandered her sex.—Denver Tribune.

An Outrage Committed by Ladies.

One night last week Mrs. Doda Emens, M. D., physician and surgeon, lectured in Syracuse "to women only," and when she was half through the shrill alarm was given, "Man in the room!" and Mrs. Mary Walker, M. D., was clutched by the indignant females and bounced out of the room, and down stairs, with her hat jammed down over her eyes, and her claw-hammer coat ripped from collar to bustle. The Doctor picked herself up and called a hack, and as she climbed in she was heard to remark, "Another victim to circumstantial evidence."—Burlington Hawkeye.

ABOUT twenty years ago, says the Alabama Baptist, a somewhat abusive opponent of the Baptists was publishing a book against them at the office of the printer of the Acts of the Mississippi Legislature. By some inadvertence the sheets got mixed, and before the confusion was detected, several copies of the Acts were so bound as to exhibit the following astonishing piece of legislation, the grand result of a thirty years' war against immersion: "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Mississippi, That bap means to put under the water and tizo means to pull out."

A "Lond Call" Unheeded.

There is a very deaf old darkey down in South Chicago, and he came pretty near getting run over by an engine on the railroad track the other day.

"I'll tell yo' what, said a young black fellow, who had been describing it to a colored friend, "dat was a loud call fo' old Pete."

"Ya'as," broke in the other, "purty loud call, but dat old niggah's done gittin' so drea'ful deaf he can't hear nuffin!"

NATURE cures, but the doctor takes the credit.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

IT is said the census embraces seventeen million women. Who wouldn't be a census?

IT takes a good deal of reserve piety to make a man smile while he is eating a church fair stew.

"WHAT do they always put D. C. after Washington for?" asked Mrs. Quilp of Mr. Q. "Why, my dear, don't you know Washington was the Daddy of his Country?" said Quilp, with a snicker.

HOW wonderful is the instinct of love that even enables the enamored youth, from his remote cyric in a third story back window, to identify his enslaver's raiment lapping the free air of heaven on a neighboring clothes-line.

IN order to avoid answering the question, "Who is elected?" some Bostonians have provided themselves with printed cards bearing the legend, "Damfino." They are always ready to hand them out to all anxious inquirers.

"ARE you there, my love?" he whispered through a hole in the fence of his beloved's back yard. "Yes, darling," was the reply; "jump right over." He did so and alighted in the presence of her mother, a broomstick, and a policeman.

MOODY has found a girl in Chicago, sixteen years old, and ordinarily intelligent, who had never heard the name of Christ, except in profanity, and who had no idea who He was. And yet we send missionaries and cotton-flannel to the heathen.

A SAD example of the fatal nature of diphtheria has just occurred in Paris. A whole family, consisting of father and mother and two children, were attacked with it, and carried off in a short time. Dr. Regnault, who attended them, caught the malady, and in spite of the care of one of his colleagues, Dr. Biset, died also in twenty-four hours. Dr. Biset was then attacked in his turn, and he expired.

"WHY, Bill, what's the matter with you? You look down in the mouth." "Well, Peter, I dare say if you'd been through what I have, you'd look bad too." "What's the matter?" "Well, you know Sarah Snivels, don't you, Peter?" "Yes." "I discarded her last night." "You did! What for?" "Well, I'll tell you. She said she wouldn't marry me, and I'd discard any girl that would treat me in that manner."

TWO young attorneys were wrangling for a long time before Judge Knox, of Virginia, yesterday, over a point of law. His Honor rendered his decision, and the sprig who had lost impudently remarked: "Your Honor, there is a growing opinion that all the fools are not dead yet." "Certainly," answered the court, with unruffled good humor, "I quite agree with you, Mr. Blank, and congratulate you upon your hearty appearance."

AN old lady was going to Stanford, Connecticut, to see a daughter, and took her seat in the cars for the first time in her life. During the trip the car in which she was seated was thrown down an embankment and demolished. Crawling out from beneath the debris, she spied a man who was held down in a sitting posture by his legs being fastened. "Is this Stanford?" anxiously inquired the old lady. The man was from Boston. He was in considerable pain, but he did not lose sight of the fact that he was from Boston, so he said; "No, this is a catastrophe." "Then I hadn't aughter got off here."

A GENTLEMAN of Luneville, France, recently sought to leave a world of which he was weary by converting himself into a mess of pottage. At 9 a. m., M. D—, carefully dressed, presented himself at the bath of St. Peter, ordered a bath, and sent off a boy with a ten franc piece to buy him a supply of cayenne pepper, a bottle of white wine, and a bottle of whiskey, carrots, turnips, tomatoes, onions, and cloves. He received his purchases a quarter of an hour later, and, having dismissed the boy, he emptied the bath, refilled it with boiling water, threw in the white wine and the whiskey, the vegetables carefully sliced and the condiments, and finally jumped in himself, crying aloud so as to be heard outside, "Adieu, all of you, I'm going to cook myself a l' Americaine." The door was instantly burst open, and he was dragged out and taken to the hospital, but, as might be expected, returned somewhat incoherent answers to all inquiries on the part of the police and the authorities of the hospital. His condition is pronounced to be desperate.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL.
Editor and Proprietor.

BURLINGTON, KY., JANUARY 11.

COMMODORE VANDERBILT died last week. His fortune is estimated at $80,000,000.

THE mass Conventions at Columbus and Indianapolis, on the 8th, were largely attended.

IN Anderson County, a few weeks since, a school-teacher was fined $100 for severely whipping a pupil.

At Urbana, Ohio, out of a family of three brothers and two sisters, the three brothers have been sentenced to the Penitentiary, and the two sisters are in prison awaiting trial on charges that will, doubtless, send them there also. That will amount to a family reunion in the Penitentiary.

THE snow in some parts of Pennsylvania last week, was three feet deep, and in some places drifted to the depth of twenty feet. The farmers were completely snowbound, and for several days worked faithfully digging their way from their farms to the roads. There was a great destruction of stock, and the temperature ranged extremely low.

MR CHARLES TUFTS, the founder of Tuft's Universalist College, Mass., died at his home in Somervill, Mass., last week, of old age, having reached his ninety-fifth year. He was a farmer in early life, owning large tracts of land in the town, and from the rise in their value he obtained his wealth. For many years he has scarcely left his home except that he has each year attended the Commencement exercises of Tuft's College.

IT was not our intention to bulldoze the Florence district and count it out of the proceedings of the Convention held here on the 1st inst. From that district we should have reported the names of Dr. A. Sayre, Judge F. A. Boyd and Joseph Wagstaff, as delegates appointed by the Convention to attend the Louisville Convention which meets on the 18th inst., and not on the 8th as set out in the resolutions adopted by the county meeting.

THE Judge of the Clinton County Court called upon Governor McCreary for militia to protect prisoners from a mob, and received the following reply:

"Hon. P. H. Hopkins, Judge of the Clinton County Court, Albany, Ky.:

"You are directed to cause one hundred men to be summoned in your county, or more if necessary, to suppress the lawlessness you report. If lawless persons resist the administration of justice, I will furnish you with such aid as the law provides to inflict speedy punishment on such offenders. My rule, however, is not to order militia into active service until the civil power is exhausted. When you have summoned the citizens of your county, and exhausted civil authority, then, although the distance is great from Clinton County to the nearest State Guard Company, I will furnish you assistance for preserving the peace and enforcing the law. Keep me informed as to your efforts.

"JAS. B. MCCREARY, Governor."

THIS has been one of the severest winters experienced in this climate for many years. Since the cold weather commenced there has been no cessation of the frigid temperature, and every branch of industry that could be effected by the cold has been suspended. The farmers, for the past six weeks, have done but little more than feed and look after their stock, which has required almost their undivided attention to keep them from suffering. Last spring there was an abundance of winter food for stock left over, but should this weather continue much longer the supplies of "roughness" will become exhausted and the farmers likely to lose largely this spring in the stock line.

THE United States has been loud in boasting of the superior government under which it has existed for the last one hundred years past. It has repeatedly stroked itself upon the breast and asked other nations to look at the scientific manner by which the government's machinery is run and the prosperous condition of the country. But alas! it has been discovered, after all the self-praise, the United States does not know how to elect its Chief Ruler. They are not sufficiently educated in governmental business to know how to count the vote for President, and the wise heads of the nation can't come to any conclusion as to the proper method of counting the votes cast for President. With another century's experience, the nation may arrive at some plan and fair way of deciding such troubles as now shake the government to its center.

OWING to the excessive press of matter last week we were compelled to condense, and in several instances reject communications that otherwise would have been inserted. We had not room in which to wish our subscribers a happy New Year, nor time to change the date of our paper to 1877 (?). As we are now journeying in the new year, with many thanks to our friends for their liberal patronage in 1876, we solicit a continuance of the same with increase, and assure our readers that we will exert ourselves in honest endeavors to present them, weekly, with a paper in which they can rely upon finding a correct account of everything of importance that transpires in the county each week. Our facilities for getting up a local paper have, as a result of experience, increased as we have pursued the business, and are glad to see the citizens of the county manifesting a desire to encourage home enterprise. The farmers can not realize the benefit of a home paper till they commence patronizing it in one of the essential ways. For instance, if you have lost a hog, sheep, cow or horse, or if you want to buy or sell anything, how easily, and at a very small expense, can you make these wants known throughout your county by an advertisement in your home paper. If you want to hire a hand to work on the farm, this will be a splendid way to have them call at your door. We ask the farmers of the county to give this matter a consideration—give it a trial and you will be convinced.

THE following report of sales of tobacco we take from the Western Tobacco Journal of last week:

THE Presidential muddle is still muddling, but no nearer solved than it was ten days after the election. Louisiana now comes up with two State Governments and two Governors for inauguration. Florida's Governor was peaceably inaugurated and entered upon the duties of his office. The Congressional Committee that visited South Carolina to investigate the election, gave the State to Hampton and the Hayes electors. Hampton will undoubtedly be recognized as the Governor.

THE recanvassing of the votes in Florida, under the order of the Supreme Court, gave Drew, the Democratic candidate for Governor, 195 majority, and the Hayes Electors 206. Attorney General Cocke, Democratic member of the Board filed, a protest. His count gives the State to Tilden.

THERE is the largest area covered with snow in the United States at the present time than ever known. The river at New Orleans was frozen over, something that has not occurred within the recollection of the oldest citizens of that place.

COUNT No. 1, in Florida, gave Stearns the Governorship. Count No. 2, gave the office to Drew, who was inaugurated. The two countings are hardly reconcilable.

HOW is Professor Tice going to get rid of the snow? He has booked this month as cold and dry.

KANSAS LETTER.

CLAY CENTER, KS., January 1, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

"A happy New Year, Mr. Editor." Now that the time has come for the "turning over of new leaves," let me turn one and resume my old friendship with the RECORDER.

Mr. Editor, did you ever teach "skule?" if so, did you ever spank "somebody's darling?" if so, did that somebody come down on you all unawares and annihilate you? if so be not, pray thou the Fates that it never may. It should be ordained by law, that a special door of escape for such occasions be made in every institution of learning. Ye see nothing like the above has yet occurred in our experience (except the spanking part), but ye see, we learn tell that the other was goin' to happen, and we stand in trembling apprehension of the dread catastrophe. Oh, the horror of impending and ever threatening destruction!

Our Christmas, to say the least of it, has been "a little fresh." Just let your Fahrenheit indicate 10°—that don't sound so fearful, does it? But, in addition, just let your Anemometer indicate 50 or 60 miles per hour, then take a little out door exercise and you'll know what "a bracing climate" is. Up to Christmas our climate was remarkably mild, since that day it has been as remarkably fierce, and now with the new year, Old Boreas has again calmed his blasting breath and threatens us with a season of refreshing, in the form of a "spell" of nice weather.

Prospects for crops this year are at present quite good, but everybody knows that the whole face of the prairie is full of grasshopper's eggs, and that each and every one of said eggs will, at the opening of the buds in the balmy springtime, be metamorphosed into a live, kicking and hungry grasshopper, whose playful nature leads it to delight in the things which the Granger, by the sweat of his brow, has wrenched from the bosom of mother earth. Just what those same lively, playful, kicking and hungry little chaps are going to do with themselves is the question that now agitates the public mind.

Business is lively in our city just now, and, in fact, has been for some months. An immense amount of grain is shipped from this point to all the Eastern markets. Our millers, merchants and grain-dealers are full to overflowing with business, and they are "rushing" things.

Ho, ho, here's the RECORDER, just come in on the "years!" Many a fellow has received a worse New Year's gift.

Will call again. 300.

What Our Exchanges Say.

RISING SUN (Ind.) RECORDER: The number of polls on the Ohio County tax duplicate is 778. Number of dogs, 438.

Weddings were so mixed up with the holidays that one could scarcely tell tother from which.

Some families in Rising Sun who had snow thrown into their cisterns to increase their supply of water, have been badly fooled. The snow absorbed the water, and then froze up solid.

PARIS TRUE KENTUCKIAN: Pig! Pig!—R. Tarr had 11 March pigs from one sow to average 320 pounds gross. They were a cross of Poland-China and Berkshire. These beat any eight months old pigs we've seen noticed.

Large Sheep—Oscar Gilman bought of Nat. Lafon, near Lexington, 262 sheep that averaged 178 pounds and a fraction, all wethers except thirty, and all Mr. L.'s rearing except 60. Mr G. shipped for Christmas, outside of these, 98 that averaged 208 pounds.

MOUNT STERLING SENTINEL: The Estill Furnace property, embracing 30,000 acres of land and two iron furnaces, was sold a few days ago at commissioner's sale for $35,000. It was bought by New York parties.

All of the last week of the Circuit Court in this place was occupied in trying Smith and Barnes, charged with killing George Owens. Barnes was acquitted, but Smith was found guilty, and his punishment fixed at twenty years' confinement in the State Penitentiary.

FRANKFORT YEOMAN: The lumber business is fairly frozen up. Fifteen inches of ice on the river, and the yards full of snow.

The business in the Frankfort post-office has been fifty per cent. greater this year than ever before.

A woman from Pike County, sent to prison for life, for the crime of infanticide, has obtained a rehearing and was taken back to that county through the late bitter cold weather on horseback. It is said she is a better subject for a lunatic asylum than for the prison.

The first warrant issued by the State of Virginia for land in Kentucky was to Thomas Chinn, assignee of Levi Powell, for 1,000 acres. It was dated October 15, 1779, and located in what was then Fayette County, on the north side of the North Fork of Licking river. It is now in either Mason or Bracken County.

LAWRENCEBURG (Ind.) REGISTER: The members of the Christian Church have rented the hall in the Annis building, where their meetings will be held hereafter.

We are informed that during the present term all the causes pending in court, except about 15 cases, which Judge Roberts is incompetent to try, will be disposed of. There were 69 new cases brought at the present term. Just 100 cases have already been finally disposed of during the term. There are 35 cases which stand over from last term, that will be tried before the close of the present term. This will clear the docket entirely, a result which has not been accomplished before in 25 years. Hereafter, court will not be in session more than five or six weeks, instead of eight, as heretofore. this will greatly reduce the expense of the court, a result greatly to be desired.

WILLIAMSTOWN SENTINEL: On the night of the 17th of December, 1876, a young man by the name of James Landrum, went to George B. Dance's saloon and imbibed too much whisky, after which he started for William Simpson's and got as far as Well's cornfield, and couldn't get any farther. The poor boy was heard to call for help during the entire night by persons whose hearts seemed as callous as stone, and who heeded not his cries, and in the morning he was found frozen to death. His cries were heard by three men and a woman. The woman answered one of his calls, and the suffering boy asked her where she was at. She made no reply, but re-entered the house, giving no further heed to his cries. This certainly exhibited a hardness of heart that would put to shame the barbarous most barbarian. But, "vengeance is mine and I will repay," saith the Lord.

OWENSBORO EXAMINER: Now, if Mr. Craddock has any calves of this sort, he will oblige the Examiner by rising up and saying so. The calf below described was dropped on the premises of Mr R. C. Frayzer, near Greenville, Ky., on December 13, by an ordinary cow. The monstrosity had at birth two perfect heads, four ears, four eyes, two mouths, two windpipes connecting with two pair of lungs, two livers, two sets of bowels connecting with one rectum; four kidneys, two backbones, double ribs connecting with each backbone, and one set of limbs, all of which were double-jointed. The calf breathed several times after birth.

The revival meetings at the Baptist and Cumberland Churches have closed. There were thirteen additions to the former church and seven to the latter. The ordinance of baptism was administered to the Baptist converts in the baptistry at the church on Christmas eve night.

The coldest morning of the winter, as indicated by the thermometers, was the morning following the big blow of December 8—four degrees below zero.

CARROLLTON DEMOCRAT: Colonel W. G. Terrell, of Covington, was here the other day, interviewing Gen. Butler in regard to the battle of New Orleans and other matters connected with the war of 1812. We understand that it is the Colonel's intention to write an article in regard to the battle of 8th of January, 1815, for his paper, the Covington Commonwealth.

The weather, for this latitude, has been unusually severe during the past week. Last Sunday morning, on Mr. Gaines' back porch, which is exposed to the cold northwest winds that sweep up the Ohio, the thermometer indicated 20° below zero, and here in town, at Mr. Hogan's as he informs us, the mercury stood 13° below zero, the thermometer being suspended to the limb of a tree in his yard. Of course these were the extreme, but almost anywhere where was a thermometer, not in a room in which there was a fire, the mercury stood below zero, on Sunday morning last, and has not stood much above zero any morning since.

THE SUN.
1877. NEW YORK. 1877.

The different editions of THE SUN during the next year will be the same as during the year that has just passed. The daily edition will on week days be a sheet of four pages, and on Sundays a sheet of eight pages, or 56 broad columns; while the weekly edition will be a sheet of eight pages, of the same dimensions and character that are already familiar to our friends.

THE SUN will continue to be the strenuous advocate of reform and retrenchment, and of the substitution of statesmanship, wisdom and integrity for hollow pretence, imbecility and fraud in the administration of public affairs. It will contend for the government of the people by the people and for the people, as opposed to government by frauds in the ballot-box and in the counting of votes enforced by military violence. It will endeavor to supply its readers—a body now not far from a million of souls—with the most careful, complete and trustworthy accounts of current events, and will employ for this purpose a numerous and carefully selected staff of reporters and correspondents. Its reports from Washington, especially, will be full, accurate and fearless; and it will doubtless continue to deserve and enjoy the hatred of those who thrive by plundering the Treasury or by usurping what the law does not give them, while it will endeavor to merit the confidence of the public by defending the rights of the people against the encroachments of unjustified power.

The price of the daily SUN will be 55 cents a month or $6 50 a year, post paid, or with the SUNDAY edition $7 70 a year.

The SUNDAY edition alone, eight pages, $1 20 a year, post paid.

The WEEKLY SUN, eight pages of 56 broad columns, will be furnished during 1877 at the rate of $1 a year, post paid.

The benefit of this large reduction from the previous rate for the WEEKLY can be enjoyed by individual subscribers, without the necessity of making up clubs. At the same time, if any of our friends choose to aid in extending our circulation, we shall be grateful to them, and every such person who sends us ten or more subscribers from one place will be entitled to one copy of the paper for himself without charge. At one dollar a year, postage paid, the expenses of paper and printing are barely repaid; and, considering the size of the sheet and the quality of its contents, we are confident the people will consider THE WEEKLY SUN the cheapest newspaper published in the world, and we trust also one of the very best. THE Pleasant Ridge Grange is surely prospering. Their co-operative store has declared a dividend. Don't reckon we could join that Grange in time to come in for part of that dividend.

ONE day last week the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Cason narrowly escaped death from burning. Mrs. Cason put the little one in the cradle and left it in the room alone. While she was absent, a spark flew from the fire, alighted in the cradle and ignited the clothing, the burning of which filled the room with smoke, and came near suffocating the child before its father happened to come in the room. Mr. Cason rescued the child from the flames, which in a few seconds more would have enveloped its innocent form, and took it to the open air, where some time was required to restore it to consciousness.

THERE were three of them, whom Young America calls old bachelors. They sat in front of a hot coal fire, leisurely devouring a huge "hunk" of wedding cake that, but a few evenings previous, ornamented the table at the wedding of a less or more fortunate friend. This trio wore an air of complacency, and congratulated themselves upon being so fortunate as to help eat the wedding cake of others, with no prospect of returning the favor during the next three years. Gird on your armor, baches, and "let no opportunity escape."

THE Lawrenceburg correspondent for the Cincinnati Enquirer, in last Sunday's edition, says:

Frank Ridder, while crossing the river with a gun in his hands, Friday, went through an airhole, and, but for the gun spanning the hole, would have been drowned. Excepting his hands, clinging to the gun, he went entirely out of sight. He climbed out with no assistance, and went home a wiser and wetter man.

THE Directors of the Burlington and Bellevue Turnpike Road Company held a meeting on the 1st of January, 1877, and after some consultation agreed to adjourn, to meet on 1st of February at Burlington. THE only relic of antiquity in town is now to be seen in the bar-room at the Boone House. It is an ancient clock, known to have been in the town for the last fifty years. It is one of the old-fashioned fellows that was not picked before it was ripe. "It's now standing in the corner running."

TUESDAY Mr. Jos. Walton drove a bunch of fine hogs through town.

Tribute of Respect.

HALL OF DILLSBORO GRANGE No. 631, DILLSBORO, IND., Dec. 28th, 1876.

WHEREAS, Our Divine Master above has removed from our midst, on the 24th inst., our beloved brother, Joseph Green, aged 50 years, whereby the community has lost one of its best citizens, the Grange one of its brightest examples of a true Patron, his bereaved brothers and sisters a devoted brother. Resolved, That we tender our heart-felt sympathies to the bereaved family and friends, and that they be commended to Him who hath said, "Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth. Yea, saith the Spirit that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

Resolved, That, as a token of respect to the memory of the deceased, the members of this Grange wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, Also, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, and a copy to the Boone County RECORDER, and Cincinnati Grange Bulletin for publication.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Big Bone Ridge.

A called meeting of Big Bone Grange No. 488, December 23d, 1876, the lady officers elected, as follows: Mrs. A. P. Utz, Ceres; Mrs. Alice Neal, Pomona; Miss. Hattie Rouse, Flora; Miss Emily Dresser, Stewardess. The installation of all the officers will take place January 13th 1877. It is hoped that many patrons will be present.

The fantastic toe was tripped from dark till about 2 o'clock, at James Edings', December 26th.

Mr. B. F. Crisler does not very well like the dark turkey trade, so accommodate him by calling in daylight.

The cold weather has given many persons in this vicinity, the Texas fever. J. A. L.

Walton.

Leap Year is gone, young ladies, and with it your chance of making some bashful young man happy by proposing. An ther three years of weary waiting before the privilege will be again granted you. But who knows what courage some one of these modest men may summon up in the meantime?

Christmas did not bring us Waltonians any great amount of gayety. The minstrels held forth for three nights, but were not successful in attracting very large audiences. In fact they were poorly attended, and, after meeting the expenses, there will be only a small amount left to be given to the school-house. The new school-house is very comfortable, and when it gets the desks and seats will look very cosy.

Is Mr. Bob Allen often missed from Burlington or vicinity? We thought probably he was, as his smiling presence is so often seen in Walton. Surely there must be some great attraction which could bring him so far of a hotel.

Married, on the 1st inst., Mr. George W. Holder and Miss Alice Fullilove.

On Friday week the funeral of Mr. Sam Carson, of Rising Sun, was preached by Rev. Hampton at Salem Church, and his remains interred in the Salem Burying-ground.

Happy New Year to all. NEMO.

Reynardsburg.

Another year has passed and we now enter upon a new year which we trust will bring better times if Uncle Sam is elected.

There were quite a number of parties during Christmas and everyone seemed to enjoy them.

Your correspondent attended the Sunday-school at Willoughby last Sunday evening and was surprised at the improvement of the scholars.

One day last week, Mr. James Love was hauling wood when his horses took fright and ran away, breaking his wagon to pieces and injuring one of his horses slightly.

The scarcity of water is becoming an item worth noting. The cisterns are failing as well as the stock water.

The sale at Thomas Roberts' gave the lie, emphatically, to the general complaint of hard times and scarcity of money, or else some of the citizens of Boone are looking forward to no remote period when money will be plentiful, as the prices paid for articles sold will show; wheat sold at $1 49c. per bushel; corn at 56@60c. per bushel; cattle at 3@3c. per pound; hogs at 6@7c. per pound, &c. So, Mr. Editor, if the people generally could feel that better times were close at hand it would be a panacea to stimulate them to renewed exertions and bring them out of the lethargy into which it seems numbers have relapsed. BLANCHE.

Rabbit Hash.

Christmas Day was celebrated at Mr. Sam'l Calvert's by the marriage of Miss Annie Calvert to Ben H. Ryle at 2 o'clock p. m., not many words out, Rev. Bristow officiating. On the following day there was a large crowd at the infare at Mrs. Minerva Ryle's. May they live long, &c. Go thou and do likewise, Mr. Editor. [Practice the doctrine you preach.—ED.]

On Wednesday night a week Mrs. McConnell gave a party and oyster supper, which was enjoyed very much by the guests. Also, the beautiful music rendered by Miss Mira McConnell, her mother, Miss Alice Senior, Omer Kirtley and others.

Thursday night a week we had two parties in the neighborhood, one at Captain James Hastings', the other at Mrs. Harriet Walton's. While the crowd was not very large at Mrs. Walton's, we spent a very pleasant evening notwithstanding. Several young couples from Rising Sun were there. May they come over often. We understand that the party at Captain Hastings' was a success also. A large crowd was present, and enjoyed themselves in various ways; first, by indulging in a handsome supper, then music, playing and dancing. Mrs. H. protested against the dance, but the Captain said the dance must go on. So it did go on, and the Captain was the first man on the floor to dance. This was a leap year party. Every gentleman was accompanied by a lady. The ladies hitched their horses and waited on them in such style that the gentleman say they have learned a lesson once from the ladies, and promise to do better in the future. Now, in all this vast amount of fun, we never heard of but one accident. Dr. Cowen's company called at his office about 6. The Doctor being ready, they started off at a breakneck speed. They had not gone far before the young lady stood her horse right up on his ears, and she went sprawling into the road. The Doctor soon discovered the situation, caught her horse, went back, found no bones broken, she got on her horse again, and they went on their way rejoicing. Bessie—we promised our informant we would not tell this, but we can't well help it.

Petersburg.

The supplies for the distillery and the whisky manufactured are being hauled across to and from Lawrenceburg on the ice. Two sleds, each carrying three barrels of convivial spirits, are attached to one mule, and the whole trip is made at a swinging trot or gallop. The ice road is very smooth and solid. Last Thursday, as a new road was being cleared with a boy, a mule and a scraper, the ice suddenly went down, carrying the mule along with it. The boy and scraper were saved; the mule a total wreck, and can not be raised. She was an old favorite with the blacksmiths, being so handy with the heels that Porter says she could kick a section off a smith's ear while looking him in the face.

By the way, speaking of Porter, two young ladies called with a sleigh one evening last week to take him for a sleigh-ride; but, owing to a severe case of gout, brought on by drinking too much hard cider with a redhot poker in it, he was, much to his reluctance, forced to forego that pleasure, and turned the tun over to that obliging young gentleman Chas. Schlamf, who is too temperate in his habits to be troubled with any of the infirmities of too much schnapps.

Mr. Jake Platt has moved to his father's old home, where he will continue to live, his mother making her home with him.

That item of local news in last week's RECORDER, telling us all about those cattle sold by Mr Jenkins on the 19th of last month, is regarded as a "whopper," more especially the weight of the largest steer, it being at least thirteen ounces more than any other bullock ever produced in this neck of the woods. Can't see that our correspondent has enlightened us any as to the correct weight of the cattle—too much Porter, sure.—ED.]

The weather indications of last Sunday were that a general thaw is upon us to open navigation on the river and drop the bottom out of all the roads.

From the various dates published for the convening of appointed delegates in Louisville for indignation purposes, by the Democratic mass meeting in Burlington January 1st, one would suppose that Mr. Blythe or someone else was selling something both strong and crooked at his hotel. That is going to be the worst scattered delegation on record in any country, being all along from the 8th to the 18th inst., ten days, which will in all probability string them out like a telegraph wire from Boone County to Louisville.

Pomopolis.

A meeting of the Patrons of Husbandry was held at Bellevue Grange Hall, Boone County, Ky., on Saturday, the 6th inst. The import of this meeting is highly worthy of publication in your valuable paper. The Grange met at the time and place designated, and, being duly organized, Master J. H. Kelly in the chair, after the usual routine of private business was transacted, the meeting adjourned for dinner, of which there was a bountiful supply. We were glad to see so many of our friends who are not even members of the order who showed a willingness to co-operate with us during dinner. There seemed to be a fraternal feeling throughout the entire meeting. Preliminaries and customary formalities were arranged for the installation of officers. At 1 o'clock the meeting was called to order by the Master, who stated that the installation of officers would take place. Wm. Conner was chosen to install the officers for the ensuing year, in the presence of a large concourse of spectators. He arose and stated that he felt himself inadequate to the duty devolving upon him, but made a short and appropriate speech, in which he stated the Grange represented a farm, master, overseer, &c., that persons present might understand and appreciate the installation ceremonies, which were very imposing, only enlivened by the stirring music of the well appointed and efficient band. After this, speeches were called for—first the name of Zane! Zane!! And Zane arose, and in a stentorian voice exclaimed: "An architect can not build a structure without a foundation; he that hath nothing to say, let him say nothing." And Zane was heard no more. Wm. Conner's name was called. William came forward and delivered a short speech, in which he pointed to what the Grange had accomplished for the good of agriculturists and mankind generally. Brother Ben Rice addressed the meeting in quite a lengthy and logical speech, in which he discoursed mainly on what was yet to be accomplished by the Grange. He also spoke of what we may expect to encounter—the criticism and opposition of its enemies; also the still higher good to which it is reaching forward. He referred us to the past; looking back over the broad field of what the agriculturist has already done, he inspired us with a hope that the results of the past may be transcended by the achievements of the future, and that the Grange may flourish as one of the strongest and noblest monuments of the Nation. The Grange adjourned to meet the first Saturday in February. STRAY DICK.

Florence.

Our juvenile friend, Felix Moses, informs us of being assailed matrimonially by no less than seven charming lassies during the late leap year, but the thoughts of the mumps, measles, chicken-pox, small-pox, cholera infantum and the "hurls o'" purveyor he would have to buy induced him to turn a deaf ear to their wooings. Alas, how sad!

Jim Westbay came through here the other day with a wagon load of bodies that excited curiosity. They were on their backs, covered with government blankets, and the report was that Jim was gathering stiffs for a medical college. From the way the bodies smelt, we think they had been dead (drunk) for some time.

Christmas was celebrated at the Methodist Church with a Christmas tree. There were quite a number of presents for the little ones. Some contemptible puppy, a probable candidate for the Penitentiary, hung some inappropriate presents, with some dirty notes, for some of the young ladies.

Rev. Samuel Glassford died last Friday morning at 2 o'clock. Mr. Glassford was a minister in the Methodist Church from 1842 to 1852, his last appointment being to take charge of the Main Street Congregation in Covington at the expiration of which he moved to this place and engaged in the carriage business which he followed till 1869. For five months previous to his death Mr. Glassford had been confined to his room and most of the time to his bed with consumption. The funeral was preached Sunday at 2 p. m. by Rev. C. W. Miller. The church was crowded and a large number was turned away unable to gain admittance. The deceased was a man of many fine qualities and leaves a large circle of friends to mourn his loss. His remains were interred in the Florence Cemetery.

Last Saturday afternoon quite a crowd witnessed the installation or officers of Venus Lodge I. O. O. F. at Florence. The installation ceremonies were performed in the Christian Church which was filled with persons who highly appreciated and admired the installation. After the officers were installed, the audience was entertained for some time by an eloquent and learned lecture on Oddfellowship by Elder W. S. Keene. At the close of the lecture, Mr. Joseph Wagstaff, on behalf of the Lodge, and with a few very appropriate remarks, presented Mr. Benjamin Stephens with a handsome regalia. Mr. Stephens, not expecting anything of the kind, was much surprised and in response merely thanked the Lodge for its manifestation of its appreciation of him as a member. The Odd-fellows' fraternity at Florence has been, and is still, in a flourishing condition. Among the members at the installation we noticed a number of the leading men of Florence and the surrounding country; and such lectures as the one delivered by Mr. Keene, Saturday, is calculated to redound to the benefit of the Lodge by presenting the principles of the fraternity to the public in their proper light.

Brother J. Frank Grant, the D. D. G. Master of Boone County, was present at the installation Saturday, and would have been happy but for the absence of his Porter. We offered him beer, ale and ale and ale, but he wouldn't have it. It was Porter he wanted and without it (or him) he was disconsolate.

Mr. Crabb, our school-teacher, went to Brookfield this State, and married. All the harm we wish Mr. and Mrs. Crabb is that they may live 2,000 years.

Born, on the 30th ult., to John Finch and wife, a son—Sam Tilden. UNO.

WE have received the January number of Leisure Hours, a handsome mammoth 16 page (64 columns) family paper, filled with the choicest literature—serial and short stories, sketches, poetry, wit, humor, &c., &c. It is entertaining, amusing and instructive, and is one of the cheapest papers, the amount and quality of matter considered, that we have seen. The price is $1 20 per year, including as premium a genuine fine-line steel engraving, called "The Mitherless Bairn," printed on 22x28 plate paper, which the publishers claim is superior in point of merit and attractiveness to any premium ever offered by any other paper in this country, and is alone worth the money asked for both. The publishers, J. L. Patten & Co., 162 William st., New York, authorize us to say that, in order to introduce the paper in this vicinity, they make a special offer to every one of our readers to send them the paper—a "trial trip" of four months, post-paid, commencing with the January number—for 25 cents. Our readers who avail themselves of this offer will, we feel certain, thank us for having called their attention to it. The publishers of Leisure Hours would like to employ someone in every place to canvass for this paper.

MY EARLY HOME.

BY S. J. W.

My early days! my early days!
I'm dreaming of them now,
When childhood's years so softly kissed
The freshness of my brow.
Once more I am a tiny child
Beside my mother's knee,
Once more I hear her gentle tones
Breathed lovingly to me.

And once again she weaves her hand
Amid my clustering hair,
And murmurs in my listening ear
The whispered words of prayer.
Ah, me! from all such loving dreams,
Pale memory bids me flee—
White phantoms of the troubled Past,
Upon Life's stormy sea.

My early home! my early home!
The hillside and the brook,
Where first I learned a laughing child;
Oh my young face to look.
I've gazed in many mirrors since,
But never more, I ween,
I'll meet that happy, joyous face
That in the brook was seen.

My early friends! my early friends!
Whose hearts have throbbed 'gainst mine;
Whose every tone I treasured up
Within my spirit's shrine.
They are the unforgotten ties
That bind me to the past;
The fadeless flowers Fate's gentle hand
Has o'er my pathway cast.

But ah, alas! for some I look
Around the household hearth,
There is a dreary void. I know
They are not of our earth.
Heaven's Dove with healing wings descends
And chant's a low, sweet strain,
And murmurs in its gentle tones
That we shall meet again.

Oh! ever let me, dreaming, dwell
On the glad hours of youth,
When life was a bright summer scene,
So full of love and truth.
And, like a prisoned bird, think on
Its early woodland nest,
Where first its wild young heart had found
A shelter where to rest.

Small Farms Pay Best,

The insane desire possessing the minds of a majority of farmers is more lands and larger farms. Not content with as many acres as they can till to advantage, or with economy and profit, they watch and wait until they can obtain another eighty or add a forty to their already too large possessions. Enough is as good as a feast, and too much is more than a famine. Farms in our great West are altogether too large, one reason being because no long years of labor are required to remove the forests and prepare for the reception of seed; and the purchaser, instead of taking eighty acres and doing the work thoroughly, will buy half a section and only half perform anything he may undertake. We are ready to confess that the soil is rich, and will do its part of the work well, but a rich soil and bright sun, with rains, dews and genial climate, are not all that is required to show a balance on the profit side of a farmer's ledger. A careful and practical gardener or farmer from the Old Land, or even New England, will make a handsome income from the neglected spots on the average farm. What use is there in owning 160 acres of land to use only 60 acres? and why pay interest and taxes on the extra hundred acres, when less than half of it will not only produce all you obtain from the larger farm, but will spare you many hours of useless concern because the untilled portion is not producing?

An instance of how large farms work failure to the owners is before us now in the case of the Sullivant farm of 40,000 acres. If it has not swamped the owner, it has dragged him down until ruin was so near that recovery was only possible in dividing up and disposing of the acres that were more than he could make profitable.

There is a point beyond which, in farming as well as business, results are obtained only by more than proportionate expense. A merchant may sell $100,000 worth of goods at fair profit, but the expense and extra cost to increase the sale to $150,000 not unfrequently occasions actual loss. A farmer may till a farm of 160 acres and have a fair balance left each year, but when he adds the next 160 acres he has put about his neck an anchor that may drag him under.

Again, we say the farms are too large on an average. More farmers are what we need, not larger farms; do better the work that is undertaken; employ means that will take out of the soil the most from the fewest acres; use every foot of ground you own, and be content to put your profits out at savings, and not into more land, that will burden you with debt and put an end to gain.—Factory and Farm.

DEATH carried off last year many eminent men and women at a ripe age. Francis Deak, the Hungarian statesman, at 77; John Forster, at 64; Admiral Stringham, at 77, and Commodore Pope, of our navy, at 78; Reverdy Johnson, at 79; Horace Bushnell, at 73; Ferdinand Ferilgrath, the German poet, at 66; the Earl of Sheffield, at 74; Alexander T. Stewart, at 74; Orestes A. Brownsman, at 73; the Rev. Dr. Sprague, at 80; President Stearns of Amherst College, at 71; George Sand, at 72; Dr. Petermann, the German Orientalist, at 70; John Neal, the author, at 83; Gen. Santa Anna, at 78; Harriet Martineau, at 75; Casimir-Perier, the French statesman, at 65; and Felicien David, the French musical composer, at 66.

THE worth of money is not in its possession, but in its use.

The State Prison.

The grand jury of the Franklin Criminal Court, at its late session, made the following report concerning the Kentucky State Prison, and a request was entered upon the order-book of the court that it be printed in the Frankfort Yeoman:

To his Honor O. D. McManama, Judge of the Franklin Criminal Court:

We, the grand jury, wish to make the following report in regard to the Kentucky Penitentiary and its management:

We have summoned before us sundry persons supposed to be familiar with the management of the institution, and while it has been proven that the food and clothing of the prisoners is such as is necessary and proper, and the sleeping department is kept clean, and is as comfortable as it is possible for the Keeper to have it in its present crowded condition, it is also in proof that the prisoners are worked in places that are very destructive to their health; but, under the existing laws of the State, it is impossible to take any action against the Keeper, from the simple fact that the Legislature has failed to provide sufficient shops that are comfortable to work the prisoners in.

We have also inquired into the treatment of the prisoners, and find that, while some of them have been frequently and severely punished, the Keeper was compelled to pursue that course to preserve the discipline of the prison.

In visiting the hospital, we found it clean and comfortable, and but few of the prisoners in bed, but a number about the room not able to do work. We have not learned of a single case upon which the grand jury could make an indictment for improper treatment.

We would further state, for the benefit of the tax-payers of this county, as also throughout the State, that, while a very large amount of money has been expended in improvements in the Penitentiary, it will require a large additional expense to furnish shop room and cell room for the constant increase in the number of prisoners sent to the Penitentiary.

We believe that if the system was changed and a warden appointed, that all necessary improvements might be made by the prisoners, and by that means a great saving be made to the State. We believe that, under the warden system, the Penitentiary would yield to the State at least $25,000 per annum, instead of the present rent of $12,000. Under a warden the prisoners might be learned trades while confined. They might be graded, and by that means some moral instruction might be given the young, with perhaps a chance to make better men of them—a thing that can not possibly be done under the existing law.

All through our investigations we have been impressed with the entire control the Keeper has over the life of the prisoner, and earnestly protest against the power given to any one man over the lives of many men—convicts though they be—and ask that this matter, through the court, may be brought before the people of the State before the next Legislature is elected.

Manure in Winter.

Manure may be applied to some trees and plants with much advantage in early winter. Dwarf garden trees and gooseberry and currant bushes which do not grow with sufficient vigor may be mulched with manure, and what is not washed into the ground before spring may then be spaded in. Dwarf pear trees, which in exposed places are liable to be injured by the freezing of the sail, are benefited by the winter covering and by the enriching of the soil. It is not too late to apply a heavy coat of manure to asparagus beds which have not yet received any. By some attention, much may be done to prevent the waste of manure as it accumulates during winter. The droppings in hen houses should be regularly swept up and deposited in stout barrels, with alternate layers of some good absorbent. Road dust is best, but if none was saved in summer, use well-sifted coal ashes. If the road dust is from clayey or loamy regions, layers of this and of the droppings of equal thickness will answer; but if coal ashes are employed, there should be four or five times as much. Keep stables frequently and well littered, to save the liquid portions, and wheel out the contents as often as twice a day into a well made manure or compost heap. Where an abundance of straw could not be obtained, we have seen excellent manures made by daily spreading a coating of fresh sand from a sand-hole kept open for this purpose, the stables being so warm as to prevent much freezing.—Country Gentleman.

How They Make Pins.

A snappish, voracious little dwarf of a machine pulls in the wire, bites it off by inches incessantly, forty bites a minute, and just as it sizes each bite a saucy little hammer with a concave face hits the end of the wire three taps and "upsets" it to a head, while he grips it in a countersunk hole between his teeth and lays it sideways in a groove, where levers and springs, playing like lightning, point the pins, and whence they are dropped into a box. The pins are then polished, and two very intelligent machines reject every crooked pin. Another automation assorts half a dozen lengths, and a perfect genius of a machine hangs the pins by the heads and transfers them to slips of paper, and by one movement sticks them all through two corrugated ridges in the paper, when the work is finished. The pin machine is one of the nearest approaches to the dexterity of the human hand that has been invented. It is about the size of a sewing machine, which it closely resembles.

How the Woman Hatched the Eggs.

A Hyde Park woman prides herself on the feat of having hatched five chickens in her bosom. She had set a hen upon the eggs in the usual manner some few days ago, but the hen died, and the woman, not to be outdone, placed the eggs in her bosom, where incubation took place, and five baby chicks were hatched. We learn that the birds are doing well, as is also the woman.

A Homily on Fools.

We have had our say about snakes, now for a word about fools. And first, it is to be said, that while some fools are as harmless as some snakes, there are other fools that are as dangerous as any snakes. But there is a difference between harmless snakes and harmless fools, in fact, that while the former do some good in the world by destroying the noxious vermin that injure vegetation; the latter are of no account whatever—if they do no harm they accomplish no good.

Among these harmless fools are to be reckoned those who know nothing, and who are to shallow to be taught anything. These naturals may be dismissed without further ceremony. Then there is your half-witted fool, who is preternaturally bright on one side of his being, and preternaturally dull on the other. This sort of fool is harmless by nature, but is very easily inclined by the Old Adam in him to do hurtful and malicious things. However, as he is easily influenced for evil, so he is also susceptible to good influences. He will be very much the creature of influence and training; and hence his case imposes a grave responsibility on parents, guardians, teachers and Christians generally. Left to himself he will go to the bad in nine cases out of ten, by his tendency to imitate the preponderant evil that is constantly set before him by the words and deeds of his companions. Therefore he must not be left to follow his own natural evil inclinations. Having a soul, and being a free and accountable agent, Christian parents, friends and teachers must redouble their exertions to keep his soul free from stain, and to drive out and keep out the evil of the world by implanting in it the knowledge of God, the love of the Saviour, the tender messages and warnings of the Gospel. Christians, do not count the half-witted fool unworthy of your efforts to aid him to make his calling and election sure!

Then there is the obstinate fool. To use a familiar phrase, this sort is "a hard nut to crack." An intelligent and sensible man who is obstinate is a tough subject; but he is ductility itself, beside the obstinate fool. This last is like those who are troubled with color-blindness, and by reason of it are either unable to distinguish between colors, or are rendered insensible to all colors. To him morally, as to others physically, red will seem to be green, green red, or purple will seem scarlet and scarlet purple, and he will stick to what he considers the evidence of his senses with impenetrable dullness. This sort may become great pests in business, in society, and in religion; but they are not to be given up as absolutely past hope. They may be made to realize their defect, just as the color-blind are taught to realize theirs, and by the use of their other faculties be led to investigate their disability and correct it. It will be found that there is nothing in the world so softening in its influence on the obstinate fool, and indeed on the obstinate and willful of every sort, as the oil of love. If one drop of the precious balm of Christ's love can be made to fall on the will of the obstinate man, it may penetrate to every part, awakening in his heart a return of love for Christ and for all men as brethren in Christ. If this can be done, the battle is more than half won. Christians, try to introduce this precious oil in the heart of the obstinate man, whether he be wise or foolish!

Besides these are these others: The good-natured fool, who agrees with everybody, assents to everything, and is all things to all men; who has no convictions, and is as incapable of taking a lasting impression as the water that bubbles past us in a brook. And there is also the fool that knows too much, who is presumptuous, wise in his own conceit, and past learning anything, who perpetually stalks about, with his bristles erect like the "quills on the fretful porcupine," always ready to cavil and dispute, and never so happy as when he is ventilating superior wisdom. But even these are not to be given up without an effort. If we can make no impression on the good-natured babbler, the sun of God's mercy or the frost of His wrath may change his nature; and if the presumptuous fool will not listen to us or be convinced, even though we should bray him in a mortar, the gentle dew of God's grace may nurture the little, unobserved seed of humanity in his heart till it transforms his nature.

Lastly, there is the fool that hath said in his heart "There is no God!" This sort unites in itself the folly of every other kind of fool. He is blind, and malicious, and obstinate, and without convictions, and presumptuous. If it is impossible for us to do or say anything to open his eyes, to touch his conscience, to soften his obdurate heart, let us remember that with God all things are possible. All that we can do, remembering the saying that "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much," is to pray for him. Bearing this gracious promise in mind, Christians should never cease to pray, not only for this particular kind, but for all sorts and conditions of fools.—Christian Intelligence.

WHY is it that two young people never do get so divinely spoony and sentimental over a hot oyster stew, as they do at the same table, in the same restaurant, over plates of ice cream? We don't know why it is, but they never do.

THE fall style of neuralgia is the same as worn last year.

NOT LOST.

The look of sympathy, the gentle word
Spoken so low that only angels heard;
The secret act of pure self-sacrifice,
Unseen by men, and marked by angels' eyes—
These are not lost.

The happy dreams that gladdened all our youth,
When dreams had less of self and more of truth;
The childlike faith, so tranquil and so sweet,
Which sat like Mary at the Master's feet:
These are not lost.

The kindly plans devised for others' good,
So seldom guessed, so little understood;
The quiet, steadfast love that strove to win
Some wanderer from the woeful ways of sin:
These are not lost.

Not lost, O Lord! for in thy city bright,
Our eyes shall see the past by clearer light;
And things long hidden from our gaze below,
Then will reveal, and we shall surely know
They were not lost.

A Fire King.

The business of "Fire King" is as old as the conjuror's art, but for many years no specialist, save one, has appeared in this line whose performance was above contempt. This one is Professor Rel-Muenb, who has just completed an engagement at Trimble's. The man who drinks boiling oil, and dances in his bare feet upon a plate of iron, red hot and plainly visible to the eyes of his audience, excited the curiosity of the writer, and, in conversation yesterday, an interesting sketch of his career was obtained from him. He is a Russian by birth, his real name being Louis Alexis, and to his ability to handle hot irons with impugnity he adds the accomplishments of a remarkable linguist. A passion to acquire the mastery of tongues led him to leave home surreptitiously, and, in the course of a Bohemian existence during his boyish years, he fell upon the secret that determined his vocation in life. He was born in 1843, his father being a Court-officer, and, his mother dying soon after, he was consigned to the care of a maiden aunt in the suburbs of the city. His father went to England, where he remained until Louis was eleven years of age. An event in the boy's career then brought his father back to Russia post-haste. Louis in his eighth year was apprenticed to a Civil Engineer, but after three years he took French leave of his master and attached himself to Miller's Cirque-Gautier, in Stockholm, Sweden. The boy was passionately fond of reading, and one day he discovered a recipe for making the flesh insensible to red-hot iron. He was then fifteen years of age, and he at once made an experiment with the recipe, and was so successful that, with brief intervals, he has since followed the business of a "Fire King." He has given exhibitions before Kings Frederick and Christian, of Denmark; the Viceroy of Egypt, by whom he was engaged at the opening of the Suez Canal, and the Prince of Wales. He has performed in all the countries of Europe, and in his rambles has acquired a knowledge of the English, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Russian, Polish, Swedish, Danish and Arabic languages.

The recipe, by the use of which he obtains so complete an immunity from the effects of fire, he, of course, will not divulge. He says, however, that the chemical is of a chalky nature. After he has prepared the surface of his skin for the fire-test, the hottest metal feels cool to him, and he is not obliged to resort to any specific to restore his skin to its natural condition after the application of the heated irons. The boiling oil he drinks without arranging special protection for his throat or stomach. He has habituated himself to the practice, and, though it burns his throat a little in passing, after it has been swallowed he has no further trouble. His peculiar use of fire and heat seems not to have affected his physical organization. He is a man of massive frame and the picture of health, and his thirty-three years sit as lightly upon him as if his mode of life had been of the least trying character.

Thoughtful Thoughts.

There's a good wide ditch between saying and doing.

The pleasures of this world are deceitful; they promise more than they give. They trouble us in seeking them, they do not satisfy us when possessing them, and they make us despair in losing them.

Of all the lovers on earth the one most like divine love is that of a good mother—so unselfish, unforgetting, watchful, considerate, free from jealousy, and desiring the good of her children far more than her own happiness.

The human heart is like a millstone in a mill; when you put wheat under it, it turns and grinds, and bruises the wheat into flour; if you put no wheat into it, it still grinds on, but then it is itself it grinds, and it slowly wears away.

The man who lives right, and is right, has more power in his silence than anyother has by his words. Character is like bells that ring out sweet music, and which, when touched accidentally even, resound with sweet music.

Who Was Cain's Wife.

The Rev. C. P. McCrathy, who preaches every Sunday in the University building, Washington Square, as pastor of what is called the American Free Church, endeavored to answer the question, "Who was Cain's wife?" last evening. He took his text from the fourth chapter of Genesis and the seventeenth verse. The preacher said he had selected the peculiar subject, announced, at the request of several members of the congregation. Maintaining that old theories, as to the meaning of the Bible stories had ceased to be tenable because of the increased light of science, he says that the theory held by many as to Cain's wife would also have to be abandoned. "The orthodox answer to the question," said he, "perhaps Cain married his sister." Well, I don't think he did. Now, I am not going to shirk the answer of this question. I have a theory of our race which others do not believe in. Nine out of every ten believe that the human race came from one pair. I don't believe it. Do you say that is heretical? Perhaps it is, but this is not the question to be answered by those who cling to the old theories. That old theory can never answer it. In the first place, Cain could not have married his sister when he departed for the land of Nod, because he had no sister. When Seth was born, Adam was only 130 years old, a very young man in those days, and Seth was his third child. There is no mention of daughters. In the second place, he departed to a country where there were people, and he feared these people would slay him because of his crime, and the Lord recognized the reality of his danger and set a mark upon him that he might be saved. The Bible nowhere states that there were only two people originally created. Adam was the generic name of that human race and male and female created he them. Do you believe that negroes and Chinese are the descendants of the same progenitors with ourselves? I don't. Cain went over to the land of Nod, and there became the chief of a race which he found there. He built a city. He could not have done this alone. This, then, must be my answer: There were races of people upon the earth at the time Cain was driven out a vagabond, and from this race Cain took his wife."

The preacher dwelt considerable on the lesson to be drawn from the life of Cain, and exhorted all to avoid the little sins, for even Cain did not become a murderer all at once, but was led up to that great crime by envy and jealous feelings.

A Future State.

The bill to establish the Territory of Huron and provide a temporary Governor therefor, which passed the Senate a month since, proposes to create the new Territory out of the northern part of the present Territory of Dakota. It has been before Congress four years, and, having passed the Senate, now goes to the House of Representatives. The present Territory of Dakota contains 150,932 square miles, and the new Territory would have an area of about 70,000 square miles. It is to be a parallelogram, extending from Minnesota on the east something less than four hundred miles to Montana on the west, and from the British Possessions on the north two hundred miles to the boundary of the remaining Territory on the south. Its population is estimated at about 10,000. It is said that one of the best farming regions in the United States lies in the proposed new Territory. Among the reasons given for the passage of the bill are that the settlements in Dakota are comprised of two communities entirely separate and distinct from their geographical position.

The inhabited portion of Southern Dakota—the old settled portion of the Territory—is along the Missouri River. Its commercial relations are with Nebraska, Sioux City and through Iowa to Chicago. Northern Dakota, which the bill proposes to create into a new Territory, is settled two hundred miles along the proposed Northern Pacific Railway, and along the Red River of the North. Its commercial relations are with Duluth, St. Paul and Milwaukee. The inhabitants are often compelled in winter to travel as far east as Chicago to reach the capital (Yankton) in the southern part of the Territory, there being no direct means of communication between Northern and Southern Dakota. Hence, it was deemed advisable to create the new Territory.

DRUNKENNESS is said to be on the decrease among the well-to-do classes in England, who look upon it as an evidence of bad breeding or bad taste, but it is increasing among the poor. We think it quite possible that the same state of things exist in this country. The drinking usages of society are becoming less drunken, and as the distruction of the poor is their poverty, so their habit of drinking becomes worse and worse. This is shown by the increase of the sale of intoxicants, which far exceeds the increase of the population.

WHY is dancing like new milk? Because it strengthens the calves.

Keep Straight Ahead.

Pay no attention to slanderers and gossip-mongers. Keep straight on in your course and let their backbiting die the death of neglect. What is the use of laying awake nights, brooding over the remark of some false friend, that runs through your brain like lightning? What is the use of getting into a worry and fret over gossip that has been set afloat to your disadvantage by some meddlesome busybody who has more time than character? These things can not possibly injure you, unless, indeed, you take notice of them, and in combatting them give them standing and character. If what is said about you is true, see yourself right; if it is false, let it go for what it will fetch. If a bee sting you would you go to the hive to destroy it? Would not a thousand come upon you? It is wisdom to say little respecting injuries you have received. We are generally losers in the end if we stop to refute all the backbiting and gossiping we may hear by the way. They are annoying, it is true, but not dangerous, so long as we do not stop to expostulate and scold. Our characters are formed and sustained by ourselves, by our own actions and pursuit, and not by others. Let us always bear in mind that "that calumniators may usually be trusted to time and the slow but steady justices of public opinion." And oh! how much evil designers fear public opinion.—Western Tobacco Journal.

Royal Whims.

Queen Isabella of Spain has the most valuable and beautiful collection of lace in the world. It contains lace of every country and of every epoch, and of every sort, each the most perfect specimens of its kind. She has dresses of point d'Alencon worth $200,000; she has also trimmings of all points (point 'dAngleterre, point de Venise, point d'Angleeon, &c.), each set of which is worth even more than $20,000. Queen Victoria has the most valuable collection of cashmeres in the world; it is reckoned to be worth $1,000,000. Some of these were 20 years on the loom, others are interlaced with golden threads, and their embroideries are adorned with jewels and diamonds. The Empress of Australia has the most admirable collection of emeralds. The Grand Duchess of Saxe-Weimer (grand-danghter of Czar Paal I. of Russia) has the most valuable collection of rubies known. No collection of pearls and turquoises equals that possessed by the imperial family of Russia. The royal family of England has the peerless collection of sapphires.

VERY earnest efforts are being made in England to abate drunkenness, so dreadfully prevalent, by the establishment of comfortable eating houses, where intoxicating drink is served only at meals. Dr. Hawels, an eminent clergyman, points out that the discomfort and bad food of the dining rooms drive people to the gin shops. While the former are dingy and dreary, the latter are just the reverse, so the young workmen gulp down their unpalatable food, and then go for the glass which inebriates. M. Rathbone, the philanthropic member of Liverpool, stated recently at a meeting in that city that during the previous week the British Workman Public House Company had sold 7,388 gallons of tea, cocoa, and coffee in 75,000 portions, and the takings were £469 3s. 9d. The object of the company is to give all the comforts of the puplic house without its temptations. In proof of the gains of public houses, he mentioned that $50,000 was offered for the lease and good will of one opposite the Liverpool Sailors' Home.

THE Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad has completed its new bridge over the Mississippi at LaCrosse, Wisconsin. The total length of the structure from the eastern bank of the Black River to the Minnesota shore is 1.8 miles, and that of the bridge proper, over the channels of the Mississippi 1,688 feet, with 600 feet of trestle-work across Campbell's Island. The whole of the superstructure of the bridge is iron, and was turned out by the American Bridge Company—a large portion of the material used being the product of Wisconsin—and consisting of five spans of 150 feet each over the east channel of the river. Across the west channel are two spans of 104 feet each, one of 250 feet, and the draw span of 360 feet. The through passenger and freight trains are now running regularly over the bridge. It is also to be used by the trains of the Chicago, Dubuque and Minnesota road. Its cost is stated to be about $500,000.

AN old pioneer, who believed that "what was to be would be," lived in a region infested by Indians. He always took his gun with him; and once finding that some of his family had borrowed it, he would not go without it. His friends rallied him, saying that there was no danger of the Indians, as anyhow he would not die till his time came. "Yes," said the old Leatherstocking; "but suppose I was to meet an Indian, and his time was come, it wouldn't do not to have my gun."

NATURE, among those occasional odd freaks wherein she seems to overturn her own laws, often reverses in the strangest manner the conditions of destroyer and prey. Toads, it is well known, live on insects, and for this reason are valuable aids to gardeners and farmers in protecting their crops. Lately there has been discovered an insect which lives on toads, and which afflicts those reptiles in a way that suggests the concentrated revenge of the whole insect class. It deposits its eggs on the eyes of the toads; and the larvæ, in the form of minute white worms, devour not only those organs, but the nose and jaws of the unfortunate batrachian. Curiously enough, the toads do not seem to suffer, but continue their usual habits apparently undisturbed. The name bucilia bufonivora has been given the fly.—Scientific American.

SOME of the newspapers are astonished at a hose's pulling the plug out of a bung-hole of a barrel for the purpose of slaking his thirst. It's extraordinary. Now, if the horse had pulled the barrel out of the bung-hole and slaked his thirst with the plug, or if the barrel had pulled the bung-hole out of the horse and slaked its thirst with the plug, or if the barrel had pulled the bung-hole out of the plug and slaked its thirst with the horse, or if the plug had pulled the horse out of the barrel and slaked its thirst with the bung-hole, or if the bung-hole had pulled the thirst out of the horse and slaked the plug with the barrel, or if the barrel had pulled the horse out of the bung-hole and plugged its thirst with the slake, it might be worth while to make a fuss about it.

ONE of the most striking features of the great Brooklyn horror is the youth of the victims. This is accounted for by the fact that they were mostly in the gallery, which is generally occupied by the young who earn their own living. Of the one hundred and forty whose ages are recorded, the classification is found to be as follows: Seven years old, 1; nine, 1; ten, 2; twelve, 3; thirteen, 6; fourteen, 2; fifteen, 6; sixteen, 5; seventeen, 11; eighteen, 18; nineteen, 14; twenty, 11; twenty-one, 5; twenty-two, 12; twenty-three, 10; twenty-four, 2; twenty-five, 3; twenty-six, 4; twenty-seven, 2; twenty-eight, 4; twenty-nine, 1; thirty, 5; from thirty to fifty, 10; above fifty, 2. The average age of the victims whose age is known, is twenty-one years and five months.

THERE are three things a good wife should resemble, and yet these three things she should not resemble. She should be like a town clock—keep time and regularity. She should not be like a town clock—speak so loud that all town may hear her. She should be like a snail—prudent and keep within her own house. She should not be like a snail—carry all she has on her back. She should be like an echo—speak when she is spoken to. She should not be like an echo—determined always to have the last word.

GEN. CROOK'S army has reached Fort Fetterman, in Wyoming Territory, and is at once to be disbanded. The campaign has not been a very glorious one, and the trials of the soldiers have been great. The cold of late has caused them much suffering, and the army may as well disband, for it can do nothing in weather like that it is now experiencing. On Christmas the mercury in the thermometer froze, and the endurance of both men and animals was severely tried.—N. Y. Sun.

NEXT May will be celebrated throughout the Catholic communion as the fiftieth anniversary of the consecration of Bishop of Pius IX. It is proposed to signalize the event all over the world, by addresses with signatures of priests and people and attached, and by an offering of money to aid him in the expenses necessary to the care of all the churches.

THE doctors have been finding considerable trichinæ in the pork this winter, but this discovery has created no alarm among the pork eaters as they seem to have long since arrived at the conclusion that it is nothing new, and they relish the meat the same as ever before.—Dearborn (Ind.) Independent.

IT is stated that over 10,000 persons of unsound mind are now confined in the lunatic asylums of the United States, driven mad from over excitement on the subject of Spiritualism, and that insanity from the same cause is prevalent in England, and increasing every day.

SAYS an unsuccessful candidate: "One never knows how mean he really is, until he is a candidate for office; and ever after it remains a mystery to him why he is permitted to live by those over-righteous newspapers, if such a rascal."

THE force of habit is well illustrated by a little incident that recently happened to Dr. Mary Walker. She got up one morning much later than usual, and in her haste to get on her apparel, endeavored to put on her pants over her head.

THIS week we have quite an interesting letter from Mr. S. B. Huey, of Texas, and doubtless had it not been for that palatable "lay out" on his table, he would have detailed many other matters of interest.

THE weather for the past month has been much more injurious to the business of this part of the country than the Presidential troubles. All branches of industry have been embarrassed by the severe winter, and thousands of persons have been thrown out of employment. But while we know that one of the causes of the depression in business is temporary, we know not when nor how the other will terminate, nor to what extent all classes may have to suffer.

RICHARD SHUCK, who, not long since, was sentenced in the Owen County Criminal Court, to be hanged for the murder of his father-in-law, was to have been executed last Friday, but his case was carried to the Court of Appeals and is now pending in that court. Shuck is in jail in Frankfort.

THERE is being some rigid legislation against the sale of liquor in Vermont. The new law provides that every place where liquor is sold as a beverage shall be declared a common nuisance, the proprietor fined $200 or less, besides being forbidden to reoccupy the premises till he gives bond not to offend again.

THE sale of pews in the Plymouth Church on the 9th inst., did not pan out equal to the sale of last year. The sum total of the sales was about $15,000 less than that of last year. The fare to the Land of the Redeemed by way of the Plymouth Church has been reduced, doubtless, on account of the hard times that now prevail.

IN South America they are having a little unpleasantness. The Constitutional army, 2,500 strong, under the command of General Aparicion, and the Revolutionary forces under Generals Urbina and Veintermilla, met on the 2d inst., and had a three-hour engagement, resulting in the defeat of the former. The battle was fought at Cuite, Ecuador.

A TRAIN of cars on the St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern Railway, conveying about 200 soldiers on their way to Washington from Fort Reno, struck a broken rail near Warrenton Missouri, last Sunday night. Two coaches were thrown from the track and their contents of "Blue Coat" pretty generally jumbled up, but none seriously injured.

THE County Clerk's office being supplied with additional room for records, the inmates of that office are engaged overhauling the old records, and are putting "old wine in new bottles" as it were. The additional supply of arrangments for protecting the records is a great improvement, but, in a few years, at the present rate of increase in the records, it will be necessary to again enlarge.

A GANG of counterfeiters were bounced in Cincinnati last week. This was one of the most important gangs that infest the United States. Several of the plates and a considerable quantity of the "queer" was taken in, as well as some of the principal characters that have been engaged in running the mill. Detectives have been on their track for some time, but have been defeated in every other attempt to scoop them.

SIX illicit distillers were lodged in jail at Lebanon, Sunday, by the Deputy United States Marshal. Three of them had previously been lodged in jail in Taylor County, and their rescue attempted by a mob that surrounded the jail and demanded their release. The Marshal and Jailer were in the prison as guards and defied the mob to attempt to liberate the prisoners. They concluded the attempt would not be a safe business and left.

THE severe cold weather has, doubtless, increased, to some extent the prices of tobacco. We find that the price has advanced and that there was not a large amount offered during the past week. The sales reported for the week are as follows:

76 hhds. Mason County (Ky.) District, trash, lugs and leaf—30 at $6@7 95, 21 at $8@9 95, 18 at $10@13 75, 7 at $15@19 50. 4 hhds Owen County (Ky.) at $6 65@8 80; 2 boxes at $23. 42 hhds. Pendleton County (Ky.) District, trash, lugs and leaf—1 at $4 70, 18 at $5@7 95, 15 at $8 15@8 90, 7 at $10@14 25, 1 at $16. 2 hhds. Boone County (Ky.) at $4 60@8 75.

THE Committee appointed by the Lower House of Congress to ascertain the privilege of the House in counting the electoral vote, recommends the adoption of a set of resolutions setting forth that the President of the Senate has no power under the Constitution to count the vote, and that he only receives the sealed list transmitted to him by the several Electoral Clerks to keep safe, and open the certificates in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives. These resolutions claim that the counting of the electoral vote belongs to the Senate and House, and that the House has equal power with the Senate in the matter.

AT the last meeting of the Burlington and Bellevue Turnpike Company it was decided to adjourn over till the first Monday in February, that some plan might be devised by which some disputed point, sprung during the meeting, might be satisfactorily adjusted. This adjournment gave all parties concerned one month to consider the matter that brought about the adjournment. The building of this road is of vast importance, and those interested will certainly allow no insignificant cause to interfere with the building of a road, the benefit of which is not merely confined to the present land-holders along the route, but, at a nominal cost, will be kept in good repair for ages to come, and generation after generation will be recipients of the benefits arising therefrom. This road will stand in the same relation to the farmers as does that of any other improvement made by them on their lands.

THE Chairman of the National Democratic Executive Committee, Abraham S. Hewitt, of New York, is reported as having refused to call a National Convention of Democrats to meet in the City of Washington, on the 14th of February, as recommended by the convention held in Columbus, Ohio, on the 8th inst. He says the resolutions adopted by the Ohio Convention have done much harm, and that the Democrats in the East will be a unit for Hayes the moment steps are taken to inaugurate Tilden by force, and that he would rather resign his position as Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee than seem to give his approval, as the representative of the Eastern Democrats, to any scheme looking to that object.

THE breaking up of ice in the Ohio River which commenced Friday night has distroyed an immense amount of property along the river, as well as many lives. There was a terrible slaughter of steamboats, coalboats and wharfboats, in fact, water crafts of all kinds were cut down and carried away by the fields of ice as they swept down the stream, the steamboat men being the heavy losers. It has been many years since the Ohio River has been as completely blockaded, from source to mouth, for the length of time it has been this winter, and the destruction of property almost unparalleled.

At Pittsburg the destruction of property was the greatest ever known. The river at that point contained a great many coalboats and other crafts that were totally destroyed. The loss there is estimated at millions of dollars. At Cincinnati, several steamboats were cut down and sunk, and others cut loose and carried away. At that place the loss of coal has been immense, the greater portion of the burden of loss falling on the Pittsburg coal dealers. Their loss is about $200,000. At Louisville the steamers escaped but the coalboats suffered considerably. The great loss caused by the ice is not confined to the Ohio River, but at many places on the Mississippi. This has been one of the most remarkable winters for ice of which there is any record, and the destruction of property greater.

THE State of Louisiana has, for seven days past, been enjoying a duplex State Government. Nicholls, Democrat, and Packard, Republican, have each been inaugurated Governor of that Commonwealth, and commenced lawmaking, Packard in the State House and Nicholls elsewhere in the city of New Orleans. Nicholls out-Generaled Packard and got possession of the State Offices except the State House. Packard expected to be recognized by Grant as the legal Governor, and protected by the United States' soldiers that are in the city, but the President has given him no consolation, and the soldiers are ordered to interfere only so far as it is necessary to preserve the peace. The policy of the Nicholls Legislature is evidently to avoid any collision with the Packard Assembly, and give the United States soldiers no excuse for interfering.

Both Assemblies have been balloting for United States Senator, but have, thus far, been unable to make a choice. The Packard Legislature has several candidates before it, and of that number Pinchback is one.

Since the balloting for Senator began, several members have deserted Packard's Legislature and joined Nicholls' forces. Last Saturday evening Pinchback, accompanied by three Senators, entered the Democratic Senate, and two of the Senators were admitted to seats and sworn in.

Thus far, in Louisiana, the two Legislatures have not created the disorder that might be expected to accompany such double governments.

On the fourth page this week will be found an exhibit of the claims allowed by the Boone County Court at its October term, 1876, and January term, 1877, and ordered paid out of the levy made for 1877. That our readers may arrive at a proper conclusion as to the way the claims allowed and charged to the county this year, compare with those of last, it will be necessary to contrast them with those of 1876. For services rendered in 1876 and ordered paid out of the levy for 1877, for keeping and burying paupers, holding inquests and pauper practice, the allowance is $1,65 48, being $220 23 more than the amount paid out of the levy for 1876 for same class of services. $46 of this increase is in pauper practice and $14 in allowances for inquests. The remainder being in the item of keeping paupers. The officers of elections held during the year were allowed the same as last year. The allowances made Justices present at the different terms of court during the year is only $7 in excess of that made for 1876, while there is no allowance made for work on roads. Last year the County Judge and the County Attorney were each paid $300 for their services which were rendered in 1875. For services in 1876 the County Judge is allowed $454, and the County Attorney $400, being an increase of $254 in the allowance of these two officials. Among the claims that were not presented in 1875–6 are the following: M. S. Rice, survey at Big Bone 86; John S. Phelps and R. C. Green, as committee in looking after the county land at Big Bone Springs, each 86; Oscar Gaines, committee on Court-house and Jail, $150; Cyrus Riddell, committee on same, $15. The additional allowances will, to some considerable extent, account for the $1,223 more being allowed and ordered paid out of the levy for 1877 than was paid out of that for 1876.

LINES,

Respectfully dedicated to the Memory of the late Rev. Samuel Glover, of

They shall rest from their labors that die in the Lord,
In the thrice blessed promise of God's Holy Word;
Rest from all labors, forever at rest—
No waking of sorrow, in that land of the blest.

The curtains have dropped on the scenes of this life,
And hid from his sight its sorrow and strife;
Has dropped on its hopes, its toils and its fears,
Its anguish and pain, its sighs and its tears.

The battle is ended, the warfare is o'er,
He has crossed the deep river, has reached the bright shore,
Where night never comes, and storms never blow,
Where the streams of life's waters eternally flow.

He has entered the city, has passed through the gates,
And received the bright crown, for the righteous that waits;
He has laid down the cross, and now waves the palm,
Redeemed from all sin by the blood of the Lamb.

MRS. L. W. WOODS.

LOUISVILLE COMMERCIAL: At a wedding of colored people a short distance from the city last Wednesday, there was a scene not usually incidental to such occasions, but one that will be laughed over for many days. At the close of the ceremony, the minister took the hand of the bride, and was about to imprint a kiss upon her lips, a proceeding which evidently did not please the bridegroom, for at that instant he struck out from the shoulder, and sent the minister sprawling over the floor among the feet of the guests. There is one minister who will not kiss any more brides.

HENDERSON NEWS: Suppose we had a Democratic President and that the election of Hayes or Tilden depended on the electoral vote of Ohio, which, on the face of the returns show only some 3,000 or 4,000 majority for Hayes, what would the Republicans say were the Democrats, with the President and United States army, at their back, to set to work, through the "thimble rigging" of a convenient Returning Board, to convert this majority into a majority for Tilden? With such machinery it would be comparatively an easy matter to "satisfy" the judges of election, from whose decision of course "there could be no appeal," there were enough of frauds and "intimidation" to justify their actions.

THE SUN.
1877. NEW YORK. 1877.
The different editions of THE SUN during the next year will be the same as during the year that has just passed. The daily edition will on week days be a sheet of four pages, and on Sundays a sheet of eight pages, or 56 broad columns; while the weekly edition will be a sheet of eight pages, of the same dimensions and character that are already familiar to our friends.
THE SUN will continue to be the strenuous adverser of reform and retrenchment, and of the substitution of statesmanship, wisdom and integrity for hollow pretence, imbecility and fraud in the administration of public affairs. It will contend for the government of the people by the people and for the people, as opposed to government by frauds in the ballot-box and in the counting of votes enforced by military violence. It will endeavor to supply its readers—a body now not far from a million of souls—with the most careful, complete and trustworthy accounts of current events, and will employ for this purpose a numerous and carefully selected staff of reporters and correspondents. Its reports from Washington, especially, will be full, accurate and fearless; and it will doubtless continue to deserve and enjoy the hatred of those who thrive by plundering the Treasury or by usurping what the law does not give them, while it will endeavor to merit the confidence of the public by defending the rights of the people against the encroachments of unjustified power.
The price of the daily SUN will be 65 cents a month or $6 50 a year, post paid, or with the Sunday edition $7 70 a year.
The SUNDAY edition alone, eight pages, $1 20 a year, post paid.
The WEEKLY SUN, eight pages of 56 broad columns, will be furnished during 1877 at the rate of $1 a year, post paid.
The benefit of this large reduction from the previous rate for the WEEKLY can be enjoyed by individual subscribers, without the necessity of making up clubs. At the same time, if any of our friends choose to aid in extending our circulation, we shall be grateful to them, and to any such person who sends us ten or more subscribers from one town will be entitled to one copy of the paper for himself without charge. At one dollar a year, postage paid, the expenses of paper and printing are barely repaid; and, considering the size of the sheet and the quality of its contents, we are confident the people will consider THE WEEKLY SUN the cheapest newspaper published in the world, and we trust also one of the very best. A DAY AMONG THE GRANGERS.

Installations, Dinner, Speeches, and a Counting Out.

We are not, as many of our readers are entitled to witness the proceedings within the tyled recesses of the Grange; but semi-occasionally some of the lodges have public installations, spiced with turkey and many other toothsome articles of diet, with which they load the table in their hall, and then go out in the hedges and by-ways and bring in the benighted and invite them to partake, without money and without price. It was under just such circumstances that several of us outsiders found ourselves present at the hall of Speedwell Grange No. 487 last Saturday, that being the day for the installation of the officers elected for the ensuing year. The low temperature and the bad condition of the roads considerably curtailed the number that would have been present had the weather been favorable, but as it was the crowd was sufficiently large for the dimensions of the hall, which, by the way, was built by the hands of the members of the lodge, and at no great cost to them in the matter of dollars and cents. The furniture, too, is purely homemade, there not being a chair, desk, stand or altar in the room that is not the fruit of home labor, but in such style as to insure comfort to the members while assembled in their lodge.

But we are about to leave our subject. About 11:30 a. m., preparation for the installation was made by appointing C. C. Conner, of Point Pleasant Grange, Chairman; Benjamin Rice, of Bellevue Grange, Assistant Steward; James Smith, of Golden Grange, Chaplain; and W. M. Conner, of Point Pleasant Grange, Installing officer. The Chairman stated the object of the meeting to be the installation of the officers chosen to serve Speedwell Grange the ensuing year. The Chaplain then offered prayer, which was followed by a very beautiful song.

The Installing Officer prefaced the ceremonies by explaining to the audience that the Grange represents the farm, the highest office of which is the Master, then the Overseer, and in that order would the installation be conducted. Cyrus L. Crisler was given the obligation and installed Master. The remaining twelve officers took the obligation at the same time and were installed as follows: J. M. Acra, Overseer; James Crisler, Lecturer; Frank Crisler, Steward; Wesley Underhill, Assistant Steward; John Mitchell, Chaplain; Mrs. Anna Crisler, Secretary; George W. Popham, Treasurer; John Batchelor, Gatekeeper; Mrs. Sarah Crisler, Ceres; Miss Ellen Snyder, Pomona; Mrs. Sarah J. Crisler, Flora; Mrs. Mossellah Underhill, Sowarddess.

The officers being installed, a recess was taken that the ladies might arrange the dinner that had been brought in by the lady members. A table was constructed of the benches, and was soon covered with all the appetite of a person enjoying good health could demand. Everybody was invited to partake, and it is needless to say that the eating was one part of the programme in which all "heartily" took part. There was no want of the spirit of "co-operation" manifested about that time of day, and the Granger and the middle-man exercised the same "grip" on the victuals. The gates were thrown open, and an hour of social chat and mirth indulged in.

After dinner, the Master called the house to order, and stated the audience expected some speeches from some of the visiting brethren present.

Mr. Wm. Conner was called, and responded in a brief speech, in the introductory remarks of which he gave the outsiders to understand that his remarks would be addressed to the brethren. He took up the social feature of the Order, considering it the most important, and discussed it at some length, urging upon the members of the Grange the necessity of improving it. The next considered was the educational feature. He pressed upon the members the great advantages they might derive by a diligent and unceasing pursuit of the benefits arising from the instructions received in their Order, claiming that the farmers are not only taught thereby how to make money, but are instructed how to devise means to avoid being robbed of what they have made; that it teaches them how to have their wrongs righted without resorting to a Court of Justice, and that no good Grangers would go further than the Grange Court to settle difficulties between each other. The financial feature was next discussed. To correct wrongs in this line, the speaker thinks the co-operative societies very necessary, and favors the establishment of the Cincinnati Supply House.

Mr. Ben Rice took the floor and delivered himself of one of those speeches for which he, of those late days, has become notorious. He does not think it will redound to the good of the Order to establish too many Grange stores, as they should be operated by the members of the lodge, and the more stores there are to run, the greater the expense to keep them going. That the farmers, for many years, have borne the burden of this government and organizing an order for their protection against the numerous monopolies is a duty that the farmers owe themselves as a class. He indorsed all that had been said by Mr. Conner in regard to the social and educational features. Through his speech ran a thread of reform. In the closing remarks, Mr. Rice said he could remember when it took but eight yards of calico to make a young lady a dress, but now it takes twenty-four, and he thinks this should be reformed; he was willing to compromise on twelve yards. [None of the young ladies present signified a willingness to accept the conditions of the reform.]

Mr. James Smith, of Golden Grange, was the next to speak. He claimed all the facts and arguments were on the Grangers' side of the question, and that they could easily carry their points. He then explained some of the points of difference between honest Grangers and rascally anti-Grangers. In one instance the difference consisted in two or three barrels of nasty wet Orleans sugar, primed with about four inches of good sugar. This had been poked off on an honest man at Grange prices. And many other things spoke by of the which we will not now write.

Mr. James Crisler, the Grange Lecturer, concluded the speaking in a brief and logical speech that was of much credit to the Order and the Lecturer.

At this point of the proceedings, the Master informed the outsiders that the Grange had business to transact, and it would be necessary for them to occupy the hall alone. Receiving many thanks from the Master, on behalf of the lodge, for their attention during the exercises, those not Grangers "slid out," some in sleds, some in sleighs, some in jumpers, some on horseback and some on foot back, all well pleased with the manner in which the day had been spent.

THE Cynthiana Democrat, in enumerating the many fair members of the female sex who spent their holidays in that town, mentions the name of Miss Mary Lampton, of Boone.

FOR some time past the possibility of organizing a literary society at this place has been discussed, and last Friday night a meeting was held in the Methodist Church for the pupose of taking the initiatory steps in the direction of an organization. After some deliberation the meeting resolved to organize as far as practicable that night. Elder H. J. Foster was elevated to the position of President, Mr. Lewis Conner made Vice-President and Mr. M. T. Garnett, guilt driver for the society. This was the amount of business put through the mill on the trial night. The meeting then adjourned to meet again the following Wednesday night. It is understood sessions will be secret.

IN looking over the claims allowed by the County Court, and ordered to be paid out of last year's levy, we find Pinch, Foster, Kirkpatrick, Blythe, Westbay, Tilley and twenty others each allowed $1 60 for sleeping in the Court-house one night, or, in other words, for guarding the jail to keep off an anticipated mob the first night the negro Berkely took lodging therein.

GOOSEHONEE, one of the tribe of weather prognosticators, says, in the Frankfort Yeoman, that February will see the mercury go to zero, and that there will be a frost after the 20th of May this year. Hope it will be so long after that it will be in its season.

ON our return from the Grange meeting, Saturday, we encountered an ex-Granger whom we have serious doubts as to Brother Smith's ability to convince of the error of his way. He exhibited a willingness to talk "back and forth" on the subject.

THE youngest crop of ice on the creeks and branches is said to have been the only ice torn up by the thaw.

LETTER FROM TEXAS.

TARRANT COUNTY, TEXS., Jan. 6, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

I have delayed dropping you a line longer than I intended, but am not flattering myself you are greatly disappointed or that your readers have suffered an irreparable loss for the "home paper" comes to us each week, freighted with a variety of interesting correspondence. Especially so are the articles of old Brother Smith, giving an account of the oyster trade at the old town in the Old Dominion, as well as a description of some of the ancient relics of that same old town. Your county correspondence is, to us, very entertaining; perhaps more so than to your home readers.

The weather here since my last, up to the 23d of last month, has been very pleasant—much the same as the usual September and October weather in Northern Kentucky—clear, frosty nights and bright, pleasant days. Saturday, the 23d ult., was a day of continuous rain; turned colder about dark, began to snow about daylight next morning, and continued most of the day. At night the snow was about two inches deep. Christmas day was cold for this country, thermometer standing at 26. On the 28th it snowed half of the day. The 29th was the coldest day I have experienced in Texas—mercury at 20. I cut ice three inches thick from a pond, Saturday morning. Sunday, the last day of 1876, was a snowy, stormy day for any country. The storm ceased about 1 o'clock in the evening, when the snow was full six inches deep. Men who have lived here over twenty years say they have never known so deep a snow nor as severe weather. The snow is now all gone, and to-day is bright and pleasant. Up to the 23d ult., plowing had been going on steadily. My next neighbor had finished plowing for both corn and cotton.

The wheat crop sown is not looking well. The greater part was sowed very late, and, owing to the dry, cold weather, has made but little growth; in fact, some is not yet up. The latest to our neighborhood from Kentucky is Mr. Letton, of Bourbon County (a son-in-law of my neighbor), with a car-load of graded Short-Horns; also, a few pairs of Poland and Berk-shire pigs. Farmers here are making considerable effort to improve their stock of cattle, though under very discouraging circumstances, since horse-stock only about one out of four of those brought from the North have lived any length of time. Mr. Wilhoit, formerly of East Bend, is improving a farm east of here, in Ellis County, and is dealing extensively in fine cattle and sheep brought from Bourbon.

Well, I believe I told you in my last—Nov. 11th—that nameless would be elected before that reached you—and, sure enough, Ohio is making a "stir" at her old "W. L. that same thing was done; but many other things have been done since that time which place the stamp of dark uncertainty upon the future of the U. S. Republic. Many people here in the South had come to the conclusion that Radical rule had become a fixed thing in this country beyond their power to change, and they did not believe the arm of the Northern Democracy competent to the task. Hence, but few were prepared to realize as true the telegram that came to us on November 8th, announcing the election of Tilden and Hendricks; but, since learning to believe that these gentlemen have been honestly and justly elected, they await with increasing anxiety the action of Northern Tilden men and honest Republicans. The uncertain condition of political matters has, to some extent, depressed business even here in the country. All are awaiting the sequel of this strife, anxious and fearful. I heard one "rebel veteran" inquired of, the other day, where his place was in this fight. His reply was, "To stand still and see the glory of God."

I find from the RECORDER that excitement is running high over the spelling contests that have been weekly had in your town. Just say to Brother Stephenson that if he will bring his school, also charter the school of Foster and son, and come here to Tarrant, I will take my Texas boys and girls and beat him spelling "all holler." Or, if he will just pay the expenses, we will meet him in the Morgan Academy Hall and spell him "like Texas is."

Now, sir, if you was here to dine with us to-day, we could give you rabbit, partridge, prairie chicken, backbone, sausage, buffalo steak, Johnny-cake, &c. Tell "Uncle Sam" to put that in his pipe.

Some of my neighbors have just returned from a buffalo hunt, bringing back about 2,000 pounds of that meat, some of which I got.

This leaves us in good health. S. B. HUEY.

The ice gorge moved from here Saturday night at 9 o'clock. Captain Piatt managed to save his ferry boat, but, from the number of coal barges that passed on Sunday, every one was not so lucky. John Eshman tied up two coalboats, but he had no sooner tied them than a large cake came along and broke them loose.

Miss Sallie Snyder returned from Petersburg, accompanied by her sister, Miss Alice. If it is not Miss Alice, we wish the Petersburg correspondent would let us know who she is.

A social at Mr. James N. Stephens', last Wednesday, was one of the most enjoyable affairs of the season.

Personal—Mr. Henry Goss is quite sick at present, and it is feared he will not recover.....Mr. Henry McGlasson returned from Breckinridge County last week.....Robert Holmes and lady will move to Burlington in a short time. BULLDOZER.

Professor Simeon Terrill, who has been teaching the school in the Terrill District, has discontinued his school on account of ill health.

We are sorry to learn that we will soon loose one of our enterprising citizens in the person of L. H. Voshel, he having exchanged his farm here for one in the Hoosier State. He will shortly go hence. However, we console ourselves with the fact that our loss will be others gain. May success attend his efforts in the Hoosier State and his labors be crowned with success, both in agriculture and matrimony.

Rev. B. F. Bristow will preach at the Ashby Fork School-house on the fourth Saturday in January, at 11 a. m. Text—"This year thou shalt die."

Those desiring the "latest" concerning the political muss should call upon Major C. E. Hensly, as he is thoroughly posted on that point. ICONOCLAST.

Union.

Died, Wednesday evening, January 10th, of consumption Mrs. Sallie Johnson, widow of the late C. B. Johnson, deceased, age 39 years. The community has lost a good citizen, the village a pleasant associate and the church a pious, consistent member, her children an affectionate mother. Her remains were interred at the Big Bone Cemetery. Rev. J. A. Kelley delivered the funeral discussion which was very interesting. Text, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want."—XXIII. Psalm.

Shipped from this point to Walton on last Sunday two cat bachelors boxed up in a crate to be expressed, which, of course they will do themselves. J. M. S. and J. H. C. are not lads that go back on anything they undertake, they will, no doubt, express themselves when they get there.

Improvements still go on regardless of the hard times or who will be President.

Aunt Jemima of Beaver Lick paid our village a flying visit on last week. She greeted our sanctum with her smiling presence.

At the election of officers of Boone Union Lodge No. 301, December 27th, '76, the following were elected to serve the ensuing year: Dr. Blanton, W. M.; J. C. Hughes, S. W.; F. Dickey, J. W.; A. L. Conner, Sect.; R. Conner, Treas.; H. Bannister, S. D.; A. J. Utz, J. D.; H. W. Riley, S. and T. VULCAN.

Walton.

The crowning topic of conversation at present among the young people is the ball which is to come off in the Academy on the night of the 12th inst. There was a very good attendance, but quite a number who expected to go were kept away by the inclement weather. Everything passed off smoothly, and no disturbance of any kind occurred. The distinguished gentlemen from a distance were Sheriff Sleet.....Deputy Crisler, and Lawyer Glenn, from Covington; and the belles—really all the ladies seemed to be belles. The managers were so much encouraged by the success that they have determined on giving another at an early day.

The sleigh-bells keep ringing in our ears all hours of the day. Every man who can get a horse has constructed a jumper or sleigh of some kind—some of them rather peculiar contrivances, but anything will do so one can get a sleigh-ride.

The school-house has a new bell, which affords the boys a great deal of pleasure whenever they can get a pull at the rope.

Mr. Stewart has an assistant teacher—one of his pupils, Sam Rinds, jr.

The young school-teachers of this vicinity, together with Rev. L. Johnson, have formed a debating society. They will have their first debate on next Friday evening at the school-house, the subject being, "Which is the greater incentive to labor, reward or punishment?" Messrs. Johnson and Gaines on the side of reward, Messrs. Bagby and Stewart for punishment.

Mr. Johnson delivered a very interesting lecture before the Teacher's Association upon the Necessity of Education.

The Grangers met last Saturday to have an installation of officers, but not a sufficient number being there, it was put off for two weeks.

PERSONAL—Miss Tudie Burton, a former citizen of this place, has been visiting in Burlington for a few days past.

BURLINGTON, KY., JANUARY 18.

Winter Employments.

Farmers especially should lay out their plans and make the most of the opportunity which the long winter evenings afford for mental culture. Robert B. Thomas says, "A spur in the head is worth two in the heels," head-work is what we want on the farm. It is brain power that makes things move in this world and keeps them on the track. Make and lay out the plans for the year. Map out the fields so as to know just where and when to put in the work. The great secret of luck on the farm is to do things at the right time and in the right way. A note-book in the pocket is a handy thing. Strict farm accounts with each lot under its own head, tell a plain and true story. Jot down a new thought on the spot. It saves a heap of time.

Hire farm-hands early. The best are sure to be snatched up first, and the best are the cheapest in the end, even if they cost little more by the month. Keep your barn and sheds clean, the tools under cover and all in their place. Stock ought to be kept clean and in pure air, not too cold. All animals should have good shelter this cold weather. Any want of it will lead to loss of flesh and thrift. It cost more to feed an animal that is exposed to cold and driving storm than one that is kept warm. Feed at the same hour each day. Let the food be in the very best condition. A few roots once a day or so will add much to the thrift of most farm stock. For cows in milk it is an easy matter to cut the straw or corn stalks and the coarser qualities of hay, mix in a little bran or shorts in a covered box, and pour over hot water. Cattle should have easy access to good water twice a day. Manure may be hauled out and spread upon the land if not covered with snow. A good top dressing at this season of the year protects the roots of the grass, and will do as much good as if put on in the spring.

Keep the cellar as clean as wax. Put on a good coat of lime wash. Fill the ice-house as early as possible, to cut a first quality of ice. It is time now to balance up accounts and see how the year's work foots up. It is easy to see from carefully kept accounts what has paid the best, and to take them for a guide for the future."—Golden Rule.

The Farm.

Is farm machinery profitable to the majority of the farmers? I wish farmers would answer this question. In every direction, all over the land, outrageous expenses are represented by machinery cast aside as of no use. In riding ten miles, a few days ago, I saw thirteen harvest machines lying in the field, or cornered in some lot, where they could be crippled by the cattle and horses, and in turn cripple the stock also. They did not grow from the ground like weeds, but were put there at much cost to the farmer, and, in the thirteen cases alluded to, surrounding circumstances indicated that they were no longer considered of any profit to the farmer. If so, what immense loss they have been to the purchaser; or, if intended for use again, what a glorious time the owners will have next year, with a dozen hired men loitering about, thinking only of dinner and the idle hours guaranteed by a disordered and crippled reaping machine. The reapers made now would, if in proper hands, run one hundred and fifty days and show but little wear; but most of them are worked by men who know so little of machinery that they are badly used up in cutting one small field of grain, and that is the way the money goes.—K. in Rural World.

A Delusion.

A young man who thinks he can lead a profligate and reckless life until he becomes a middle aged man, and then repent and make a good and steady citizen, is deluded by the devil. He thinks that the people are fools, destitute of memory. He concludes that if he repents everybody will forget that he was a dissipated wretch. This is not the case; people remember your bad deeds and forget your good ones. Besides it is no easy thing to break up in middle age bad habits that have been formed in youth. When a horse contracts the habit of balking, he generally retains it through life. He will often perform well enough until the wheels get into a hole, and then he stops and holds back. Just so it is with the boys who contract bad habits. They will sometimes leave off their bad habits, and do well enough till they get into a tight place, and then they return to their old tricks. Of those boys who contract the bad habit of drunkenness, not one in every hundred dies a sober man. The only way to break up a bad habit is never to contract it. The only way to prevent drunkeness is never to drink.

THE Commission appointed by the President to report on the feasibility of a canal across the Isthmus of Darien have made a report recommending the Nicaragua route. They say it can be built in ten years for $100,000,000. Communications have been sent to the principal powers of Europe, directing attention to the satisfactory results of the surveys. Replies have been received from several of the governments thus addressed, in which they express themselves favorable to an early beginning of the work.

BY MISS C. Y. MAITLAND.

You would swear by the stars, by the moonshine,
By the tryst 'neath this somber old yew,
By everything dear, high and holy,
That ever to me you'll be true.

Nay, stay till I end my much-speaking,
And hear what I still have to say;
You are leaving Glenaven to-morrow,
To be gone for a year and a day!

And the spring will change into the summer,
And the fall of the leaf follow fast,
And winter shroud over each relic,
As the snow sweeps adown in the blast.

And the stars will be hid many midnights,
And the moonshine—is moonshine, you know;
And the dear, and the high, and the holy,
Men sometimes, I have heard, let go.

You are angry because—do I doubt you?
Have I wounded you sore? I confess,
Though lightly I seem to have spoken,
Yet my words have hurt me none the less.

These words have a serious meaning.
It is this: That a year and a day
Take a long time to pass. What am I, then,
That your love from me never should stray.

You will meet (nay, I'm not really weeping)
You will meet fairer girls and regret—
Nay, I'm leaving you free to remember,
And free—free as air—to forget.

KITTY LANE'S RING.

There was to be a party Christmas night at Mr. Dillon's, and the young folks of Dillon's Prairie were in a state of most delightful expectation; not that a party was an uncommon event, but this was to be the party of the season; in addition to its being Christmas night, it was to be a grand affair; there were no less than twenty couple invited, every one of whom would be sure to attend, and the first snow of the season had just fallen and they were going in sleds.

Kitty Lane's mind had been in a turmoil all day. The trouble was she couldn't decide whether to go to the party or not. Of course she couldn't think of missing this—the grandest party of the season; but she had reasons for not going; she felt sure that Charlie Doles was angry with her, and she knew very well that the greater part of his happiness would depend on her being there, and she wanted him to know it; finally, she concluded she would go, and would act in a manner that Charlie would feel this much more forcibly than he would by her staying away.

Were they engaged? you ask. No, but Kitty knew very well that it was only Charlie's bashfulness that prevented them from being so; and she knew, too, that it was jealousy that made him angry now, for she had gone with the school teacher to the last party, and to spelling school with him a few nights afterwards, and both evenings Charlie had looked "cross enough to bite her head off," as she had expressed it to her confidential friend, Annie Stafford. "And now I suppose," she said to herself, "he thinks I'll be foolish enough to bother myself about his ill humor. Hum! as if I cared anything for him! I do hope Mr. Tiles will come for me to-morrow night." And all the while she knew very well that she was bothering herself about his ill humor, and that she would much rather he would come for her than any one else, even Mr. Tiles.

Kitty Lane was the belle of Dillon's Prairie; she was the prettiest, the smartest and richest girl there. Therefore to be able to go with her was an honor to which all the youths of that vicinity aspired.

On the night of the party Kitty was the gayest of the gay; she was the life of the party; gay, witty, and sparkling, she was the admiration of everyone. Mr. Tiles, the school teacher, a man "slick of hair, and sleek of tongue"—who was regarded by the young ladies of Dillon's Prairie in about the same light as that in which the gentlemen regarded Kitty—was her escort.

Charlie had taken Annie Stafford, but looked gloomy all the evening. Annie, a mischievous creature, rallied him on his gloomy looks, but to no effect; and finally, when she had vainly exerted all of her fascinations to draw out his conversational powers, deserted him for some one who could talk faster.

Whenever, in the progress of the plays, Charlie and Kitty were brought near each other, he was rather abrupt in his treatment of her, but she was as generous as could be.

Near the close of the party, as they were playing a certain game known as "good-evening," Charlie had been installed as door-keeper; he had admitted but one couple, Kitty and Mr. Tiles, when, for some reason, the door had been closed for a few moments; on opening it to admit another couple, he saw Mr. Tiles slipping a ring on Kitty's finger; this was the last drop in his cup of sorrow; he was certain it was an engagement ring, he had not noticed it on her finger before.

"It is better as it is," he said to himself, bitterly. "I am glad I found out her character before I had committed myself. John Tiles, you are welcome to her as far as I am concerned; but if you don't rue your bargain before you are through with it, count me a false prophet."

If he had known that the ring was a Christmas gift from her father, and that Mr. Tiles had only taken it off her finger a moment before to look at it, he might have saved himself much exquisite misery, for just before this he had been thinking that he acted like a fool, and that he would go to Kitty and apologize for having treated her so rudely, and if she forgave him he would say something else not necessary to repeat here, since it does not concern either you or me, or my story; but the sight of that ring awoke the bitterness again.

The next morning Mrs. Dale, "the newspaper of the neighborhood," as she was called, called at Mr. Lane's, ostensibly to take Mrs. Lane "a new receipt for makin' mince pies," but really to see if she couldn't find out something about Kitty and Mr. Tiles that would be satisfactory; she had heard a great deal, but to use a favorite expression of hers, "nobody knows how much of hearsay's so." As soon as she had taken off her shawl, although she declared that she "hadn't time to stop a minute," she began with:

"Well, Kitty, had a right nice time last night, didn't you? My Lizzie said everybody 'peared to enjoy themselves first rate, unless it was Charlie Doles, and he didn't seem to enjoy himself at all. He always seemed to think so much of you, Kitty, and I feel rale sorry for him; it'll be such a disappointment to him when you marry that school-teacher."

"Why, Mrs. Dale," said Kitty, "I am not going to marry Mr. Tiles."

"Ain't you?" said Mrs. Dale. "Well now, that does beat everything; but I'm rale glad of it, though I guess he's good enough; leastways, I never heard anything wrong about him, but then, you see, I always took an interest in Charley, and I do think, Kitty, that you treated him kind o'mean."

That afternoon Annie Safford came over with some news. Charley had gone—nobody knew where.

"And it's so," said Annie, "for Brother Jim was over in town this morning, and he saw him get on the train, and his uncle was at our house a little while ago, and he said he didn't know where he had gone, but it is away off somewhere. But, Kitty, I advise you not to cry your eyes out about it, for anybody that would get mad about such a foolish thing as he did, isn't worth a snap, especially when you can get as handsome a fellow as Mr. Tiles by just saying so."

"No," said Kitty, trying hard to smile, "I don't think I'll break my about him.

Nevertheless, that very night Kitty cried herself to sleep, and chided herself till one would have thought her guilty of some horrible crime.

The months wore away, and no news of Charlie came, except now and then a letter to his uncle, directing something about his affairs. And finally, too, the ache grew out of Kitty's heart, and she said to herself, "I was no more to blame than he was," and a little later, "He was foolish to take offense at such a little thing as that."

Two years later she yielded to Mr. Tiles' entreaties and became his wife. Perhaps she was fickle; doubtless you, and I, too, reader, would have preferred to have her remain true to Charlie; but as a conscientious writer of the history of Dillon's Prairie, I am bound to record the fact that she married Mr. Tiles.

Ten years passed away, and in that time Kitty's husband had died. One day a stranger came to Dillon's Prairie; a tall heavy-set man, with sunburned face and heavy beard, giving his name as John Sanderson. No one knew who he was, whence he came, where he was going, or his business there, although there were many speculations in regard to each of these. One day, a few days after his arrival, as Kitty was sitting in her house, busily engaged in sewing, and now and then casting a look out where her little three-year-old was playing, a stranger came to the door and asked for a drink. Kitty recognized him as Mr. Sanderson, and placed a chair for him just within the door, while she went to get the water. He began to talk of the people there, and of the changes which had taken place since he left there.

"Then you have been here before," said Kitty.

"Yes," said the stranger; "in fact I used to live here."

Kitty looked at him sharply a moment, and then the simple word "Charlie," escaped her lips.

"Yes," said the stranger, rising, and taking her hand, "I am Charlie; and Kitty, I have come back for you; will you marry me now?"

And Kitty? Why, of course, she laid her head on his broad shoulder and cried, and said she would. What else would you have had her do, pray?

EIGHT years ago a man in poor health was put off a train on the Pennsylvania Railroad, eight miles from Lancaster, because he would not pay one dollar and fifty cents over and above his fare for a seat in a sleeping-car, there being no room for him in any of the other cars. He entered suit against the company, and the other day was awarded $3,500 damages.

A PRINTER invariably gets out of sorts when at the bottom of his case.

An Editor in Heaven.

Just as if editors were not in the habit of going to Heaven! We'll venture to say that a greater portion of them go to that home of those who have performed their mission of mercy on earth than any other profession or calling that poor mortals fill.

An editor in Heaven! There's nothing strange in that at all. It's almost a moral, as a professional, impossibility for them to go anywhere else.

Once upon a time, after the demise of a member of the "corps editorial," he presented himself at the gates of the Holy City and requested admission. The doorkeeper asked him what had been his occupation on terra firma.

He replied that he was an editor.

"Well," said the watchman, "we have a crowd of your kind here now, and they all came in as dead heads. If you can pay your passage, you can come in; if not, you must place yourself under the control of a personage you ruled tyrannically down below" (meaning the Devil).

Not having the wherewith to go in, our brother of the quill and scissors posted off and presented himself at the entrance of Clootie's dark domains. A very dark-complexioned gentleman stood sentry, and asked him in a gruff voice:

"Who comes?"

"An humble disciple of Faust," was the calm reply.

"Then hold on; you can't be admitted!" exclaimed the gentleman in black, evincing considerable agitation, and fiercely scowling on him.

"Why not?" demanded the typo, who began to get huffish, and looked around for a "sheep's foot," with which to force an entrance.

"Well, sir," replied his sable majesty, "we let one of your profession in here many years ago, and he kept up a continual row with his former delinquent subscribers; and, as we have more of that class of persons here than any other, we have passed a law prohibiting the admission of any editors—only those who have advanced our interest in their papers on earth being admitted, and even those we keep in a separate room by themselves. You have published many things that operated against us, and always blamed the Devil for everything that went wrong, and so you can't come in. We enforce this rule, without respect to persons, for our own peace and safety. You can just travel."

Casting a droll leer at the outside sentinel, our typographical friend started on again, determined to get in up above. This time he took with him an old file of his paper, and, presenting it to the guardian of the Celestial City, requested that it might be carefully examined, and they would see whether he was entitled to a free ticket. In due course of time the conductor came along and took him in, telling him that he published many good things, and had been a martyr to the cause of human improvement, and that resolutions had been passed to admit all members of the "art preservative" who had abused the Devil while below. He added that, as they were punished enough by their being with the "devil" all their lives, their future punishment was commuted. He further stated that not one delinquent subscriber could be found in Heaven.—Printer's Circular.

This house will be considered strictly intemperate.

None but the brave deserve the fair.

Persons owing bills for board, will be bored for bills.

Boarders who do not wish to pay in advance, are requested to advance and pay.

Boarders are requested to wait on colored cooks—for meals.

Sheets will be nightly changed once in every six months, or more if necessary.

Double boarders can have two beds with a room in it, or two rooms with a bed in it, as they choose.

Boarders are requested to pull off their boots if they can conveniently do so.

Beds with or without bugs.

All moneys and other valuables are to be left in the care of the proprietor. This is to be insisted on, as he will be responsible for no other losses.

Inside matters will not be furnished editors under any considerations.

Relatives coming to make a six month's visit, will be welcomed; but when they bring half their household furniture, virtue will cease to be a forbearance.

Single men with their families will not be boarded.

Beds with or without board.

Dreams will be charged for by the dozen.

Nightmares hired out at reasonable rates.

Stone vaults will be furnished to snoreing boarders, and the proprietor will in no wise be responsible for the broken tin-pan-ums of other ears.

"WHAT are you doing there?" said a grocer to a fellow who was stealing his meat and lard. "I am getting fat," was the reply.

WITH eggs at present rates, what do you think of this: "Of all the birds that please us with their lays, the most popular is the hen."

"NO girl gets along well without a mother," says a moral exchange. It is certainly impossible for her to get a start in the world without one.

A VALUABLE lost pocket-book was returned to the owner, who was discovered by a receipted newspaper bill which was therein. No man should travel without a receipted newspaper bill on his person.

A GENTLEMAN, wishing some bushes removed from his garden, told his gardener, a Hibernian, to pull them up by the roots. Some time after he went into the garden, and found the gardener digging trenches around the bushes. "Why, Patrick," he said, "you need not dig around these small bushes in that way. You are strong enough to pull them up by the roots." "Oh, yes, sir," replied the gardener, "I am strong enough, but I must dig a little before I can get hold of the roots. If you had told me to pull them up by the branches, I could easily have removed them without digging.

THE steamer Fanny was coming down the Upper Mississippi loaded with pig lead. As she was going over a shoal place the pilot gave the signal to heave the lead. The only man forward was a greenhorn. "Why don't you heave the lead?" "Is it the lead, your honor? Where to?" "Overboard, you blockhead." The man snatched up one of the pigs of lead and threw it overboard. The mate, in endeavoring to prevent him, lost his balance and fell into the river. The captain, running to the deck, asked: "Why don't you heave the lead, and sing out how much water there is?" "The lead is heaved, yer honor, and the mate is gone down to see how much water there is."

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL,
Editor and Proprietor.

BURLINGTON, KY., JANUARY 25.

THE scarlet fever is raging in the form of an epidemic in Boston.

THERE was not an indictment in the State of Maine last year for a capital offense.

DURING this month, the city of Louisville has furnished the State Prison with seventeen inmates.

THE Gainsvillians, Florida are feasting on strawberries from plants that were set out in November.

CATTLE, sheep and hogs are dying in Texas from the effects of the prolonged drouth during the fall and winter.

JOHN E. HAMILTON, of Covington, has been nominated by the President as United States Attorney for Kentucky.

ON last Thursday the Postoffice in Lawrenceburg was robbed of $25 in change and $112 20 in Government stamps.

THE Senate and House Committees recommend a National Returning Board for the purpose of counting the electoral vote.

IT is the opinion of several of the Circuit Judges of this State, that the law increasing the jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace, is unconstitutional.

AT a special term of the County Court held Wednesday, the 17th inst., the only business done was to allow T. W. Finch $10 for the benefit of Maggie Miller.

IN Pittsburg and neighborhood, temperance excitement has been running very high of late. A revival which has been in progress there, has made 10,000 converts.

IT would be well for the School Trustees in the county to bear in mind that they are not liable to pay poll-tax for road purposes, and when the Assessor calls upon them, inform him of their trusteeship.

A NEGRO was hanged in Missouri last week. The condemned man declared his innocence to the last, and his attorney addressed the crowd from the scaffold, declaring his belief in the innocence of his client.

THE Supreme Court of Florida, which had under consideration the result of the vote cast in that State for Presidential electors, has decided that the Tilden electors carried the State by ninety-five majority.

THE negroes in South Carolina are indulging in the code duello. On last Saturday two bucks, one Republican and the other a Democrat, had a duel at Fairbluff. Each had four shots, one of the parties being wounded three times and the other once. The negroes were better hands to get up a duel than Bannett and May are.

ON the 19th, J. Madison Wells and Thomas C. Anderson, two of the members of the Louisiana Returning Board, were brought before the bar of the Lower House of Congress, to answer for contempt of privileges of the House. Action in the matter of contempt was postponed till the remaining members of the Board should arrive.

SMITH N. HAWES, the defaulting Treasurer of the city of Covington, has been arrested in London, Canada, and efforts are being made to have him returned to this country under the extradition treaty. It seems that there is doubt as to whether or not Hawes can be extradited, inasmuch as there are other charges against him than that of forgery, the British Parliament forbidding the surrender of any person charged with other offences than the one upon which they are extradited.

THE Illinois Legislature is having quite a lively fight over the election of United States Senator, John A. Logan, Republican, and Gen. Palmer, Democrat candidate, being the strong men in the commencement of the fight, Logan receiving on nearly every ballot, 99 votes and Palmer 87. Logan was within three votes of the election, but those voting against him were determined to defeat him if possible. After twenty three ballots, Gen. Palmer withdrew from the contest, and the Democrats in caucus, resolved to unite with the Independents and had been voting for during the contest. John A. Logan is the present United States Senator from that State.

THE Senate and House Committees have agreed upon, and reported to Congress, a plan for counting the electoral vote and settling the Presidential wrangle. That portion of the bill they recommend, which bears directly upon the manner of adjusting all disputes arising when dual returns from any State are presented, provides that the disputed questions shall be submitted to a committee composed of five members of the Senate, five members of the House and five members of the Supreme Court of the United States. This "Returning Board" is organized by each branch of Congress appointing viva voce five of its members. The Justices of the first, third, eighth and ninth Circuits of the United States are appointed by the proposed bill which gives them the authority to select the fifth Justice. When the commission is thus organized, neither of the Houses have power to withdraw any of its members or dissolve the Committee. Every objection to returns has to be made in writing, stating clearly and without argument, the grounds upon which the objection is made, and all the objections made have to be signed by at least one member of the Senate and one member of the House. These objections are submitted to the commission, which decides upon them by a majority vote, as it also decides how many and what persons were duly appointed electors for such States. In case an objection to the decision of the commission is made by at least five Senators and five Representatives, the two Houses separately concurring, they may order contrary to the decission of the commission. Thus, it will be seen, that if Congress fails to agree when dual returns are first presented, the matter will be entirely in the hands of the commission, for if they fail to agree at first, there will be no likelihood of their agreeing when the matter is submitted the second time. The plan, as proposed by the Joint Committee, is criticised by leading men of both political parties, but many of them who do not like the bill will vote for its passage, believing it to be the best means of bringing about a settlement of the trouble which has completely stagnated all branches of commerce in the nation. It appears that some of the members of each party oppose the passage of the bill on the grounds that it is too great an accession to the cause espoused by their opponents. Both sides are somewhat apprehensive of the result of the counting as will be done under the bill, which it is generally conceded will pass. This bill is now the only proposition looking to the peaceful solution of the troubles with which the country has been so harrassed during the past two months.

A PROTRACTED case of crookedness has recently been unearthed in Dearborn County, Indiana. It seems from the account in the Lawrenceburg Press of last week, that one Stenger has for some time been operating a fruit distillery at St. Leon, in Dearborn County. At that establishment has been manufactured apple brandy, but in no considerable quantity, the distiller being rather on the small scale. A short time since, Government officers began suspicioning that things were not being conducted in conformity with the revenue laws, and took a tour of inspection through the premises of Stenger's distillery and found several barrels of crooked brandy.

THE Louisville Convention was largely attended on the 18th. There was about one thousand delegates present. Hon. Cassius M. Clay was made permanent Chairman. Speeches were made by Gen. Preston, Governor McCreary, Cassius M. Clay, Gen. Houston, E. D. Marshall and others. The resolutions adopted by the Convention declare that Tilden and Hendricks were honestly elected and must be inaugurated. Everything was conducted in good order, there being no disturbance of any kind.

THE snow in Alabama, on the 15th, is said by the oldest inhabitants, to have been the heaviest since 1832. In some places the depth was five inches. In that section of the United States such freaks of the weather is considered a phenomenon, and the citizens are now awaiting the result.

WHEN Zach Chandler was being examined in regard to the telegrams sent to Florida concerning the election in that State, he exhibited as bad a recollection as did Beecher when testifying in the Beecher-Tilton scandal case.

NINETEEN of the unrecognized victims of the Ashtabula disaster, were interred at that place on the 19th.

THIS year, Ash Wednesday falls on the 14th of February, which is St. Velentine's day, and the day fixed for the counting of the electoral vote. Truly, that will be a business day, religion, love and politics all indulged in on the same day.

What Our Exchanges Say.

MOUNT STERLING SENTINEL: The Exchange Bank of Mt. Sterling, has declared a dividend of four per cent. for the last six months.

Petit jurors get $2 per day, and grand jurors $1 50. Believe we'll go to house-keeping, just to be able to make $2 occasionally.

FALMOUTH INDEPENDENT: The ice has left us. In the breaking up we are pleased to report no damage to steamers on the Licking.

The County Court, on Saturday last, reduced the poll-tax from $4 to $3, and the property tax from forty to twenty cents on the $100 valuation.

CYNTHIANA DEMOCRAT: Our merchants and business men are complaining considerably of the introduction of the silver twenty-cent pieces they being so similar to the quarter. The only difference, respecting the size, is that the quarters have a rough edge, while the edge of the twenty-cent pieces are perfectly smooth.

RISING SUN (Ind.) RECORDER: In Lawrenceburg, the city tax is 95 cents on the $100. In Greensburg 85 cents. In Rising Sun it is $1 00.

The Attorney-General of Indiana, was arrested in a gambling house in Indianapolis the other night. He put up $20 for his appearance before the Mayor, and gave his name as "Smith."

Our Representative in the Legislature has introduced a bill establishing county courts and abolishing commissioners, and transferring probate business to the county court.

OWENSBORO EXAMINER: Several cases of scarlet fever are reported in this city.

The hard winter, we are told, has killed all the fruit trees set out in this county last fall.

We are glad to hear some of the farmers predict good crops for next season. Hard winters they say leave the ground in prime condition for beginning work in the spring.

There was more tobacco handled in this city on Wednesday than any day of the season. The streets, in the vicinity of the tobacco factories, were at times jammed with wagons, awaiting their turns to unload. We are giving the reader a fair count when we say that six hundred loads were on the market upon that day.

The Electoral Bill.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The sentiment of the country seems to be very much divided on the expediency of this bill, one party placing itself on the idea that Congress now has the power of rectifying all irregularities in the late election and eliminating from it all taint of fraud and unfairness, and thus present to the country the genuine and honest result of the people's choice as thoroughly as if no corrupt Returning Boards had ever figured and defiled the ballots of Louisiana or Florida. This party not only believes and contends that Congress has plenary power for the purpose of purifying the election and securing to the country its choice for President, but that it is its constitutional duty to do so at all and every hazard. They contend that what Congress has power to do it is its duty to do, whenever a proper occasion arrives; and that in performing such duty, no means can be resorted too, except such as is customary and consistent with their ideas of the constitutional workings of that body. Hence, the Electoral Bill is opposed by this class of persons, not because they fear especially the result will not be just and correct, but, because of the departure it proposes from the usual course persued on such cases. They regard it as an abdication by the Congress of its power over the electoral count, and therefore an innovation upon established usage, and outside of the Constitution.

Another class oppose the bill because they say that the President of the Senate has, by the Constitution, full control of the count, and that no authority exists anywhere to interfere with his count, or to assist him in making the count, further than as agents or servants, directly subject to his authority. This last position is now assumed by the Radical leaders, Morton, Sherman, and partisans of that stripe, while the first position is held by all conservative members of the Republican party, and by the bulk of the Democratic party, though some distinguished Democratic statesmen appear to have committed themselves in part to the position now held by Morton & Co.

Thus the country stands to-day, as regards the original question of the electoral count, divided into two parties, one placing the power of the count in the two Houses of Congress, and the other placing it exclusively in the hands of the President of the Senate. While thus divided in sentiment, the question comes up, and will not down at our bidding. Who is right upon this question? what plan shall be pursued? Now, this is an all-important question. The Presidency depends upon it. The administration of the government for four years by it will be fixed. Mighty issues are involved in this great question, appreciated alike by the two great political organizations of the day. The Republicans regard a defeat now as annihilation. The Democrats look upon it as an assurance of four years more of the corrupt rule, extravagance, &c., which has disgraced the past sixteen years at least, and probably the death of democratic government in this land. The last dire result is expected as the legitimate fruit of the frauds of the last election, if they are allowed to override the will of the people and place Hayes in the Presidential chair, through the exclusive count of the President of the Senate.

The writer of this holds to the belief that Congress has the power over the count of the electoral vote, including the right to investigate the question as to what is an electoral vote, and going behind any paper or certificate, where fraud, corruption and infamus Returning Boards have figured.

But then the question of the moment returns, shall the Electoral Bill be adopted for the present count, or shall the parties fight it out to the bitter end on their respective propositions as heretofore held, taking the risk of the dire consequencies that may follow? or, shall we in good faith accept the proposed bill, and stand by the adjustment reached under its provisions?

We know if Congress counts the vote Tilden will be the President. If the President of the Senate counts the vote, Hayes will be the President, that is supposing no resitance be made to either count. Can those wishing Tilden in the White-House, get him there outside of this Electoral Bill? If so, how? Only by force successfully used. Mr. Hayes stands in the same position.

The people might settle this great question, were it possible to get it before them, but the thing has passed from their grasp for the present and is in the hands of the party leaders. So to talk about the people settling the trouble is bosh. Judging from the utterance of the party leaders and party journals, neither side proposes to defer to the other, but the successful party is likely to meet resistance, and the people will back them so soon as the ball is opened, right or wrong.

The mass will gather under the party banners and die if necessary in defence of what they believe to be right.

With Hendricks, Ewing, S. B. Buckner, Thuman, Huitt, &c. endorsing the Electoral Bill, we are not afraid of it. We regard it as a peace offering at the alter of our country, and believe that the President declared elected by it will be entitled to the respect of the whole country as its Chief Magistrate.

If this much desired adjournment be effected, then we believe the great political problem of the nineteenth century will have been solved, and another great victory for popular institutions exhibited to the views of the nation. R

1877. NEW YORK. 1877.

The different editions of THE SUN during the next year will be the same as during the year that has just passed. The daily edition will on week days be a sheet of four pages, and on Sundays a sheet of eight pages, or 56 broad columns; while the weekly edition will be a sheet of eight pages, of the same dimensions and character that are already familiar to our friends.

THE SUN will continue to be the strenuous advocate of reform and retrenchment, and of the substitution of statesmanship, wisdom and integrity for hollow pretence, imbecility and fraud in the administration of public affairs. It will contend for the government of the people by the people and for the people, as opposed to government by frauds in the ballot-box and in the counting of votes enforced by military violence. It will endeavor to supply its readers—a body now not far from a million of souls—with the most careful, complete and trustworthy accounts of current events, and will employ for this purpose a numerous and carefully selected staff of reporters and correspondents. Its reports from Washington, especially, will be full, accurate and fearless; and it will doubtless continue to deserve and enjoy the hatred of those who thrive by plundering the Treasury or by usurping what the law does not give them, while it will endeavor to merit the confidence of the public by defending the rights of the people against the encroachments of unjustified power.

The price of the daily SUN will be 55 cents a month or $6 50 a year, post paid, or with the Sunday edition $7 70 a year.

The SUNDAY edition alone, eight pages, $1 20 a year, post paid.

The WEEKLY SUN, eight pages of 56 broad columns, will be furnished during 1877 at the rate of $1 a year, post paid.

The benefit of this large reduction from the previous rate for the WEEKLY can be enjoyed by individual subscribers, without the necessity of making up clubs. At the same time, if any of our friends choose to aid in extending our circulation, we shall be grateful to them, and every such person who sends us ten or more subscribers from one place will be entitled to one copy of the paper for himself without charge. At one dollar a year, postage paid, the expenses of paper and printing are barely repaid; and, considering the size of the sheet and the quality of its contents, we are confident the people will consider THE WEEKLY SUN the cheapest newspaper published in the world, and we trust also one of the very best. THOSE IN BUSINESS AND WANTING THE BOONE COUNTY PATRONAGE SHOULD ADVERTISE IN THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER. IT HAS A MUCH LARGER CIRCULATION IN THE COUNTY THAN ANY OTHER PAPER. PERSONS WORKING FOR THE BOONE COUNTY TRADE SHOULD REMEMBER THIS FACT.

COAL comes down on the rise.

LAST Saturday got in a few rags of sunshine.

"JANIWARY" has been about as slippery as an eel.

COME, come, the time to subscribe for the RECORDER now is here.

THE health of this community during the winter has been uncommonly good.

SOMEONE says the Texas fever has struck Dr. Smith broadside. It was well aimed.

THE County Clerk has, in the last few days, received a small stock of new record books.

THE river, last week, was within a few feet of the point reached during the flood in 1875.

BOOTS and shoes for winter wear below cost at C. Kleymeier's, 20 Pike street, Covington, Ky.

THE disputants are devouring everything they think will enlighten them on the subject to be discussed.

ON the 3d of next month, Mrs. Mary Utz, widow of the late Jonathan Utz, will have a sale of her property.

THE season of the year is at hand when there will be a general stir among those who will change base for the next year.

MR. CHURCHILL CLOKE requests all persons owning land adjoining his to repair one-half the line fences between the lands.

OUR town is again free of the smallpox, and it is to be hoped we have had the last case of that disease in our town for all time to come.

IF any of the members of the Debtery Society want something [illegible] recommend the advertisements in the RECORDER.

THE Morning Star Dancing Club, of Florence, give a grand ball on Friday evening. This will doubtless be the grandest ball of the season.

THE school teachers in the county generally complain of a decrease in attendance since the holidays. The severe weather is the principal cause.

DR. J. M. GRANT, of Bellevue, moved the first load of his goods and chattels to town Tuesday. The Doctor is now ready for practice, see his card in this issue.

THE snow that lay on the ground for the past few weeks may be considered the saving clause in the wheat crop, which, in some parts of the county, looks promising.

SEVERAL of our friends seem interested in our whereabouts the latter part of last week. By reading the new advertisements in this issue they will receive the desired information.

IT was no earthquake, nor were they meteors last Saturday night. It was only Westbay, who fell and knocked the fire out of the ice. Attest: the excavation made in the back of his head.

THE stock law is not very generally enforced. While traveling through a portion of the county last week, we learned that stock is still allowed the privilege of running at large.

A SON of Mr. Jackson, who resides near Burlington, came near cutting his foot off while chopping wood last Saturday. The cut is an ugly one, and of such a character that it will require some time to get well.

LAST week the merry young folks in the Locust Grove neighborhood had rather an extensive rehash of Christmas. A party at Mr. Benjamin Rico's on Tuesday night, and one at Mr. James Conner's on Saturday night, were the principal occasions.

IT will be but a short time till we are blessed with roads less a bottom, and then the way turnpike fever will rage will astonish the natives; but they would be more astonished if some set of "fellers" should go and have a pike built to a somewhere.

SOME say that the fruit in this locality is killed. Some of our exchanges report the young fruit trees which were planted last fall as having been killed by the severe winter. Two good fruit years can not be expected to come in succession in this climate.

THE "literarians" met Wednesday night of last week and took another stride toward Port Organization. Several persons had their names enrolled as members, and the programme for the next meeting was arranged. The subject for discussion is, "Affirmed, that the education of woman should be as extensive as that of man." A. G. Winston and R. C. Green affirm, Geo. Hughes and Thos. Stephenson deny. Beside the discussion, several essays will be read. The meeting adjourned to meet the Wednesday evening following. R.

A METEOR or something else gave this part of the universe another jar last Tuesday about 4 p. m. Everybody in town noticed the shock. One young man reports that he saw a very large meteor traveling over town in an easterly direction just before the shake.

QUITE a number of persons in the county have this winter utilized the frozen apples that remain on the trees. These they take and, by the simple process of pressing, manufacture a superior quality of cider, which, it is claimed, will continue sweet during the entire winter.

THE spring-like weather that came in with Monday morning stimulated the farmers to action, and they, for the first time for several weeks, gave the spring work another shove. An immense amount of work has, since the intervention of bad weather, accumulated, and awaits dispatch.

TO Mr. William Walton we return thanks for a sack of fine apples in which were the following varieties: Cathead, Rambo, Spitzenberg, Pound Pippin, New Town Pippin, Roman Beauty, Canada Red, Genitan, Smith's Cider, Prior Red, Bellflower, Milan, Roxbury Russet. Mr. Walton has thirty-eight other varieties in his collection of fruit.

A FEW nights since, while one of the colored lads of the town was on his hands and knees exploring a ridge in which apples were buried, and with the intention of extracting (can't say whether feloniously or not) some of the fruit, a faithful cur silently attacked him while about one-half under ground and extracted a considerable quantity of the rear of the lad's pantaloons.

THE latest intelligence from Flickertown is to the effect that Councilman Wm. T. Smith was severely "run-dozed" on the evening of the 20th inst. Mr. Smith was arranging his sheep, when he was attacked and severely whipped, ram style. After a considerable struggle, Mr. Smith, by means of a club, intimidated the animal sufficiently to beat a retreat, but not until having been roughly treated, from the effects of which he has not yet entirely recovered.

LAST week, while the ice was on the roads, Mr. Wm. Conner started to the city with a load of hay. Going down the hill just this side of Florence X-Roads, his wagon flew the track, capsized and precipitated the load of hay down the bank. When Mr. Conner saw that a turn-over was inevitable he jumped from the wagon, and, save a considerable jar, was not hurt. The team and wagon narrowly escaped running off a steep bank, which would have resulted in general wreck.

A TWO-HORSE wagon, loaded with a crowd of blood-thirsty "fellers," left town Monday afternoon with the decided intention of bulldozing a coon. After having been gone an hour or so, and having felled two large trees, they returned with disappointment plainly pictured on each countenance. It seems the gentleman who owns the timber cut took that plan to get the boys to fell the trees for him, thus getting considerable work done in a "frolick." This was an example of catching flies with vinegar.

CALVERT & WINSTON, Attorneys for "The Burlington and Bellevue Turnpike Road Company," have just completed articles of incorporation for same, which will be executed and filed in a few days. When this is done the corporation will be regularly on its feet, and necessary steps will be taken, as we are informed, to push the enterprise forward. The completion of a first class turnpike road from this point to Bellevue is a "consummation most devoutly to be wished."

Personal Mention.

EXIT Dr. Raymond, enter Dr. Grant.

GENERAL JOHN WALLACE, we are glad to see, is again able to be upon the streets.

MR. HOLMES, an ex-Rabbit Hasher, is now domiciled in our town. He proposes engaging in the blacksmith trade, and we wish him success.

PROFS. GRIGSBY, Yeumans and Riddell enlivened our sanctum with their smiting countenances last Saturday, and it was not a good day for Professors, either.

THE Grangers in the East Bend neighborhood are making arrangements for putting a Grange store in operation at Rabbit Hash. They wanted, or did the latter part of last week, about fifty dollars more stock subscribed before they were willing to lay in the stock of goods. That place is one of the best points in the county for a person who has capital to engage in business. The country about Rabbit Hash is productive and the owners of the land industrious, raising yearly good crops of corn, tobacco, potatoes and many other articles which they market, and should be compelled to go no further than Rabbit Hash to dispose of them.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Verona.

AT N. B. Hamilton's sale, a few days since, everything brought good prices.

Tobacco raisers in this neighborhood are anxious to sell their crop, but are not willing to accept the present price.

A great many potatoes and apples were frozen during the cold weather.

The many friends of Mrs. John A. Roberts will be glad to hear she is convalescing.

The RECORDER is much liked at this point, and its arrival anxiously awaited.

YOU BET.

Bellevue.

Meeting with an opportunity, Mr. Editor, we take the privilege of sending you a few of the latest items, together with an apology. Since navigation was checked, I could send you nothing only in Saturday's mail, and then it would be very stale. It is true, I have had a chance to send by land once or twice, but let the opportunity slide. However, the prospect is better at present.

The sale of Dr. M. Grant was tolerably well attended, and everything sold low—corn as low as 32c.; hay, $8 40 per ton; hogs, $5 55 per hundred weight.

Bellevue Lodge F. and A. M. met on the 20th to install the following officers elected and appointed for the ensuing year: O. J. Ryle, W. M.; E. Ryle, S. W.; J. Rice, J. W.; D. M. Snider, Secretary; O. Snider, S. D.; T. F. W. Grant, J. D.; J. M. Grant, the Treasurer-elect, was absent, and J. R. Akin was elected S. and T. MICAWBER.

Rabbit Hash.

Our burg is rather quiet at present, with everybody taking things rather slow, with the exception of our industrious blacksmiths, Mr. Beecher and Harry Steele. Even the energetic saw-log teamsters, John and Mr. Frost, are laying on their oars.

Charlie says he would like for the "bunties" to keep their lip after this. Especially, if any strangers come into the neighborhood, to try to find some other subject more interesting to all parties.

Miss Alice Snyder is still with her sister, Mrs. Sallie. Some of the young hopefuls would like for her to make her visit a lengthy one.

The Drift-Wood Association had quite a lively time at this place pulling in rails, old wrecks of boats and saw-logs. Captains Riggs and Platt caught an empty barge one morning last week.

L. C. Cowen, our little doctor, was down at Wm. Mirrick's sale bidding on the household and kitchen furniture. Doc. rise up and explain. He says he was bidding for Bob Holmes, and Bob says he wasn't.

MORE PILLS.

Big Bone Ridge.

On account of the failing health of our esteemed young friend J. L. Adams, labors have been suspended in the Riddell's Run District, in which he has been teaching. Our sympathies are with him, and it is sincerely hoped that he may soon be restored to perfect health.

The installation services at the Grange hall were not very largely attended, as the public was not invited, and as the weather was very unfavorable and traveling dangerous on account of the ice. Past Master G. V. Rouse has enjoyed the highest position in the Grange ever since its organization, and no man, whether in or out of the Order, can boast of a more enviable reputation for industry, honesty, modesty and solid integrity. A better name could not be suggested as a candidate for the Legislature, and, owing to his dignified and charitable manner of acting as a candidate before the last election to that office, he could easily be elected. Let his friends see that his name is placed upon the list before the forthcoming election, and the result need not be feared.

There have been quite a number of parties in this section since Christmas. Mr. Owen Utz takes his "sweety" to the parties, and regards it no unpleasant task.

Miss Lillie Reed has returned from a very pleasant trip to Florence. INCONSTANT.

Florence.

Right Reverend Bishop Toebbe, of Covington, is visiting this part of his diocese. He celebrated Mass at the church here on Tuesday morning and expects to remain here several days.

Mrs. Jordan, an aged lady, who lives but a short distance below town, fell on the ice one day last week and broke her leg.

John U. Lloyd, son of N. M. Lloyd, a former well known citizen of this town, was married in Cincinnati, about two weeks ago, to Miss Ada Meder. They went to New York on a bridal tour, and while gone, the young bride was seized with an acute attack of pneumonia from which she died, the third day after her marriage.

At an election for town officers, last week, William Conner was elected President of the Council with H. A. Cantler, Cornelius Ahern and Felix Myers, Common Councilmen, T. L. Sweenam, Treasurer; Asa Meacham, Assessor; Oscar Conrad, Marsal. There were two candidates for Police Judge, H. Ashley and Judge Yager, it resulted in a tie. Ashley would have had one majority, but the Judges bulldozed one of his supporters and counted him out, so the race will be run over again next Saturday.

J. R. Clutterbuck was elected President; Dr. Corey, Secretary, and Joseph Wagstaff, Treasurer, of the Odd Fellows' Building Association. A dividend of six per cent. was declared for last year. Parties owning stock can get same on application to the Treasurer. UNO.

Plattsburg.

During the last two weeks the weather has reminded us very much of Harpers' pictorial illustrations of Kane and Grinnel's explorations of the north passage. And when that communication reached us on the morning of the 9th that the weather marker was below zero, we thought of stepping around the north pole just to see how the thing looked for fun.

It is a general complaint that the tobacco has been much damaged during the cold, windy weather; and, while the crop is quite a large one, the quality will be rather inferior, as very little handled yet. Nothing has been done in the way of sales.

Mr. George White, one of our best citizens, has sold his farm to Henry Smith, of Lower Market street. The price paid was about $10 per acre. While we regret losing George and his estimable lady from our mid-t, yet we hope to secure a whole-souled neighbor in the person of Uncle Henry.

Quite an enjoyable hop was had at Mr. Simeon Baldon's a few evenings since. The music was the best of the season, and all went merry as a marriage bell.

Uncle Ed Fowler called on us the second day of his mission of the new year, assessing at about the usual rates. Mr. Editor, the property tax is not what we complain of but the confounded poll tax. Would some one, through the columns of the RECORDER explain what becomes of all the poll tax? [Examine the list of claims allowed by the Boone County Court.—ED.]

And "Old Block," of Stringtown, thinks "Remus" is a fit subject to receive a little of the spiritual rejuvenation so necessary in that locality. We acknowledge the corn, but are happy to say that "Old Block" has no chips to receive the iniquities of the father. DON JUAN PRIM.

Petersburg.

The moving of the ice in the river was the all-absorbing entertainment Saturday evening and Sunday. The first break was about 3 o'clock p. m, Saturday, but it only moved about a mile; then about midnight a heavy field of ice from some gorge above came down, causing a general smash, crowding the boats here and at Aurora out on the shore, and piling the heavy ice in two immense ridges on either side. But the ice was too strong for the pressure upon it, and not until 11 a. m. Sunday did the grand crash come. The river, after rising about twelve or fifteen feet, suddenly broke the whole gorge at once, and with a tremendous sweep the immense field of ice moved swiftly away. A little damage to lines and floats, incline railway and one corn boat at the distillery will perhaps cover the whole mischief at this landing, but very few others shared so well. The Minnie was above town about a mile in an excellent harbor, and escaped unscathed. But the steamboatmen and coal dealers of Cincinnati are sufferers to an untold amount. Over one hundred boats, mostly empty, passed here after 1 o'clock Sunday. On one of them was a man calling for help, but no one could possibly get to him for the floating ice.

And now come the members of the Petersburg Grange with a grand parade, big public dinner and installation of officers, last Saturday. The casualties were few, the falling of a young lady from a sleigh onto the ice, from which she carefully lifted herself with a slight cut over her left eye, being the only unfortunate occurrence of the day. But the fun was fine and the dinner most excellent. That most thoughtful brother, Jas. A. Botts, bringing a four-gallon vial of sparkling cider to help wash the dinner away, was greeted heartily by all who did not belong "unit der demperance." Owing to the absence of Judge Phelps, J. D. Willis and one or two other heavy pieces of artillery appertaining to Grange polemics, the defense and advocacy of the principles devolved upon N. S. Walton, who acquitted himself to the entire satisfaction of his audience.

[The above did not put in an appearance in time for last week.—ED.]

By some sober turn in the mail carriers between this port and Burlington, or a lucid interval on the part of the editor of the RECORDER, last week, we were saved from the weekly (weakly) infliction of news from this point.

The political artillery has all returned spiked, from the Louisville convention. There is nothing astonishing in their being in that condition, it being the universal order of things to use a large quantity of spikes at a convention of any kind.

The river which has abounded in cold feeds of much ice water, boats and drift, is slowly subsiding after having reached within about 16 inches of the high water of August 1875.

Mr. George Hurd had the misfortune of losing his only child, last Saturday with dyphtheria. Mrs. Riddell has a very serious attack of erysipelas of the face and neck. Several other cases of sickness and suffering are reported, and we have no re use for a good working over of the Howard Association, than for anyother thing known to humanity.

Rev. W. S. Keen will deliver a public address on Thursday evening, 8th proximo, at the Christian Church in this town. His subject will be "The Principles of Od l Fellowship," and is sure to be entertaining. The public is invited and requested to attend.

The Water Witch has resumed trips, and notwithstanding the reports in the Cincinnati papers that she had been carried away in the ice and drift.

WE have received the January number of Leisure Hours, a handsome mammoth 16 page (64 columns) family paper, filled with the choicest literature—serial and short stories, sketches, poetry, wit, humor, &c., &c. It is entertaining, amusing and instructive, and is one of the cheapest papers, the amount and quality of matter considered, that we have seen. The price is $1·20 per year, including as premium a genuine fine-line steel engraving, called "The Mitherless Bairn," printed on 22x28 plate paper, which the publishers claim is superior in point of merit and attractiveness to any premium ever offered by any other paper in this country, and is alone worth the money asked for both. The publishers, J. L. Patten & Co., 162 William st., New York, authorize us to say that, in order to introduce the paper in this vicinity, they make a special offer to every one of our readers to send them the paper—a "trial trip" of four months, post-paid, commencing with the January number—for 25 cents. Our readers who avail themselves of this offer will, we feel certain, thank us for having called their attention to it. BURLINGTON, KY., JANUARY 25.

CENSUS, OR NON-CENSUS?

THE census, it is said, embraces seventeen million women. Who wouldn't be a census?

Just think of it—seventeen millions
Resplendent with multiplied charms,
A host of adorable women,
Rushing right into your arms!
Coming one after another,
Faster than flakes of snow,
Myriads hurrying up to be kissed,
And waiting for others to go.

Just think of it—seventeen millions:
From every land under the skies;
Multitudinous types of figure and face
A world of wonderful eyes;
Love's wildest vision of possible bliss
Turned sweetly, suddenly true:
Who wouldn't, if he could, be a census?
Think—seventeen millions! Who?

But stop! These seventeen millions
From every land under the skies,
Can't all be adorable women,
Can't all have wonderful eyes.
There are faces unpleasant to look at,
Complexions decidedly bad,
Heaps on heaps who never had beauty,
Or have lost the little they had.

There are women who scowl and who squint,
And look opposite ways at a time,
And blinking, bleareye'd monsters,
Whose kiss would be kin to a crime.
There are horrible objects with wens,
And features twisted awry,
Termagants armed with the broomstick,
Shrews who smack of the sty.

There are women with turned-up noses,
And noses bent down flat,
And features drawn and teeth all gone,
And cheeks like a knocked-in hat.
There are anatomical women,
With most of their bones outside,
And women like magnified tumors,
Whom you could not embrace if you tried,

There are women all padded and painted,
More humbug than women, I'm told,
Manufactured of cotton and offered for sale
At current prices of gold.
There are women with hair that comes off,
And teeth that they have to put in
Who drop slowly apart like a bundle,
As you pull out each separate pin.

There are women with brains like a baby's
Bat tongues enough each for ten;
Women who live by abusing each other,
And women who feed upon men;
Amazons, cannibals, Jezebels, hags,
Flutterers, simpletons, shrews,
Say sixteen millions of such, and about,
One million a fellow might choose.

You must take them, though, just as they come,
As fast as they please to rush in:
On the whole twould seem, viewing it calmly,
As best, perhaps, not to begin.
It's a pity to give up the good ones,
But think of the others, my friend;
And as soon as you start at the head of the line,
You are in for it down to the end.

Horse-Shoeing.

The following extracts from a recent article in Forest and Stream contain some useful suggestions:

"On an average horses require shoeing once a month. The length of time a shoe will wear depends much on the kind of service a horse is doing, and on the kind of road he is daily traveling. A team horse in heavy draught does not wear out as many shoes as one used in a hack; quick motion grinds down shoes more rapidly than slow use. Some pavement is harder on shoes than an ordinary road, while the friction of a gravelly road wears them away rapidly. Wooden pavement is but a little saving to the wear and tear of shoes, for the grit and dust which become impacted in the interstices of the wooden blocks grind away shoes like the friction of an emery wheel. The hind shoes wear out first, and there is more strain and friction on them than on the forward shoes. It is impossible and improper for a horse to wear shoes more than six weeks, for the growth of the foot shortens the shoe, as well as changes the shape otherwise. The neglect will cause the shoe to encroach upon the soft textures of the foot and produce lameness.

"There are but few practical mechanics who have sufficiently studied the foot of the horse. It is not enough to know the anatomy of the foot, and where to insert a nail not to cause pain, but the foot should be studied in the state of nature, before the mechanism of man has, by artificial appliances, distorted it. The shape of the foot of the wild horse, or of one which has never been shod, should be taken as a model. The foot is then properly balanced, neither too long nor too broad, but it has adjusted itself to nature, and the muscles and tendons are not strained by travel. Confinement and unskillful shoeing change the anatomical relations of the foot, and the best judgment of the mechanic is often taxed to correct the growing deformity—from unskillful shoeing. When a reasoning, skillful mechanic is found, the horse is safe in his hands, for he only preserves the normal shape of the hoof, and adjusts the shoe to protect it. The frog in the hoof of the horse is placed there for a particular purpose, and should not be cut by the shoer. If this is allowed, contraction and lameness will follow. The shape and weight of the shoe should be accommodated to the purposes for which they are designed. The track horse requires a shoe lighter and without corks, while the draught horse must have a heavy broad shoe, with corks, to enable him to obtain foothold and travel with the least possible strain."

SHE wouldn't stand to have a tooth pulled for one million two hundred thousand dollars, she said, and yet she walked the streets all day in tiny gaiters, two sizes too small for her, and thought nothing of it; but then nobody saw the tooth, and several saw the gaiters.

The Honey Crop.

The great advancement in the production of honey in the United States during the past few years gives us an inkling of what may be done in the future. The American Grocer, in speaking of this advance, remarks that, from the insignificant and uncertain pursuit of a few years ago, it has arisen to its present position as an honorable, healthful and lucrative employment. It is not so long since the price asked for honey was a fancy one, and when only the rich and extravagant used much of it for the table.

The extraordinary yield of honey during the past season has, more than ever, demonstrated the necessity for increasing the channels through which this delicious nectar may find its way before the public. The efforts of the dealers have already resulted in taking it from the list of luxuries and bringing it into general demand for families of moderate means, and it has taken its place beside such articles as butter, cheese and cream. Bee men don't like to acknowledge the fact that honey at five cents a pound returns more on the investment and labor required than most other farm products, but it is, nevertheless, true. They seem very much afraid that merchants who are now turning their attention to its sale will cut down the prices and spoil the market.

The law of supply and demand governs the market price of commodities, whether wheat or honey; and, in selling, the question is not what either can be afforded for, but what will it bring. The demand for honey as a luxury has heretofore absorbed all that was produced, and made it so dear that comparatively few could afford it. Now, with the modern appliances discovered to direct these busy workers for man's benefit, bee-keeping is destined to develop a source of untold wealth to the country, and bees will be kept in sufficient numbers to gather the millions of tons of sweets formerly wasted. Exaggerated and incredible as this expression may seem at the first glance, with the record of 200,000 pounds of surplus honey gathered in one season by bees kept within an area of ten miles as a basis for an estimate, the statement is no longer a mere hyperbole of speech. —Rural New Yorker.

Brown's Matrimonial Method.

"Brown, I don't know how it is that your girls marry off as soon as they get old enough, while none of mine can marry."

"Oh, that's simple enough. I marry my girls off on the buckwheat straw principle."

"But what is that principle? I never heard of it before."

"Well, I used to raise a good deal of buckwheat, and it puzzled me to know how to get rid of the straw. Nothing would eat it and it was a great bother to me. At last I thought of a plan. I stacked my buckwheat straw nicely and built a high rail fence around it. My cattle, of course, concluded that it was something good, and at once tore down the fence and began to eat the straw. I dogged them away and put up the fence a few times, but the more I drove them away the more anxious they became to eat the straw, and eat it they did, every bit of it. As I said, I marry my girls on the same principle. When a young man that I don't like begins calling on my girls, I encourage him in every way I can. I tell him to come often and stay as late as he pleases, and I take pains to hint to the girls that I think they'd better set their caps for him. It works first-rate. He don't make many calls, for the girls treat him as coolly as they can. But when a young fellow that I like comes around, a man that I think would suit me for a son in-law, I don't let him make many calls before I give him to understand that he isn't wanted around my house. I tell the girls, too, that they shall not have anything to do with him, and give them orders never to speak to him again. The plan always works first-rate. The young folks begin to pitch into each other and the next thing I know they are engaged to be married. When I see that they are determined to marry, I always give in and pretend to make the best of it. That's the way I manage it."

RUSKIN says a man ought to know—1. Where he is, that is to say, what sort of a world he has got into; how large it is; what kind of creatures live in it, and how they do live; what it is made of, and what may be made of it. 2. Where he is going, that is to say, what chances and reports there are of any other world besides this; what seems to be the nature of that other world; and whether for information respecting it, he had better consult the Bible, the Koran, or the Council of Trent. 3. What he had best do under these circumstances, that is to say, what kind of faculties he possesses; what are the present state and wants of mankind; what his place in society; and what are the readiest means in his power of obtaining happiness and imparting it to others.

THE body of Charles Emory, a soldier who died in Washington, D. C., in 1863, was taken up the other day for the purpose of rearranging the family lot in Jaffrey, N. H., and was found to be petrified. It was estimated that the weight was from six hundred to seven hundred pounds. When alive his weight was one hundred and twenty-five pounds. His features, clothing, and the flower wreath around his face were all as perfect as the day when he was buried.

BEAUTIFUL CHILD.

The following poem was written by Major W. A. H. Sigourney, nephew of the poetess of that name, and is a companion poem to "Beautiful Snow," by the same author.

He had in early life married a Miss ——, a lady of great personal attractions, and with her made a voyage to Europe. During their absence, rumors unfavorable to her character reached the Sigourney family. The reports seem to have been well founded, for, shortly after her return to New York, she showed that the curse of the nineteenth century—the demon drink—had added another soul to the list of his victims. She abandoned her husband, became an outcast, and was next heard of as an inmate of the penitentiary on Blackwell's Island. Her husband's love was still sufficiently strong to induce him to make another effort to save her, and through his influence she was released, only again to desert her home. In the winter of 1855, the papers spoke of a young and beautiful woman having been found dead under the snow in a disreputable street in New York. Something seemed to tell Sigourney that the body was that of his wife. Upon making inquiries, he found his surmises were but too true, and, after claiming the remains, he had them interred in that picturesque "silent city," which overlooks the busy harbor of New York. The story of that erring wife was told in the touching language of "Beautiful Snow," several years afterward Major Sigourney was found dead in the outskirts of New York, under circumstances leading to the belief that he had shot himself. The circumstances connected with his death remain a mystery. Not even his child, for whom he always displayed the tenderest affection, can throw any light upon it. The latest effort of his genius is displayed in the poem already referred to:

BEAUTIFUL CHILD.

"Beautiful child by the mother's knee,
In the mystic future what wilt thou be?
A demon of sin or an angel sublime—
A poison spot, or innocent thyme—
A spirit of evil flashing down
With the lurid light of a fiery crown,
Or gliding up with a shining track,
Like the morning star that ne'er looks back?
Dainties dreamer that ever smiled,
Which wilt thou be, my beautiful child?

"Beautiful child in my garden bowers,
Friend of the butterflies, birds and flowers;
Pure as the sparkling crystaline stream,
Jewels of truth in thy fairy eyes beam—
Was there ever a whiter soul than thine
Worshiped by love in a mortal shrine?
My heart thou hast gladdened for two sweet years
With rainbows of hope thro' mists of tears—
Mists beyond which the sunny smile,
With its halo of glory beams all the while.

"Beautiful child, to thy look is given
A gleam serene—not of earth, but of heaven;
With thy veil tale eyes and prattling tongue,
Would them couldst ever thus be young—
Like the liquid strain of the mocking-bird,
From sight to hail thy voice is heard;
How oft in the garden nooks they're found,
With flowers thy curly head around,
And kneeling beside me with fingers so quaint!
Oh! who would not dote on my infant saint?

"Beautiful child, what thy fate shall be,
Perchance, is wisely hidden from me;
A fallen star thou mayst leave my side,
And of sorrow and shame become the bride—
Shivering, quivering, through the cold street,
With a curse behind and before thy feet,
Ashamed to live, and afraid to die,
No home, no friend, and a pitiless sky.
Merciful Father—my brain grows wild—
Oh! keep from evil my beautiful child!

"Beautiful child, mayst thou soar above,
A warbling cherub of joy and love;
A drop on eternity's mighty sea,
A blossom on life's immortal tree—
Floating, flowering evermore,
In the blessed light of the golden shore.
And, as I gaze on thy sinless bloom
And thy radiant face, they dispel my gloom;
I feel He will keep thee undefiled,
And His love protect my beautiful child."

THE EARLY DAYS OF KENTUCKY.

Some Reminiscences from the Life of Col. Cave Johnson, Together With an Obituary Written at the Time of His Death.

OBITUARY.

Col. Cave Johnson departed this life at his residence at North Bend, Boone County, Ky., on the 19th day of January, 1850, in the ninetieth year of his age.

Sound and firm of constitution and health, endowed with strong common sense, sedate and thoughtful, taciturn and slow of speech, the deceased possessed much individuality and originality of character, and was a go d specimen of that hardy, vigorous and manly class of men—the pioneers of Kentucky. For more than seventy years had he been a citizen or inhabitant of Kentucky. When he immigrated it was a wilderness, whose rich soil and great productiveness made it the common property and general battle field, not only of the wolf, the panther and the buffalo, but of the equally wild and savage Indian. The white man came to "the dark and bloody ground," and in a few years the contest for dominion was over—the howl of the wolf, the cry of the panther, and the yell of the Indian were heard no more. But of the connection of the deceased with the early settlement of our State, or with the active and busy scenes of subsequent times, it is not our purpose here to write. The sketch of his life, written by himself and furnished us but a few months before his death, must suffice.

In politics Col. Johnson was ever a Democrat. In religion he was a Baptist, and had been a consistent and zealous member of that church for more than fifty years. He also took great interest in the spread of the Gospel, and contributed liberally to the support of foreign and home missions. A short time before his death he prepared the following narrative, written in his own steady, plain, business hand:

REMINISCENCES.

I was born on the 15th of November in the year 1760, in the county of Orange and State of Virginia. My father's name was Wm. Johnson. He died when I was but four or five years old. My mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Cave. I had three brothers—Robert, the eldest, has been dead upward of thirty years; Benjamin, who has been dead near fifty years; and Valentine, the youngest, who now lives in Orange City, Va. I had five sisters—Nancy married Wm. Rogers; Mildred married Jno. Sebree, who died at the siege of York, in Virginia; Elizabeth married Geo. Eve, who died on Elkhorn more than thirty years ago; Hannah married Robert Bradly, who died in Scott County some forty years since; and Sally married Laban Shipp, who died in the southern part of Kentucky. After the death of my father, I continued with my mother and worked on the farm. What education I got was at country schools. I learned to read and write, and arithmetic so far as to include the rule of three.

On the 1st day of April, 1779, my brother Robert, myself and one other man (Wm. Tomlinson) set out from Orange County, Va., for a visit to Kentucky. There was then about two hundred miles of the road from the back settlements on Holston waters to Kentucky that was considered to be quite dangerous, traveling with so small a company as ours (only three); but we pushed on, and at Cumberland River We overtook a company of several families of the Bryants, from North Carolina, on their way to Kentucky to settle the place since called Bryant's Station, on North Elkhorn. We joined in with their company, and arrived first at Boonesborough, where we obtained some little Indian corn, and then went on to North Elkhorn, where we arrived about the last of April. We, that is Tomlinson and myself, assisted the Bryants in putting up some cabins. Robert Johnson left us and went to Lexington, which had just been settled by a company from about Alleghany and Monongahela. After viewing and exploring the country some few weeks, he returned home to Virginia. Tomlinson and myself planted about four acres of corn, and, after we had finished working it, in July we left for home.

And here I will mention an incident that happened on the way in the wilderness. A number, now of Bryant's and others, were along. Our company was considerable as to numbers, and when in the wilderness, not far from Cumberland River, we stopped to eat our dinners and noon it, as it was called, and to let our horses graze. While we were thus stopped, a number of the men took their guns and turned out to hunt, wishing to kill deer, and, while they were out from camp, one man, Aquilla White, shot and killed William Beamlett, mistaking him for an Indian. Beamlett was a preacher and one of our company, and there we buried him.

Tomlinson and myself reached home in safety.

My brother Robert, having got somewhat acquainted while in Kentucky with some of the military surveys that had been made by John Floyd, purchased two tracts, and in the fall of that year started with his family to Kentucky, to go by water. He got to Redstone or Brownsville, when the river became too low, and continued so until it froze up. He continued there until spring of the year, when he took water and landed at the Falls of Ohio, and moved from there to Beargrass, on to John Floyd's land, where he raised a crop of corn, and some time during that summer he went out with the expedition under Gen. Clark into the Miami country against the Indians.

And here I will mention another incident which occurred while he resided at Beargrass. The Indians had waylaid the trace that led from the settlement on Beargrass to the Falls, and had killed several people there. Having understood from the spies that were sent out to examine the neighborhood that they had discovered Indian signs, and that they apprehended they might be waylaying that trace, the inhabitants at the Falls and those of the Beargrass settlement raised a company and undertook to examine said trace. They divided into three companies. One marched along the trace, the other two marched through the woods on each side. They found the Indians, as they expected, lying in ambush near the road, and, coming on their backs, fired on them, killing one dead on the spot and wounding one other that got off. The Indians, discovering the men on the trace, fired at them at the same time they were fired on, and wounded one of the white men badly. My brother Robert was one of the men who fired at the Indians.

I will now go back a little. In the year 1779, some time after our arrival at Bryant's Station, Col. Bowman, who lived on the south side of Kentucky River, raised what force he could, and crossed the Ohio at the mouth of Licking and went against the Indians at a town where they lived on the Little Miami, at old Chillicothe. They got to the town in the morning before daylight undiscovered, and attacked them. The Indians stuck to their houses and fought, and killed several of the most daring and best soldiers. The whites retreated, and the Indians followed them nearly to the Ohio.

Robert Johnson moved from Beargrass to Bryants' Station, I think, in the fall of 1780. There he built some cabins, making part of the fort. I, then a young man, was part of his family. Buffalo being very plenty in the woods, there was not much difficulty in obtaining meat for the families, except that of risking our scalps, from which danger we considered ourselves never alsented when out.

The next years, 1781 and 2, were disastrous ones for Kentucky. Captain Bird, a British officer from Detroit, with a large force of Indians, came over the Ohio, brought one field piece (I suppose a six-pounder), and captured Riddle's and Martin's stations, on Licking. The Indians also broke up Grant's Station, on the waters of Licking, and killed a number of persons; also, Estil's defeat, on the waters of Licking. Captain Estil was considered one of our best defenders against the Indians. He raised and headed some twelve or fourteen men, said to be good soldiers, to fight Indians, and followed about the same number of Indians that he had men, overtook them and had a severe battle. Captain Estil himself was killed, and near one-half on each side was killed, and they made a draw battle of it.

Another incident I will here mention. Hunting in the woods for our meat being a dangerous business, twelve of us at Bryant's turned out for that purpose, all in one company. When we got into the hunting woods, near where Georgetown now stands, we separated into three companies. Wm. Bryant, the head and principal man of the families and station at that time, headed one of the companies. Another of the Bryants headed that I belonged to. The agreement when we parted was that we were to meet at night at the mouth of Coin Run on North Elkhorn. Soon after we parted, the Indians, some twelve or fourteen in number, got on the trail of the company that I belonged to (for it was easy to track a single horse in those woods at that time). Our leader, Mr. Bryant, had lit off his horse to shoot a deer. The other three of us were sitting on our horses when the Indians came in sight. I was the first to discover them. We made out to get off before the fired on us, and, having the heels of them, we made use of it, and not being strong enough to fight them, we went on to the station. On the next day twelve or fifteen men of the station turned out and went to hunt for Wm. Bryant and his company, who encamped at the mouth of Coin Run the night before, and were out the next day not far from Georgetown. He discovered a horse that was hobbled and with a bell on him on the other side of the creek from where he was. He directed the other three of his company to remain where they were while he should cross the creek and see what it meant. He got over, and when near the horse the Indians, who were in ambush, fired on him and wounded him with three balls. His horse, however, carried him off. The company from the station who were on the hunt of him were in hearing of the guns when they fired on him. They rushed on to the place and found the Indians, and a battle ensued. They killed one Indian and got his scalp, and wounded several more. Five of the whites were wounded; one of them (David Jones) was shot through near the middle of the breast, but none of them died except Mr. Bryant, whom the company on their return found in the woods badly wounded. He was taken on to the station, where he died, much lamented.

Bad Temper.

There are few things more productive of evil in domestic life than a thoroughly bad temper. It does not matter what form that temper may assume, whether it is of the sulky kind that maintains perfect silence for many days, or the madly passionate, which vents itself in absolute violence. Ill-temper at any age is a bad thing; it never does anybody any good, and those who indulge in it feel no better for it. After the passion has passed away one sees that he has been very foolish, and knows that others see it too. Bad temper in the aged is, perhaps, the most trying of all. It is indeed a pitiable sight to see the wrinkled cheek of an old person aflame with the cries of anger and passion. Since anger is useless, and an unspeakable misery to its victims, why should it be indulged in at all?

THE darkness of night helps us to see the bright stars, the darkness of sorrow helps us to see God and heaven.

"IS there an opening here for an intellectual writer?" said a very red faced youth, with the cork of a bottle sticking out of his breast pocket. Turn the knob to the right."

THIS is told of Judge Abbott: When he was in Charleston a few days ago, he asked the old darkey at work in his room what made him so slow in building the fire. The aged African replied: "Fact is, Judge, dar is no coal down stairs. ALMOST simultaneously with the notice that Great Britain recedes from her false position in regard to the Extradition Treaty and proposes to deliver up fugitive criminals, Spain has concluded a treaty with the United States of a similar character. The treaty specifies twenty-six offences for which fugitives may be surrendered, including all but political offences. Thus the comity of nations and governments is making progress.

A REMARKABLE game of cards was played in the basement of a house on Washington street, yesterday. The boy of the house had just turned up a diamond, and was waiting for the other boy to lead, when the old man appeared at the head of the stairs, ordered the other boy up, turned up his own boy, discarded some of his apparel, and swung a club. The old man played it alone, and made every point, although the neighbor's boy cut.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL, Editor and Proprietor.

BURLINGTON, KY., FERRUARY 1.

THERE are still prospects of an Eastern war.

IN the first week this year 116 cases of small-pox were reported in London.

THE Cabinet, with the exception of Secretary Fish is opposed to the Electoral Bill.

GRANT signed the Electoral Bill. He says it is constitutional and the proper measure for the times.

JUDGE DAVIS of the Supreme Court of the United States, who has been elected United States Senator from Illinois, does not propose resigning his present office till the 4th of March.

FOR the year beginning October. 1875, and ending November, 1876, the Ballard County Court allowed claims to the amount of $7,864 26. At the close of the October term, 1875, the county was in debt $22,232 42.

THE proprietor of the Willard Hotel in Louisville,—Whipp, shot and killed his business manager last Friday. The difficulty which resulted in the fatal shooting grew out of a misunderstanding as to the duty of the Clerk to attend to the 5 o'clock breakfast.

THE Frankfort Yeoman says: "At this time the number of persons received at the Penitentiary is largely greater than the number discharged. The prison is filling up rapidly, and the necessity for another establishment of that kind somewhere in the State is becoming obvious." This does not show that the morals of our people are improving, but ratheer the contrary.

THE town of Aurora, Ind., is in a fever of excitement over an attempt to rob the grave of Miss Little, in Riverview Cemetery last Thursday night. A horse and buggy belonging to the ghouls was captured but can not be identified. It is the general opinion that both horse and buggy belong to parties in Cincinnati. The buggy is one of John Curtis' make. There were two parties engaged in the attempted body raising.

A NUMBER of the buildings at the Centennial Exposition have been sold at auction. The bidding was not very spirited, and the prices realized were low. The Main Building, which cost $2,600,000 to construct, was sold to the Permanent Exhibition Company for $250,000. The Art Annex, which cost $110,000, was sold for $3,050. Agricultural Hall, costing $275,000, was sold for $12,000. The total cost of the buildings sold was about $2,500,000, and the amount realized was $270,160.

JOHN A. LOGAN, present United States Senator from Illinois, has been laid on the shelf. After a prolonged season of balloting in the Legislature of Illinois, and it becoming evident that he could not be elected, Logan withdrew, after which Judge Davis, of the Supreme Court of the the United States, was chosen as Logan's successor. Judge Davis can not be claimed by the Democrats, neither can the Republicans book him as one of them. He is more of an Independent than otherwise.

A MAN named Whitemore died of hydrophobia in Cincinnati last week. Whitemore was a native of St. John's, New Brunswick, which place he left about nine years ago and came to Cincinnati. Some two years before the unfortunate man left New Brunswick he was bitten by a rabid dog, but the wound healed over and gave him no trouble at the time. He had been bitten twice, after by dogs that acted rather suspiciously, but nothing was thought of the matter till last week, when the dread disease made its appearance and claimed its victory last Sunday.

PACKARD has thus far failed to persuade Grant to recognize his Government in Louisiana. Grant don't bulldoze worth a cent, and Kellogg's entreaties are not noticed by him. The Republican nor Democrat Legislatures in Louisiana have not accomplished anything yet, but the Nicholls Government appears to have more support than that of Packard & Co. So soon as the Presidential muss is quieted the State Governments in South Carolina and Louisiana will be straightened out and set running. The decision as to the President elected will amount to a decision as to which Legislature will be recognized in those States having dual Governments.

THREE REASONS WHY THE BELLEVUE TURNPIKE SHOULD BE BUILT.

Those interested in the building of the Burlington and Bellevue Turnpike will find in this issue a call for a meeting of the stock-holders of said road at Mr. Walton's, next Saturday, and as this is the last meeting before the time advertised for awarding the contract for building said road, those who are present should consider well the three following reasons why they should not abandon the enterprise:

First, Those who have been taking an active part in the preliminary moves, are now out several hundred dollars in time and money, and to that extent the expense has been defrayed, and should the scheme now be abandoned, these gentlemen are bound to be losers to the extent of the money they have contributed and the time they gave the work, and still this same expense will have to be met every time an attempt is made to put the road through.

Second, That every failure in any enterprise adds an obstacle that has to be overcome in every attempt thereafter in the same business. Failure after failure will eventually ruin anything attempted. People lose confidence in attempts to accomplish anything which has been unsuccessful time after time, and finally become so indifferent and careless as to refuse to recognize any attempt, no difference how honest the moving spirits are in their efforts.

Third, The road can be constructed at a less cost at the present time than ever before and probably ever can be. Labor and everything else is cheaper now than it has been for many years, and those bidding for the contract will bid with this fact before their eyes. They know there are multitudes of men now in search of employment who are willing to work at reduced wages, and to secure all the hands necessary will require but a few days notice.

Those bidding for the road are likely to make their bids less on account of this being the season of the year at which all hands and outfits for such work are idle, and likely to remain so for some time. This will be a strong inducement for the bidders to work on a small margin.

Taking a view of all the surroundings it looks as though those contributing for the building of the road will sacrifice no little if they fail to push the construction through without further delay. It will not do to procrastinate.

THE report of the Superintendent of Public Instruction for last year, shows that there were about seven hundred private schools taught in the State. Seventy-five academies and twenty-five colleges, male and female, were in operation, while the public schools numbered over six thousand and five hundred. Of the public schools, forty-seven were not taught. The number of school-houses in the State is four thousand eight hundred and thirty, the appraised value of which is eight hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars, being an average of one hundred and eighty-one dollars to the house. In the State, the report shows that there are four hundred thousand two hundred and fifty-three children, being an average of ninety-five children to each school-house reported. Boone County reports three thousand six hundred and sixty-three children that come within the school age. For the instruction of the children of Boone County, there were six thousand one hundred and ninety-nine dollars and seventy cents of the school fund appropriated last year. To that amount was added two hundred and twenty-eight dollars and forty-one cents interest on the County Bond. In this county there are forty-six districts, and in these forty-six districts, forty-seven teachers were engaged teaching at an average salary of about forty dollars per month.

The school-houses in this county are valued at about seven thousand two hundred and five dollars, being nearly an average of one hundred and ninety dollars each. It seems that the schools in the conty are prospering, and the cause of education is receiving some attention.

REPORTS from Florida say there were fewer to visit there than during the past tree years, but more persons have gone there to settle than ever before. The cold weather has had considerable effect on the orange trees they now look cheerless.

THE Liberal League, of Philadelphia, celebrated the one hundred and fortieth birthday of Tom Paine, on the 28th of last month.

THE Electoral Bill passed both Houses of Congress last week. The vote in the Senate was 47 for and 17 against its passage. In the House 191 voted for and 86 against the bill. The debate in the Senate was protracted and heated. Conklin gave Morton a severe blistering during his speech which was one of the ablest arguments that has been made in Congress for some time. Several of the Kentucky delegation in the House voted against the Electoral Bill, and among that number was Hon. Thomas L. Jones, of this district. The Commission commences work under the Electoral Bill to-day. There seems to be a difference of opinion as to whether or not the Commission has a right to go behind the returns as sent in from the different States. The returns of Florida will be the seventh acted upon, and the decision in that case will virtually amount to a decission of the election. Should the Commission sustain the decision of the Supreme Court of that State, and give the electoral vote to Tilden, his election is at once determined by 188 votes. Should the Commission decide that it has no right to go behind the returns, when it comes to the vote of Oregon, as returned under certificates given by the Governor, there it will find one Tilden electoral vote certified by that officer, which gives Tilden 185 votes, a majority of the college and just enough to make him President of t heUnited States. It looks impossible to get through the Presidential difficulties without making Tilden President.

THE Republican Legislature in Louisiana passed a resolution expressing full faith and confidence in the President of the Senate, and requesting the Representatives and Senators of that State to oppose the Electoral Bill.

THE Joint Commission on the part of the Senate is composed of Morton, Edmunds and Howe, Republicans, and Thurman and Bayard, Democrats.

THE Mount Sterling Sentinel is certainly in bad health. Last week's issue was the palest looking sheet we have seen for many days.

THE members of the Louisiana Returning Board were under lock and key a few days while in Washington.

THE $4,800 iron-clad jail is a wreck. No liveslost, but three prisoners are known to be among the missing.

IN Flemingsburg, coal is selling at forty-five cents per bushel and is scarce and hard to obtain at that price.

THE Republican majority in the Senate after the 4th of March will be less than it has been since 1861.

GRANT has commenced dispersing the forces which he concentrated at the Capitol.

CYNTHIANA NEWS: Monday evening about dark, as Mr. Thomas Jefferson was riding out to the home of W. F. Berry near this city, he was fired on by one of a party of three men when just beyond the bridge. The man fired four shots at Mr. J., one of which passed through his hat and another perforated the skirt of his coat. Mr. J. followed them a short distance, firing at them until he emptied his pistol. He then returned to town and accompanied by constable Ewalt, followed them as far as Tricum, but was unable to find them. No cause can be assigned for this dastardly attempt on the life of a peaceful traveler, save an over dose of Court Day Whisky. It is hoped that the gang of would be murderers may be found and the penalties of the law enforced on them.

Numbers of people in this section grew alarmed and agitated by the heavy rumbling sounds that seemed to be far up in the elements, some time during Tuesday afternoon. No one knew whence it came whither it went or what caused it. Yet it was distinctly heard and felt by a great many.

We are thankful for small favors, and large ones in proportion; so bring in a door that will fit the knob, Uncle John.

LAST Saturday night the negroes had, or were to have, a dance at the house of a negro man who lives near town. About the time the crowd assembled a quarrel arose, and a general fight was the result. Negroes who were present say razors, knives and pistols were flourished, and several shots fired. Some of the negroes fled to the woods and took shelter behind trees; some hid in fence corners, and others lay on the ground and hallooed murder at the top of their voice. There was but one hurt, and he was severely beaten.

THE shake that we mentioned last week seems to have been pretty generally noticed in this and adjoining counties. The explosion of rumbling noise that accompanied the shaking was also heard by nearly every person who was out in the open air. Several persons say they saw a train of smoke following the course from which the explosion proceeded. In some localities persons were badly frightened by the phenomenon, and can not be reconciled as to the cause of the strange occurrence. The reports and the shaking were noticed at the several different points at the same time, and all accounts agree as to the nature of the shaking. The cause of the frequent appearance of meteors in this section is a subject for the investigation of astronomers, and one, the explanation of which would be highly interesting to those who inhabit the district which of late has been shaken by these stray bodies.

Jail Delivery.

Monday morning the town was thrown into a high state of excitement when it was discovered that the three prisoners who had been confined in the jail had effected an escape from that iron-clad, fire-proof building.

THE TRIO OF PRISONERS

That unexpectedly took an indefinite leave of absence was composed of one white man and two negro men, all awaiting trial for felony. The white man, B. B. Roberts, some time during last fall stole a horse from M. Rich, of Big Bone, and escaped to Montgomery County, where he was subsequently arrested on some other charge and lodged in jail at Mount Sterling. While in jail at that place, it was learned by the authorities of that county that Roberts was wanted in Boone to answer to the charge of horse stealing. They at once brought him to Boone and delivered him to the Jailer, in whose custody he remained till self-liberated. One of the darkies stole some money and clothes somewhere in the vicinity of Walton. The other stole some money from some person in the neighborhood of Constance.

THE ESCAPE

Was made through the south wall of the building, a little below and to the left of the window on the first floor, and directly behind the stove, which was near the wall. The hole through the wall is about sixteen inches square, and cut with the same exactness as if laid off by a mechanic, and so located that it was necessary to cut but two lines, one horizontal and one perpendicular, through the iron lining, which is three-sixteenths inches. These two lines being cut, to complete the work on the lining it was only necessary to break the heads of the rivets that held the two sections of lining together, and then, by means of a cell door, which they took off its hinges and used as a lever, bend the square piece of lining down, thus leaving nothing between them and the outer world but a brick wall, which was easily removed sufficiently for their exit.

Before the work of removing the brick was commenced, the prisoners removed the stove, and placed the beds and clothing on the floor, that the fall of the brick and lime on the iron could not be heard. The brick that were taken out of the wall were placed in a pile on a mattress that was laid near where the work was being done.

NO TOOLS

Were found, but the neatness with which the iron was cut shows plainly that they were well provided with instruments with which the work could be dispatched with haste, and at the same time with little or no noise. It is also evident that there were confederates on the outside, and doubtless one or more of them were standing watch every night while the work of escape was progressing.

The escape was undoubtedly effected after midnight, for there were persons on the streets till 10 or 11 o'clock Sunday night, and in no instance did any of them hear any noise about the jail.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

Mr. Cowen had allowed the prisoners the the entire lower part of the jail day and night, but was watching the wall in one of the cells, that being the place he thought, if at all, an attempt would be made to cut out. Since they made their escape, Mr. Cowen and his son both remember that every time they have been in the jail for the last few days, one of the negroes was standing behind the stove with his back against the wall and pretending that he was warming his hands. It is evident that this was done to conceal the work that was then progressing.

A REMARKABLE MANUSCRIPT.

The Literary Society.

The Literary Society met on the evening of the 24th, President H. J. Foster in the chair and Secretary M. T. Garnett present, with the quill at the rear of his right auricle.

The President called the meeting to order, and the disposal of business was commenced. The Society was sailing on a smooth sea till the committee appointed to draft the Constitution and By-Laws for the government of the society essayed to make their report. The Chairman of the committee read the Constitution and By-Laws, which created an agitation in the duck-pond of literature. A faction wanted to adopt the report of the committee as a whole, while another faction wanted to consider it section by section. After considerable speechifying, the society voted against taking the report in broken doses, and swallowed it all at once.

So soon as the report was adopted, an amendment or two was tacked on it.

This completed the dearth of buisness on hand for the meeting.

In reading the Constitution, one is struck with the explicit manner in which it lays down the law for governing the election of officers, and especially the President. People will learn how to make Constitutions in a few more centuries.

The programme for the evening was commenced at rather a late hour, but was completed before the meeting adjourned.

The discussion afforded more entertainment than all the rest of the exercises besides. The orators of the evening, A. G. Winston, R. C. Green, Geo. Hughes and Professor Stephenson, each made a flaming speech.

After the discussion, the programme for the next meeting was arranged. The same question will be discussed. H. J. Foster and Dr. J. F. Smith affirm; Daniel Grigsby and Allie Gaines deny.

The question for discussion on the evening of the 7th inst. is, "Affirmed, that the civil and political rights of woman should be equal to those of man." F. Riddell and H. C. Trimble affirm, and B. K. Sleet and W. L. Riddell deny.

ESQ. REUBEN CONNER, of Walton, was in town Monday, and, by the way, the 'Squire was one of the body of indignators that assembled in Louisville on the 18th of last month. The 'Squire says that when he left Louisville he was sure they had Tilden inaugurated and the matter settled, but he now sees there is a probability of their proceedings being counted out.

THE President of the Burlington and Bellevue Turnpike Company requests the Stockholders in said Company to meet at Wm. Walton's, February 3d, 1877, at 1 p.m. sharp. A full attendance is desired.

We direct attention to the advertisement of Robert Holmes, who has located in our town for the purpose of engaging in the blacksmith's trade. Give him a call and his work will recommend him.

Victory for "G. G."

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The contest of last winter between "G. G." and "O. G." passed away like a school-boy's tale—the wonder of an hour—and no person seemed to be the wiser for the searching criticism of "G. G." into the merits and demerits of the fire-proof new jail on the one hand, or for the strong common-sense reasoning of "O. G." on the other hand, defending that noble "job," and warding from its cringing walls the piercing shafts of "G. G." criticisms and the death-dealing blows of his red-hot irony. The shafts hurled by the assailant at that beautiful and much-tortured structure were valueless as sources of instruction to the outside world; but who knows that Roberts & Co. did not get their free ideas of bulldozing the "job" from the hints of its weakness given out by "G. G."? It is an old saying that it is an ill wind that blows nobody good, and we are satisfied that Roberts & Co. have released themselves at much less cost than their lawyers would have charged them. And, therefore, though "G. G." ideas may have benefited no one else, yet who can say they have not benefited Roberts & Co., if by those letters they learned the egg-shell qualities of Uncle Samuel's fire-proof hotel. We, of course, presume "O. G." logic has failed, in so far as it was not equal to the task of persuading the late bulldozers of the "job" to stay longer with Uncle Samuel.

PUMPKIN

Special from the X-roads.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

In accordance with arrangements, the Point Pleasant and County Granges met on last Saturday, the 27th inst., in an apartment of W. M. Conner's recently erected dwelling, on the Burlington and Florence turnpike, near Florence X-Roads, for the purpose of installing their officers, an account of which you will please permit me to give through your columns.

Your correspondent arrived at the place a little before 10 in the morning, at which time the interior of the hall was receiving the finishing touch in the way of decorations from the hands of a few of the sisters. The hall was encircled by a rustic wreath, clinging windingly to the wall near the ceiling. There were also three or four wreaths about five feet in circumference, composed of cedar twigs, artificial flowers, grasses, grain, &c., suspended on the wall in appropriate places. On the left of the hall on entering was to be seen, in large cedar twig letters, the words, "Faith, Hope and Love," which were well and beautifully shaped. With these and a few additional decorations, the hall presented a very nice appearance.

The meeting was organized about 10 or half after, under the "banner" of the Point Pleasant Grange, Master J. H. Walton in the Chair, at which time quite a number of Patrons had collected in the hall being filled almost to its utmost capacity. Before proceeding with the installation, it was necessary to elect three lady officers as a complement to those of Point Pleasant Grange, said Grange at its meeting for the election of officers having failed to get through. As soon as these were elected, the Grange finished the transaction of business that was necessary, after which the meeting was adjourned for dinner. This was, so far, the most interesting and admirable feature of the meeting. The table was soon put in readiness by the sisters, and whoop! the good things that were set out! The table apparently groaned under the bountiful supply. It is hardly necessary to state that some time was devoted by all present in endeavoring to dispose of the edibles, but suffice it to say that after the sisters retired from the burdened and replenished table, there was an extremely great energy and bravery exhibited on the part of the brothers in "standing up to the front" and "going in on their mettle," though, after all their efforts to adhere and secure the enemy they were compelled to halloo out "nough" and retreat, leaving provisions in abundance to triumph over them.

After dinner things were arranged for the installation. Bro. C. Sawdon, of the Cincinnati Sunday Bulletin, was appointed Presiding Master, Judge John S. Phelps Installing Officer, and G. C. Graddy Assistant. The officers elect for the two Granges were arranged, and the Judge, in his own deliberate and imposing manner, with the aid of his efficient and ready Assistant, duly installed them. The following were installed officers of the County Grange: G. V. Rouse, Master; Oscar Gaines, Overseer; G. W. Ranson, Lecturer; W. M. Conner, Steward; S. H. Tanner, Chaplain; J. P. Kelly, Treasurer; J. H. Walton, Secretary; Cyrus Crisler, Gate-Keeper; Mrs. James E. Duncan, Ceres; Mrs. Daniel Berninger, Pomona; Miss Hattie Carpenter, Flora. Two of the officers elect, W. M. Rouse, Assistant Steward, and Miss Ellen Snyder, Stewardess, were not present, and, consequently, were not installed on the present occasion. The following are the Point Pleasant Grange officers, all of which were installed: W. M. Conner, Master; J. P. Utz, Overseer; J. H. Walton, Lecturer; Dock Mannon, Steward; J. N. Crisler, Assistant Steward; A. B. Crigler, Chaplain; S. H. Graves, Treasurer; C. O. Conner, Secretary; Malchus Souther, Gate-Keeper; Mary Craven, Ceres; Malinda Walton, Pomona; Emma Beal, Flora; and Elizabeth Souther, Stewardess.

After the installation, speeches and remarks from the members were in order. Bro. R. C. Sawdon was the first called on to treat the meeting to some "tongue," but, on looking over the programme in the morning and failing to find his name on it, he had eaten too much dinner, consequently impairing his speechifying powers. He however stated that he thought the programme was not yet carried out, inasmuch as it called for an original address from the Installing Officer and one each from the two retiring Masters, all of which yet remained in full force. The Installing Officer was then called upon, and somehow he didn't possess an extreme willingness to "face the music," so, simply making a sharp thought and speaking a sharp speak, he closed his lips and was hushed. His Assistant, Bro. Graddy, was called upon for one of his usually eloquent addresses, but he was wonderfully impressed with the notion that he had just traversed a very rugged and embarrassing road, and also that he had recently ascertained that he was something like an eight-day clock—when once wound up and started it took him a monstrously long time to stop—so, fearing that he would detain the audience until after night, he gently slid down the hill of wit with an avalanche of laughter and was plunged into silence. W. M. Conner's name was then called, but imagining himself to be similar to Bro. Graddy, thought it imprudent to start out on any remarks; so upon returning thanks to those from whom he had received help in getting the hall in readiness for the meeting seated himself, and was heard no more until the next time. G. V. Rouse was requested to state to the meeting some of the principal proceedings of the State Grange at its last session. To this Bro. Rouse responded in a brief talk, in which he said many good things interesting to Patrons. J. H. Walton was next enrolled for remarks. He was of the opinion that the two brothers who compared themselves to eight-day clocks certainly had reference to eating and not speaking, inasmuch as it was evident that they "wound themselves up" at the table at noon to "run a week." Bro. Walton also asked for information to be given the meeting in regard to what actions the State Grange had taken respecting the membership of County Granges, upon which Bro. G. V. Rouse was again called out. He answered by making a statement to the effect that any fourth-degree member was now eligible to the County Grange, if recommended by a sister or brother, and decided acceptable by the County Grange, the matriculation fee being fifty cents for males and nothing for females. Cyrus Crisler was called on. He stated that we had not yet heard from the two best orators in the house, Judge Phelps and Bro. Sawdon, and so, saying stood himself down out Bro. Sawdon again, and he responded to the call in a speech of considerable length, in which he urged upon the Patrons the importance of attending the meetings promptly and regularly, and in addition to this that of being active in and doing something for the cause. He stated that the willingness to eat and the energy in eating manifested by the brothers at the dinner table should be an example of the willingness and energy to be put into the Grange cause. (A bully example it was, too, Bro. Sawdon not excluded in stating it.) He showed that one great objection was to get the members to discuss questions on various subjects of interest, and become good thinkers and talkers and better informed, also showing that it is the duty of the Lecturer to draw out the talent of all the members as well as letting the Grange have the fruits of his own. He also showed the benefits to be derived from the social feature by meeting and mingling together. He directed attention to a neighborhood in which, before the Grange was instituted, there was a sort of coldness seen among the ladies, but after the organization of the Grange quite a different spirit became diffused. When one lady would meet another, it was not with that formal indifference, but with a hearty grasp of the hands and a heartier salutation of the lips, almost (we expect, entirely) making him wish he was a lady. (The Judge, though, said he would rather be a man. Well, we wouldn't blame him, if he were to take the place of a lady.) During the course of his remarks he said many other good things of which we will not speak. Before the adjournment Bro. Sawdon was brought out on "Johnny Smoker," the famous German song for the singing of which he has become quite renowned among the Patrons. This was followed in proper order by the piece entitled "Hearty Laughter" by the audience.

There were many other things said and done on the occasion, a record of which we will not make at present. Suffice it to say the meeting was of one, enjoyed by all in attendance, and, no doubt, productive of much good. So saying we will drop the "quill" and leave the rest for the reader to imagine.

LITTLE SAM.

The Proposed Bellevue Pike.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The leaders of the enterprise for building a turnpike road from this place to Bellevue are John E. Walton, William Walton, J. J. Lillard, James Rogers, S. P. Brady, John W. Gaines and others, all men of enterprise and with ample ability to push the project to a successful conclusion. There has now been subscribed something near $13,000 to build the roads. The information we have is that but little more will be required to complete the whole road.

The gentlemen who have the enterprise in hand are among the first men in the county, and fully up with the spirit of the times. Consequently they know and feel the importance of having a good and reliable thoroughfare to market at all seasons of the year, and the general benefits to their section of the country that must result from the construction of the contemplated road, and are sure the enterprise is in the right hands and that it will prove a success.

This road will run through one of the best sections of the county and a good turnpike road through it is in every sense a necessity. All are convinced; all feel a lively interest in the building of the road. There is no portion of Boone County better able to own a first-class turnpike than these people. It is a wealthy section, and its people are entitled to the luxury of such a road as they propose to build.

The meeting at Wm. Walton's on next Saturday, will, in our opinion, determine the fate of the turnpike. Some indiscreet movement on that day may prove fatal to it. No friend of the road will then throw a straw in the way. If every friend of the road pauses on his supper-arm until he can see how all the lines are going to fit up—until his outlets are clearly solved and all his fields fit up exactly as he would wish, the result will be, no road will be built. These people have gone too far to back out; they must go through now or fall and we know they will feel too grossly chagrined to consent now to abandon the project. The name and prosperity of these people are involved in the success of the project, and we hope that they will see to it and take no step backward.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Plattsburg.

A few days of nice weather, such as we have been having in the last week, has infused new life in the farmers, and they are just thinking about shaking off their drowsy feeling, and plunging right into a hearty, spring-time work.

The bad crossing at Ashby Fork Creek reminds the traveling public that we ought to have a road fund, and, moreover, that if we have one, let it be great or small, it ought to be applied at the earliest opportunity. Will Mr. Overseer rise up and tell us if we intend to go for Swigler Creek road?

During the late rise in the river, the back water has covered all the low grounds on the creek, causing considerable damage to the willow crop by settling drift and ice on the willows.

The Rev. Bristow preached at the Ashby School-house, last Saturday morning, from the text, "This year thou shalt die." The old father handled the subject in an entertaining manner to those who were fortunate enough to get to hear comfortably.

The party season still lingers with us. On last Wednesday night a bevy of lads and lassies assembled at Mr. Wint Jarrel's. Hensley and Mallory's string band were on hand and treated the occasion with music after their kind.

Mr. Perry Belden, who has been suffering from a felon on his finger, has about recovered, and expects to make his home the present year at the old homestead.

DON JUAN PRIM.

Petersburg.

The river has gone down with a jump, subsided to a quiet stream of gentle flowing water, and looks as if it could never have been the guilty destroyer of so much property two weeks since. The boats have resumed regular trips and a general appearance of business is the result. Coal, unlike the river, has gone up with another jump, and the winter is now nearly gone, the disappointment at the sudden rise in the price of this comforting stuff will not be great.

Mrs. Hannah Loder, wife of George R. Loder, died last Friday morning, after a very painful and somewhat protracted period of suffering. Her funeral was preached by Rev. B. F. Bristow, last Saturday, in the M. E. Church here, of which she had been a most worthy and excellent member for many years. Also on the same day, in Rising Sun, Ind., Mr. Howard Sebree died, having been sick but a short time. Mr. Sebree has been a citizen of this place a long time, and moved to Rising Sun about two years since to place his children in the public school of that town. He was buried at Warsaw, Kentucky, last Sunday, by the Odd Fellows of which order he was an old member. The remains of both the members and friends of the Misses Loder and family down to Warsaw, returning the same evening.

The Petersburg Grangers had another excitement last Saturday, but this time it was strictly private and confidential, and what the move was, is a matter of conjecture. Old rumors like this oft'eye on their movements though, and it is altogether likely that we will soon be enlightened. Perhaps it is but fair to say once for all, that old P is closely identified with the highly respected constable of this Magisterial district.

Some of our ambitious citizens are anxious to see the Assessor now. Being left out of that $19,000 list published in the RECORDER last week, they are eager to toe mark for the next report. That was a bright idea, and worthy of the mind of Rothschild by way of an illustration of financial ability. Said Mr. Fowler along before the fever cools down.

Uncle Jack's familiar face and beaming countenance was visible in our town last Saturday and Sunday. May he always live long and prosper.

Mr. James Snyder and Miss Sarah Wingate were married at the residence of the bride's father last Monday. Rev. B. F. Bristow officiated.

Mr. M. S. Davis to the front. It's a boy. Sam J. as usual.

Florence.

A few days since an agent for a magazine canvassed this neighborhood soliciting subscribers. As an inducement, he offered a beautiful chromo and frame, worth about $2 50, to everyone who subscribed for the magazine, the subscription price of which was one dollar. Several persons subscribed, some of them paying the money at the time. The picture was to be delivered by the 14th of last month, but thus far we have heard of no one who has received it. To say the least of the matter, it has the complexion of a swindle.

The election for Police Judge, which, a few weeks since, resulted in a tie between Esquire Ashley and L. C. Yager, was decided by holding another election for that office last Thursday. Yager was elected by four majority. This election created more excitement and strife than any election held here for many years. Both candidates engaged in an active canvass of the town, and canvassed it about twice each day for two weeks previous to the election. No effort was spared in endeavoring to poll the full vote of the town, and give each candidate his entire strength. There has been no excursion up Salt River yet.

The sale at the Widow Bristow's on last Thursday was largely attended, and everything brought high prices. The sale was on a credit of eight months.

Several of the farmers along the pike above town, who refused to sell their hogs a few weeks since because the price, they thought, would continue the upward heel, still have them on hand and seem apprehensive that they may do worse.

Benj. M. Stansifer returned, Friday afternoon, from a business tour to Cynthiana, Lexington, Georgetown and Williamstown. He reports business terribly depressed at these points, and everybody on the ragged edge of despair.

Ex-Sheriff B. K. Sleet made two several visits to our town the latter part of last week. The first was purely for tax gathering, and he appeared to be scraping the taxes at a lively rate. The last visit was business combined with pleasure, and pleasure seemed to predominate.

The ball given by the Morning Star Dancing Club on last Friday evening was a grand success. Feminine beauty and masculine gallantry were well represented, and everything passed quietly. There was never a more orderly and quiet gathering here than was that of last Friday evening. The dancing was continued till 2 o'clock that night, when the crowd quietly dispersed.

WE have received the January number of Leisure Hours, a handsome mammoth 16 page (64 columns) family paper, filled with the choicest literature—serial and short stories, sketches, poetry, wit, humor, &c., &c. It is entertaining, amusing and instructive, and is one of the cheapest papers, the amount and quality of matter considered, that we have seen. The price is $1 20 per year, including as premium a genuine fine-line steel engraving, called "The Motherless Bairn," printed on 22x28 plate paper, which the publishers claim is superior in point of merit and attractiveness to any premium ever offered by any other paper in this country, and is alone worth the money asked for both. The publishers, J. L. Patten & Co., 162 William st., New York, authorize us to say that, in order to introduce the paper in this vicinity, they make a special offer to every one of our readers to send them the paper—a "trial trip" of four months, post-paid, commencing with the January number—for 25 cents. Our readers who avail themselves of this offer will, we feel certain, thank us for having called their attention to it. The publishers of Leisure Hours would like to employ someone in every place to canvass for this paper.

HOME IS WHERE LOVE RULES.

Sunshine and shadow are ever together,
Thronging each day that is ours as it flies;
Good or ill fortune, foul and fair weather,
Comforts and crosses, and gives and denies;
Some paths will be street,
Some thorns pierce the feet
While over all shadow and sunshine still meet.

Evil and good are the lot of poor mortals,
Both are as free as the morn's early dews,
Which take we will us o'er the home portals,
Roses or rue? Ours to take or refuse.
Oh, bridegroom and bride,
That first walk side by side,
With hands joined together, let your lives ne'er divide.

Better the dinner of herbs, with caresses,
Than the stalled ox, with contention and strife;
Narrow the room, but the love, broad, that blesses;
Narrow the room, yet joy may be rife.
Search life's richest vine
For the rubiest wine;
Only in sunlight sweetest juices combine.

Frosts of November earliest chill blooms outlying
Gardens of sheltering warmth and fond care;
Time's frost with home's sunshine is constantly vieing.
Chilling first those remote from Love's cheering air.
Oh, speed the glad day,
When Love's regal sway
All homes shall illume, while all hearts obey.

Meeting of the Covington Pioneers.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

The Pioneers' Association met yesterday afternoon, in the basement of the Scott Street Methodist Episcopal Church—H. H. Martin, President, and N. B. Stephens, Secretary, and about thirty members present. Messrs. McFarland and Green, the President and Vice President of the Cincinnati Pioneers, were present, and were introduced to, and welcomed by, the members. President Martin made a few remarks, alluding in most feeling terms to the deaths of the late Thomas P. Herbert and John G. Hardin.

On motion it was determined to attend the funeral of Mr. Hardin, which takes place this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Messrs. N. B. Stephens, Thomas H. Kennedy and Rev. Mr. Challen were appointed a committee to prepare a suitable obituary notice of the deceased.

Mr. W. M. Leathers made a few remarks and presented the Society with some specimens of money issued long ago. They were printed on faded yellow paper—one of them, in size about three by two and a quarter inches, read thus:

"Fifty cents—secured by mortgage on real estate—the Real Estate Bank, of Covington, Kentucky, promises to pay to John S. Gano, or bearer, on demand, fifty cents—Covington, January 19, 1819—B. W. Leathers, Cashier."

Another read as follows:

"The Office of Exchange and Deposit in Covington, opposite Cincinnati, promises to pay to J. Leathers, or bearer, on demand, Five Dollars, in current notes of Ohio. January 19th, 1819. Platt Kennedy, Cashier; B. W. Leathers, President."

Messrs. W. H. Pye, W. M. Leathers, W. E. Robinson, L. D. Croninger, V. Shinkle, Willis Daniel, Davis Kennedy and Joseph Batchelor; also, W. B. Enamel, of Lexington, Kentucky; J. G. Coleman, of Falmouth; Frank Smith, of Burlington, Boone County; Robert Stephens, of Independence, Kenton County; and J. P. L. Woodward, of Richmond, Virginia, were elected members of the Association.

Interesting addresses concerning the early history of Covington and Kentucky were delivered by W. M. Leathers, Esq., John Wolf, Esq., and the President of the Association.

The Secretary read the following interesting communication from Hon. Thomas N. Lindsey, of Frankfort, Kentucky, dated January 6, 1877:

FRANKFORT, January 6, 1877.

N. B. Stephens, Esq.:

DEAR SIR—One by one old friends are dying. By this day's Enquirer I see notices of the deaths of Mrs. Mary Winston and H. H. Mayo. The former was the daughter of Major Thomas Martin, a Revolutionary officer, who had command of the Newport Barracks when I can first remember, a man of very many eccentricities, and withal a noble, generous-hearted man. He was very fond of children, and by his kindly ways got into a strong place in my memory—so strong, if I could paint, I firmly believe I could put his real likeness on canvass.

Mrs. Winston I well remember as a bright, attractive young woman, full of light and life wherever she was. She had several sisters, and all accomplished women. How many, if any, survive her I am unable to say, besides Mrs. John Joyce, of Louisville, the youngest.

She had but one brother, who died in Louisville when quite a young man.

Major Samuel Winston, the husband of Mrs. Winston, died in Newport many years before she died. He was a prominent citizen of Campbell County, born, I think, in Virginia, but he was raised on a farm some ten miles back of Covington, where his father lived many years, and died some years before his son.

H. H. Mayo and I were boys together. Our parents lived on Front Street, in Newport, a few squares above the Garrison, and grew up as playmates and friends to manhood. He married a half sister of Major Winston's, who yet is living, I believe. Often in my hours of rest and loneliness do I recall the old familiar faces I knew in Newport and Covington when I was growing up at the first named place. I am now, with the exception of M. M. Benton, the oldest living member of the bar of Campbell County. When I was admitted to practice, Kenton was part of Campbell. There were Richard Southgate and his son William, Alfred Sandford, William Root, Jefferson Phelps, John W. Tibbatts, Richard Wheatley, M. M. Benton, H. F. Harris, all living in Campbell. I ought to have mentioned also Ira Root.

Shortly before I was admitted, John McKinney, afterward a Judge of the Supreme Court of Indiana, and Thos. Easton, who removed to Clark County, resided at Newport. Afterwards came Mr. Price, whose first name I have forgotten, but who became subsequently an eminent Baptist preacher.

Benton and I are all who now live of that large number.

Judge John Trimble, the father of Hon. Wm. Trimble, of your city, was Circuit Judge at my first remembrance of the Court-house. He became one of the Judges of the new Court of Appeals, and was succeeded by H. O. Brown as Circuit Judge, and by him I was admitted to the bar, with his and Judge Rogers' license. The first criminal case I was employed in was the case of the Commonwealth vs. Wilson for the killing of old man Boaz, a German, on Anderson's Hill, just back of your city. Mr. Phelps and Mr. W. W. Southgate were my associates in the defense.

I expect very few remain who remember the excitement caused by Wilson's acquittal. Judge, jury and lawyers for defense were all hung in effigy at Reece's Cross-Roads, back of Newport.

Judge, jurors and all the counsel but myself, have long since gone to their long rest. Mr. T. Wall was the Commonwealth's Attorney, who presented the case—a lawyer of great ability, of most genial and pleasant ways, and one of the kindest of men to the younger members of the profession. I ought not to omit the names of the Clerk and his deputies—John M. Taliaferro and his deputy, James T. Helm, the father of Hubbard Helm, late Sheriff of Campbell County—both excellent officers and clever gentlemen. I intended, when I began, to write more particularly of Mrs. Winston and H. H. Mayo. The former, through her early married life, was very fond of young company, and her house was always open to them. She was a dispenser of hospitality not to be excelled by, anyone, and I go back in memory to many nice parties I attended at her house. How much would I like to live over those delightful days! Mayo was a most exemplary boy and man; he fell in love with his wife, and she with him, before they had passed out of their teens. His father and mother were of the Puritan stock, and their habits in a great degree. Mrs. Mayo, Hunt's mother, was a descendant of the Israel Putnam stock, and was proud of her lineage.

The old gentleman was an industrious man, and fund of his orchard and meadow. His meadow is now covered with well built houses, as is the ground where the orchard stood. The old man believed in young men learning trades and fixed occupations before they married, and he put Hunt to the tanner's trade, and required him to learn that business as a preliminary to his marriage. I remember the tanyard, which was a short distance from Columbia Street, on a lot fronting the south side of Taylor Street, Newport. I believe the brick residence built for him still stands there. He had an older brother, Dudley Mayo (who married a daughter of a Mr. Dougherty, an old and respectable citizen,) and three sisters. The oldest married James Taliaferro; a second sister married John T. McKinney, spoken of above, and the youngest who married a Major Lewis, of the United States army, and this sister, Mrs. Lewis, was the mother of Mrs. H. K. Lindsey, now of your city. The oldest brother and all the sisters died some years ago. Hunt's father was Postmaster of Newport some thirty-five or forty years, a most highly respected citizen and a man of fine education. He graduated at college in the same class with John Quincy Adams. I close as I began, by repeating, one by one old friends are dying.

Yours, THOMAS N. LINDSEY.

Meats Cooked by Cold.

It is a fact of familiar experience that extreme cold produces in organic substances effects closely resembling those of heat. Thus, contact with frozen mercury gives the same sensation as contact with fire, and meat that has been exposed to a very low temperature assumes a condition like that produced by heat. This action of intense cold has been turned to account for economical uses by a Hungarian chemist. He subjects flesh meats to a temperature of minus 33° Fahr., and having thus "cooked them by cold," seals them hermetically in tin cans. The results are represented as being entirely satisfactory. The meat, when taken out of the cans a long time afterward, is found to be, as regards its appearance and odor, in all respects as inviting as at first. It is partly cooked, and needs but little treatment more to prepare it for the table. A German government commission has made experiments with this process, and two naval vessels dispatched on a voyage of circumnavigation were provisioned with this kind of meat. An establishment has been set up in Hungary for preserving meats in this way.

Jackson's Views in 1840.

HERMITAGE, June 28, 1840.

To the Editor of the Nashville Union:

SIR—From the many letters which have been recently addressed to me asking for an expression of my views relative to the leading measures of the present administration of the General Government, some of which are from well known and respectable sources, representing that efforts are made in various quarters of the Union to incite a belief in the public mind that my confidence in the present Chief Magistrate has been impaired, it seems to be proper that some steps should be taken by me to undeceive those who are thus imposed upon. For this purpose, sir, I beg the favor of you to give a place in your columns to this note, which I trust will be as acceptable to those who have written to me on this subject as a direct answer in the form of a letter would be.

From whatever cause, or on whatever authority, statements may be made respecting me as having changed my views of the leading measures of the present administration, they are unfounded and unjust. Of the wisdom and importance of these measures, and particularly of that which aims at the establishment by Congress of a fiscal agency for the Government, the use or aid of banks, time and the fullest opportunity for reflection have left not a doubt on my mind. And the ability which Mr. Van Buren has manifested in developing the bearing of this great question, and of its antagonist one, on the free institutions of our country, and the firmness he has displayed in holding on to the true interests of the people when there has been so much temptation to compromise them, entitle him in my judgment to a rank not inferior to that of Mr. Jefferson or Mr. Madison as a patriot and statesman:

With such opinions of the present Chief Magistrate and of the measures to which he has given his sanction—opinions which I have never failed to express when I have had occasion to speak on the subject—it is surprising how anyone could take up the idea that my confidence in him had been impaired, or that I had become indifferent as to the choice to be made at the next election between him and General Harrison. Looking upon the latter gentleman as the representative of Federal principles in the present contest, and knowing that he has never been indentified with the Republican party in any of its great struggles against the influences which have been calculated to take power from the people and the States and give it to the General Government, to suppose that I would for a moment think of giving my support to such an individual as a candidate for the Presidency would be a mockery of all public principle.

In respect to the statements which have been made in several of the newspapers of the day that I disagree with many of my political friends in the estimate they have formed of Gen. Harrison's military merits, I am not aware that I have said anything to justify them. Having never admired Gen. Harrison as a military man, or considered him as possessing the qualities which constitute the commander of an army, I have looked at his political relations alone in the opinions I have formed or expressed respecting his pretentions to the Presidency, and the consequences which would result to the country, should the suffrage of the people place him in that high office. I am, very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,
ANDREW JACKSON.

American Outrages.

We regret to chronicle the outrages and cowardly assaults made upon the unoffending Chinamen daily in our public streets, the publication of which places our municipal government in no enviable light, either at home or abroad. We ask, in the name of justice, why it is that these people are beaten and maltreated at high noon on our streets, and "no arrests" invariably recorded? On New Year's day these people were assaulted and beaten in different localities, on crowded streets, in this Christian city, and we have not heard of an arrest. We give a sample: A China boy, not over fourteen years of age, was attacked by a gang of street Arabs and pelted with broken brick, one striking him in the mouth and cutting him terribly. He was knocked down and beaten in a most cruel manner. To add to the outrage, a crowd of men gathered and urged on the hoodlums. A well known citizen passing in a carriage stopped and went to the assistance of the Chinaman, but was ordered to stand back and not interfere. "No arrests." On Third street a Chinaman was set upon by drunken hoodlums and knocked down and beaten, but got away from them and took refuge in a saloon, but was ejected by the proprietor. A large crowd collected, and when the Chinaman came out he concluded to show fight, and went for one of his assailants armed with a door-rug, which he laid over the scoundrel's shoulders till he beat a retreat. "No arrests." On Kearny street one of the large plate-glass windows of Ching Lee's store was demolished by a rock weighing ten pounds, which went crashing through the beautiful chinaware exhibited in the window. "No arrests." Another Chinaman was knocked down and beaten on Pacific street at 12 o'clock noon. "No arrests."—San Francisco Atlas.

Make Your Own Sunshine.

Discouragement too often overtakes those whose lives pass in the petty details of common existence. The mother, whose narrow round of duty confines her to the range of two or three rooms; the primary teacher, whose life is passed in the monotony of the school; the mechanic, whose days are filled with activity that never varies—these typical individuals find it hard to keep buoyant, hopeful, fresh and resolute. But this is just what they must do or dwindle into ciphers. Of all things, when the mood of discouragement overtakes one, he should think of anything else than his own troubles, and, more than this, should take measures at once to follow new currents of thought and feeling. Sometimes it is purely the result of bodily conditions, and requires for its cure sleep, or exercise in the open air, or change of diet, or a simple waiting till it passes away of itself. When it springs from causes not connected with the body, then the cure must be spiritual or intellectual. An intensely interesting book, visitations among the poor, constant intercourse with fresh minds, change of scene, travel, the study of science new to the patient—anything that will absorb the brain and keep it from consuming itself is good medicine. The world is full of beauty and sunshine. "It is right, meet and our bounden duty" that we should open our heart to all the soothing, healing, invigorating influences of the sky that bends over us in unchanging love, the balmy air, the ten thousand voices with which nature speaks to him whose ears are opened to receive her gentle teachings.

A Woman Tarred and Feathered.

A brutal outrage was perpetrated at Sourland Mountain, near Bonnet Brook, N. J., last Wednesday evening. The names of all the parties are withheld by the authorities in hopes that the persons implicated may be arrested, but the particulars of the affair are as follows: In a small dwelling located about half way up the mountain reside a man and his wife. The woman does not bear a very good reputation, and is charged with having been too intimate with the husbands of other women. One of the indignant wives, whose husband had been led astray, resolved upon revenge. She employed six young men, whom she first made drunk, and then gave them $2 each to execute her plan. The young men repaired to the house of their intended victim, and at midnight broke in the door. The woman and her husband were in bed, but on hearing the noise jumped up, and in their night-clothes made their way to the rear yard, whence the husband made his escape over the fence. The wife remained, however, and was found by the young ruffians almost frozen in the snow, and they at once proceeded to tar and feather her, after which they left her more dead than alive. The next day they made the affair public themselves while on a drunken frolic, and as soon as the necessary affidavits can be made by the woman they will probably be taken into custody.—N. Y. Times.

Were they Murdered and Cremated?

The farm of Jos. W. Baugher, located a mile and a half north of Adams' Mill, in Democrat Township, was, last Tuesday night, the scene of the most revolting casualty that has ever occurred in our county. Two brothers, Eli J. and Louis A. Gibbs, were keeping bachelors' hall in a little cabin, and chopping wood on the farm of Mr. Baugher, and retired, as is supposed, Tuesday night in perfect health. When morning dawned all that remained of the cabin was a pile of smoking embers, and all that remained on earth of the two brothers were their charred and blackened skeletons lying side by side in death as they lay sleeping in life. It is impossible to conceive how two men could lay in their bed, the house get on fire and burn up without either of them becoming aroused. The skeletons of the men lay side by side in the exact place where the bed stood, and there can be no satisfactory explanation of their terrible fate, except that they were murdered and then the house set on fire to hide the terrible crime.—Delphi (Ind.) Journal.

Good Winter Wife.

A negro man has just applied to a Milton magistrate to know how to get his wife back. Milton is only separated from the Virginia line by a small creek, and it seems the woman's brother had run her off from her husband and taken her across the creek. "How can I git her, boss, un what's de law in Virginny?" asked the negro. "The cheapest way," said the magistrate, "is to have no law about it; just go across the creek and overpower her and bring her home." "I'll sho do it, boss," said the negro; "a hard winter settin' in, no wood and no nuffin; but dat gal weighs 200, and gib's out heat like a stove, d'only time a wife's a comfort." He waded the creek with a steer whip in one hand and a long rope in the other.

WHEN you are easily prevailed upon to let your duty as a Christian yield to your worldly interest or the opinions of your neighbors; when you associate with men of the world without solicitude about doing good or having your own spiritual life injured, it is about time for you to commence feeling alarmed, for such a spiritual condition means spiritual decline.

FOOTSTEPS ON THE OTHER SIDE.

Sitting in my humble doorway,
Gazing out into the night,
Listening to the stormy tumult
With a kind of calm delight,
Wait I for the loved who comes not,
One whose steps I long to hear—
One who, though he lingers from me,
Still is dearest of the dear.
Soft, he comes; now heart be quiet,
Leaping in triumphant pride;
Oh! it is a stranger footstep,
Gone by on the other side.

All the night seems filled with weeping,
Winds are wailing mournfully;
And the rain tears altogether
Journey to the restless sea.
I can fancy, sea, you murmur,
As they with your waters flow,
Like the grief of single beings,
Making up a nation's woe.

Branches, bid your guests be silent!
Hush a moment, fretful rain!
Breeze, stop sighing, let me listen—
God grant not again in vain!
In my cheek the blood is rosy,
Like the blushes of a bride;
Joy—alas! a stranger footstep,
Goes by on the other side.

Ah! how many wait forever
For the steps that do not come!
Wait until the pitying angels
Bear them to a peaceful home.
Many, in the still of midnight,
In the streets have lain and died,
While the sound of human footsteps
Went by on the other side.

THE EARLY DAYS OF KENTUCKY.

Some Reminiscences from the Life of Col. Cave Johnson.

[CONCLUDED.]

Again, during my residence at the station in 1781, we were in want of salt, and a company of us, about ten or twelve, got on our horses, with our rifles on our shoulders, and started for Bullet's Lick, near the Falls of the Ohio, where salt was then made. We passed through Lexington and along a small trace to the Kentucky River at Leestown, as it was then called, situate about half a mile below Frankfort. The weather was warm, and we rode down the bank into the water; and, while our horses were drinking, all near the bank of the river, a party of Indians that followed us came on the bank, fired on us and killed one horse, that fell dead in the river. His rider pushed on across the river, and the Indians crossed after him and took him prisoner. They wounded five men of our company, all of whom recovered. We gave up our trip and returned to the station.

And again, while a man by the name of Daniel Wilcoxen was plowing his corn, in full view of the station, about 150 or 200 yards distant, and a man with his son watching as sentry for Indians, a small party of them crept up near enough and shot him and killed him, and one of them, with tomahawk in hand, ran Wilcoxen toward the fort, and was very near getting him, when Wilcoxen jumped a fence, which saved him.

And again. A youthaby the name of Hickey Lea was out of the fort on a horse, one morning, into the edge of the woods, distant some 200 or 300 yards, for the purpose of grazing the horse, and while he was sitting on the horse some Indians got near enough and shot the horse, which ran a short distance and fell. The Indians then killed the youth and scalped him.

In 1782 my brother, Robert Johnson was elected a member of the General Assembly of Virginia, and went to Richmond. I was then also in Virginia. We did not return to Kentucky until after the defeat at the Blue Licks, therefore can say nothing of my own knowledge as to that and the siege of Simon Girty and the Indians at Bryant's Station.

About the same time, or shortly after, General Clark carried an expedition against the Indians in the Miami country. My brother Robert commanded a company from Bryant's Station. Jeremiah Craig and myself were his subalterns. Every man fit for the campaign, except enough to take care of the fort, was called out. Colonel Benjamin Logan was second in command. One wing of the army marched from the Falls, the other from Lexington and Bryant's. They met in general rendezvous on the ground now occupied by Cincinnati, where General Clark took the command. We marched through Old Chillicothe, on the Little Miami, on to the Indian town of Piqua, on the Big Miami. We had one piece of cannon. The Indians fled and gave us no trouble. They did come one dark night and fire on us, which caused us to extinguish our fires, but they kept at such a distance as to hurt none of us. Some scouting parties from our camps went out and killed a few Indians and took some prisoners, and destroyed their corn fields and villages. We then returned, nearly in the same track we had gone out.

Very shortly after our return home, Colonel Thomas Marshall, Surveyor of Fayette, who had been waiting for the return of our army, opened his office in Lexington for the entering and surveying of lands. A mighty movement then commenced among the people, both for entering and surveying. I got the appointment of Deputy Surveyor and commenced surveying, and was employed considerably in that business for several years. The next year (1783) the people of the stations began to move and settle out on the lands. My brother Robert settled the Big or Great Crossing on North Elkhorn. Captain John Craig settled on Clear Creek, where Payton Short afterward lived.

Early in 1784 I got married and settled on Green Creek, near where Versailles now stands. I was then appointed and commissioned a militia Captain, and notwithstanding peace was then firmly established between England and the United States, yet the Indians continued troublesome.

In the year 1786, the government authorized General Clark to carry out another expedition against them, which he undertook, and raised a considerable force. Colonel Levi Todd was selected to command the Fayette troops, and Benjamin Logan from the south side of Kentucky; Colonel William Steele, Captain Robert Sanders and myself were selected as Captains, with others, whose names I do not recollect. In Colonel Todd's regiment we rendezvoused at the Falls, where General Clark took command. He sent his field piece by water down the Ohio and up the Wabash. The army marched through by land, and on the way, before reaching Vincennes, the officers held a council of war, and sent Colonel Logan back for the purpose of raising another army and marching into the Indian country on the Miami, presuming that the Indians were generally collected on the Wabash in order to meet our expedition. We marched on to Vincennes, where we remained a number of days waiting for our cannon, which was detained by low water until we had eaten up the greater part of our provisions. When our cannon arrived, we marched on up the river about two days, when the regiment that Logan left mutinied and refused to go further, alleging they had not a sufficient stock of provisions, &c. I suppose losing their Colonel had its influence. General Clark was much mortified. We returned home. Colonel Logan, with the command he had raised, went on into the Miami country and succeeded against the Indians in that quarter, fully up to expectations.

In 1789 Woodford County was formed, taken from Fayette; and when the courts were organized, I got the appointment of Clerk to the County and Quarter Sessions; and when Kentucky was made a State, and the courts were reorganized, I again got the appointment of Clerk to said courts, which I held until 1796, when I moved to North Bend, in what is now Boone County. In 1798 an act passed to establish the said county of Boone, and when the courts were organized I was appointed Clerk of the County Court. Not long after I was commissioned a Colonel of militia, which I held until 1811, about which time I was appointed and commissioned a Justice of the Peace, which office I held until commissioned Sheriff of said county in 1833. In 1817 I was elected a member of the Kentucky Legislature. I have held various other offices and appointments, and filled many stations; have all my life been a farmer, and attached to the cultivation of the soil; have served my day and generation; am now near four-score and ten, and feel that I must shortly be gathered to my fathers.

Prophetic Visions.

Some time ago, I think it was in the month of October, Mr. John White an employe of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, while performing his duty at this point, was killed by falling between the cars. I have but lately come in possession of some interesting facts in connection with his death, and as they may be of interest to your readers, having escaped publication, I herewith present it to your columns: The day before his death, while in conversation with Mr. George Bailey, of this place, Mr. White told that gentleman that twice had he seen the headless trunk of a man approach him, and, when within a few feet, suddenly pause and sink through the earth, apparently at his very feet. The first time he beheld this horrible apparition he retraced his steps down town, nor would he return, so filled with dread had he become. He confided this terrible story to others, and was told that it was but imagination; this, however, he stoutly denied. The night previous to his death he was approached by someone whom he took to be the night watchman, and was told that he was needed in the yard. Owing to some cause he did not go, and the next morning, on inquiring of the watchman what was wanted with him, he was surprised to learn that no one had been after him at all. The poor man felt that his fate was sealed, and grew despondent and cheerless. That afternoon at 4 o'clock, his death occurred, and on going to him his head was found to be entirely separated from his body. This is no sensational story, but is strictly bona fida in every particular.—Wheeling Intelligencer.

"My business is to talk," said a stump speaker; "I deal in words and sentences." "Yes," said a voice in the crowd, "and as long as I've known you, your place of business has never been closed."

How a Great Editor Shot a Bear.

Before a restaurant in Park Row there hangs a huge black bear, ornamented with this inscription:

"This bear was shot by Mr. E. A. Buck, editor and proprietor of Wilkes' Spirit of the Times."

"Yes," said Mr. Buck, to a World reporter yesterday, "I made a good shot that time. That's a big bear, and there was a wild look in his eyes when I shot him. He was in the Adirondacks, and the night before Christmas. That was a big bear.

"Yes," said the reporter, "a very big bear."

"Yes," said Mr. Buck, "that's a big bear, and I made a good shot that time."

"Yes. But would you give me the story?"

"Certainly. I was in a lonely spot in the forest, and I saw a man coming, with that bear after him. I quickly climbed up an apple and picked a tree off the branch and began to eat it. A moment after the bear came by, and the man catching sight of me stopped at the foot of the tree and growled. I quickly took my pocket out of my my cartridge and putting my pistol in it made ready to fire, when the bear, looking imploringly at me, said:"

"The bear 'said?' Who ever heard of a bear talking?"

"Do you think I would tell a falsehood?" asked Mr. Buck.

"Never," said the reporter. "Go on."

"The bear, looking imploringly at me, said"——

"Yes."

"The bear, looking imploringly at me, said"——

"I understand," said the reporter.

"Now here," said Mr. Buck; "do you think I'm falsifying?"

"Undoubt—I beg your pardon—by no means," said the reporter.

"Then that's where you make your mistake," said Mr. Buck; "I am. When I saw that bear after the man, the man was drawing him on a sled. So I took out my pocket-book and shot him that way. Simplest thing in the world, you see."

And Mr. Buck pleasantly bowed the reporter out.

A Revolutionary Boy.

"My son, my son," mildly exclaimed a reproving West Hill mother yesterday morning, "untie that cat from the gate latch, take in that rope you've stretched across the sidewalk, let your little sister out of the woodshed, unfasten the cellar door and let the hired girl come up and go to her work, take the sign of 'Boarders wanted' off Mr. Jasper's front door, let Mr. Jasper's dog out of that barrel, throw that paper of gunpowder in your pocket out in the street, and then come here and tell me where you were on Friday and Saturday, that you weren't at school." The boy said he wasn't prepared to answer just then, but he would insist on throwing out the report of the teacher on the ground that he (the boy) had been unduly intimidated from attending school, by the terror of long, hard lessons, and further by bull dozing in the parishes, as he could establish by reliable witnesses. Pending the decision of the board, he filed a number of protests, but his mother pronounced his attitude revolutionary, and sent to his father's office for troops, which arrived about tea time, and the local government was at once supported and ordered enforced, and as the boy went up to bed without any supper, and in the custody of troops, the throes of a free people, struggling in the iron grasp of a domestic despotism, could be heard away down on the next street, where the other boys were lifting gates off their hinges and carrying them down to the creek.

A FEW days since a Kenton County juror unfortunately got on a jury where there were eleven contrary men, and in his attempt to show the eleven wherein they were wrong, one of them became indignant and quite a lively scene was then enacted in that jury-room. It is evident that that jury did not agree unless the one bulldozed the eleven.

THE merry jingle of the sleigh-bells, the sparkle of the crystal snow in the lambent light of the moon, and the confiding creature that nestles close beside him beneath the buffalo robes, tenderly clasping his left hand in hers while his right holds the reins, constitutes the winter night's poem that is floating through the doting lover's soul, and leaves him in doubt whether to let go long enough to get his handkerchief out, or draw his coat sleeve across his nose.

A WRITER has begun the task of attempting to convince the people of the North that the people of the South are by no means the fire-eaters and the madmen which they figure in Northern papers. It will require but a small effort to carry conviction to the average intellect, but we pity the Southerner who attempts to fire such truths into the head of the head of the Inter-Ocean. WE have before us a copy of the Kentucky Live Stock Record which gives quite an elaborate history of the Almont stock of horses showing them to be among the fleetest of the equine race. The Almont horses won money in over two-thirds of the races in which they started in 1876. Mr. J. C. THE Grand Commission for settling the Presidential squabble, commenced business last Thursday. Everything went on smoothly till Florida was called. The Commission then took the matter into its hands and is still wrestling with the Florida triplets.

WADE HAMPTON pardoned a prisoner in one of the jails in South Carolina, and the Sheriff of the county refused to release the prisoner on the ground that Wade Hampton is not Governor of South Carolina. Judge J. T. Mackey issued a writ of habeas corpus on application of the prisoner, and when the case was submitted to the Judge he decided that Wade Hampton is the legal Governor of that State. The Sheriff's attorney appealed the case to the Supreme Court.

It appears that there are some who think the Jailer is in some degree to blame for the manner in which the jail was lately slaughtered by the prisoners that escaped. We consider it no more than due that officer to put before the people of the county the course that he pursued with prisoners while in his custody, and show that the escape could have been accomplished just as easily had he performed the duties in which some may think he has been derelict. Some ask why the prisoners were not kept in their cells at night? Had that been done, they would have been no more secure than when allowed the privilege of the entire room. It would have required but little more cutting of iron, and moving the same amount of masonry to have liberated them. Confining a prisoner in one of the cells only reduces the territory in which he can move about. There is no more between him and the outer world when in the cell than when not. Two sides of two of the cells are nothing but the wall proper of the Jail. The cells add but little to the safe confinement of a prisoner. Others ask why were the window sash taken out of the windows thereby giving any one a chance to provide the prisoners with tools with which to work? These windows were taken out that the prison might be sufficiently ventilated to sustain human life; and had that not been done, a confederate could have easily moved them from the outside, and, having given them tools, replaced the windows, and no one would have discovered that any thing was wrong. Mr. Cowen was watching the jail. but happened not to discover the place where the work was being done; and, taking everything into consideration, there cannot be any blame laid at his door.

THE following is the substance of the law under which the Assessor is now required to list and return all the dogs in the county for taxation:

"The law provides that an annual tax of one dollar per head on dogs, and three dollars per head on bitches, be levied on all the dogs in the counties named by the act, Boone being one of the counties named. The tax thus levied to be paid by the owners or keepers of such dogs.

"It is the duty of every housekeeper of the Commonwealth to furnish the Assessor with a statement of the number and sex of the dogs owned by him or her, or by any member of his or her family; and also all the dogs kept on his or her premises by any person in his or her employ. Persons failing to comply with this provision are subject to all the pains and penalties prescribed by law for like failures to list other property.

"The Sheriff has the same remedies for coercion of the payment of the tax on dogs as he has for the payment of tax on any other property, and if any person or persons fail or refuse to pay the taxes upon dogs so listed, or if such taxes can not be collected, it is made the duty of the Sheriff to report the names of such delinquents to the Judge of the County Court, who shall issue a warrant, or warrants, against such delinquents for the amount of the taxes so due; and if, upon the trial of the warrant, it is found that such person or persons are justly indebted for the amount of taxes claimed, or any part thereof, the Judge will enter judgment therefor.

"In case any person charged with a dog tax shall refuse to pay it, the Sheriff is required to levy upon the dog or dogs taxed, and sell them for the taxes. At the sale if no person bids the amount of the taxes, the Sheriff is required to bid that amount for the county, and then proceed to kill the dog so bid in. For this service the Sheriff is allowed fifty cents for each dog killed.

"All dogs upon which the tax is paid are to be considered property and protected by the law as other personalty now is. The money arising from this source of tax is to be applied to the discharge of the county levy, after paying the Sheriff his commission, and the Assessor five cents for each dog listed for taxation."

There are many persons who declare that they will kill their dogs before they will pay the tax on them. But is it not now too late to resort to this remedy for this year? If you owned dogs on the tenth of January, does it not fasten the tax for this year? The property owned by a person on the tenth of January is that which is taxed. Disposing of a farm after the tenth of January does not release the grantor from the tax for the year in which the land was sold, and it appears that the same law should govern in listing the canines as well. This act of legislation will inevitably legislate many a cur out of existence.

THE following report of sales of tobacco is made up from the report of the Western Tobacco Journal of last week:

CYNTHIANA NEWS: On Tuesday of last week a heavy rumbling sound, as that of heavy continuous cannonading or musketry, was heard in all parts of this county, as well as through the northeastern portion of the State. A great many conclusions as to the cause of it have been drawn by as many different persons. Immediately after the fearful sound ceased, there was a whizzing, as of missiles hurled with terrific force through the air, and a huge meteoric stone or aerolite fell near the residence of Americus Craigmyle, Esq., in the northern portion of this county, near Robinson's station, burying itself in the hard frozen ground to the depth of about two feet or more, and measuring obliquely as it fell, from four to six feet. This aerolite which is a stone or other hard substance coming to the earth from distant space was dug out of the ground by James Craigmyle, and weighed about fourteen or fifteen pounds.

Grange Lecture.

SISTERS AND BRETHREN: The march of time has finished another year, and has left its indelible impression on the farrowed brow and the whitening locks.

Time flies! Another year has gone to be numbered with those of the past. We stand, to-day, upon the narrow line that divides the past from the future; about one step forward, as it were, into that future time which is all unseen to the human eye.

It then behooves us, brethren, to carefully scrutinize the track behind us, that we may gain thereby some clue to the path before us. To preserve the vantage ground we have gained, and insure pursuance and further advancement, we must be able to show to the world that both material and moral gain does and will result from our organization. We must keep our ranks full; our faith strong and abiding; our work pure, and our actions wise. We must endeavor to disenthrall the farmers from all unjust oppression, but we should do this by moral and intellectual advancement of ourselves.

It is our earnest desire to see mankind governed in all things by wisdom, by honesty, and by justice; which can never be the case while ignorance, bribery, and corruption hold wanton carnival in high places. Labor must be disenthralled. The working man of every industry must receive the just recompense of his never ceasing toil; yet it should be our aim to accomplish this glorious end by progressive steps, as the leaven of intelligence spreads through the masses. The encircling grasp of political demagogues and monopolies have, at the present time, too strong a hold on the industries of the country to be broken in a moment. The customs and abuses of years can only be eradicated as the public mind changes. No faster, no slower. Let us not be unmindful of our duty to the needy, commend the just and faithful, and continue with renewed zeal the good in which we have accomplished much. Let us, as a band of brothers and sisters, banded together in a just and holy cause, persevere and hope, gird close our armor, burnish brighter our helmets, and march fearlessly forward to fight the glorious battle in which we are engaged, for the elevation of the human family; yet our weapons must be faithfulness, truth, honesty and justice, and when success shall have crowned our efforts, we will receive the just commendation and approval of the noblest of our country-men regardless of their calling and occupation.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Bellevue.

Last Monday, Constable Green visited your town and while there and at dinner some one gobbled his brand new beaver, leaving in its place a dilapidated hat. Mr. Green don't appreciate the joke.

The young folks of this vicinity congregated at Boone Roger's, last Thursday night and enjoyed a plesant little dance. The female beauties of the neighborhood were out in full force.

Mr. Parker has returned from Philadelphia and has on hand a large supply of soap.

Big Bone Ridge.

Big Bone Grange No. 488 held its regular meeting January 26th. It was opened in due form by our new Master, M. L. Rouse. We are able to inform the Editor of the RECORDER that our Grange meets twice a month.

The boys of this vicinity met at Mr. Jas. Moreland's with their musical instruments, Saturday night the 28th, and after tuning them to perfect harmony, crossed the rugged hills of Gunpowder Creek and stepped at Mr. Owen Conner's. This may be easily accounted for as some of the party knew there would be a charming and promising young lady there. After some hours' entertainment they passed on from one place to another until some of the party were quite worn out.

J. A. L.

Petersburg.

Under the energetic directions of that same grain contractor at the distillery, the farmers of this vicinity are delivering large quantities of corn, and the wagon trains on the roads centering here, have the appearance of lively trade and money going to the suburbs.

Mr. Geo. R. Loder disposed of most of his household property at auction last Saturday, retaining enough to furnish one room. The sale was well attended and good prices were realized. Mr. Loder will board with his son-in-law, Capt. Hyatt, who moved into the house last Monday.

This town is not very full of houses, but the houses are all full of people and one move reacts on about half of the town, so now some prompt action and lively moves will be in order.

The ex-Sheriff was in town last week; came unannounced and quite took our breath away with surprise. The worst feature in the case though, is that he cleaned out all the surplus cash and "pumpkin pize" in town. May we never look upon his like again! He is a "Morton Compromise" man.

A barge of coal was unloaded at the wharf last week and the stir occasioned thereby added to the lively appearance of this busy city.

There is another box of pills at Bellevue and more to come. The profession of "materia medica" is a disease in some families, and has attacked the seventh and twentieth letters of the English alphabet in the form of an epidemic hereabouts.

An investigation of the habits of the ground hog may assist us greatly in casting the horoscope of the weather for the next six weeks. As for instance, if he is an early bird and does not stay out late, the augury is a favorable one, while if he keeps fashionable hours, we may as well repair fuel piles and winter harness, for on last Friday we had a cloudy forenoon and a bright evening. Won't some of the Burlington Literary Society give us some much needed information on this subject and greatly oblige

YOUNG PROBIBILITIES?

Walton.

The community has been somwhat excited by a series of robberies which have been committed lately. On Monday night a horse was stolen from Miss Lizzie Rogers, and the same night a sister-in-law of Mr. J. J. Hoffman, was awakened by a noise in her room, and saw a man pass between her and the window. She immediately called for Mr. Hoffman but could not awaken him. Mr. Dawlings, a boarder, after a short time, came and roused Mr. Hoffman, but by that time the burglar had escaped. Mr. Dawling upon going back to his room found he had been robbed of twenty dollars and his pocket-book put back in its place. The man seems to have climbed in at the window of Mr. Dawling's room, got his money and then into Miss Byland's room where he was discovered. It was fortunate he did not get into Mr. Hoffman's room as Mr. H. had $300 in his pocket. Black Clarkson and Mr. Rogers started next morning after the horse thief but were not able to track him till Friday, when they came upon him in Harrison County. The thief and horse were brought back to Walton and the man tried and sent to jail in Burlington. Roberts is the man we have reference to.

On Friday evening the debating society met at the school-house. Quite a large company assembled. The subject for discussion was, "Ought an amendment be made to the Constitution extending the elective franchise to women." Mr. Stewart took the affirmative and made an eloquent speech. Mr. Bagby on the negative made a tolerable speech, and Rev. Beasley also upon the negative made a few remarks. The jury, composed of William Hoxley, sr., Rev. Coppage and W. Booth, after a short consultation, rendered a unanimous verdict for the affirmative. Thus is "woman's weight" progressing in Walton. The junior debating society composed of large boys of the school, with Mr. Stewart for permanent chairman, meet every week, but as they do not admit spectators, we are unable to give you a report of proceedings; but from the remarkable serious and studious aspect they wear for a few days proceeding their debate, we should not be surprised if Demosthes or Cicero would some day find that he had a formidable rival to share with him the honor of being one of the renowned orators of the world.

The battle ground of Allen and Goss will soon be recognized no more. An Irishman has bought the lot, and is erecting a house near the spot, and will turn the bloody ground into a potato patch; so if our worthy Sheriff wishes again to see the memorable log upon which he despondingly sat, he will have to revisit the place soon.

N. K. Teachers' Association seems to be no more, at least we should judge so, there being no meeting held on last Saturday, the appointed time.

THOSE IN BUSINESS AND WANTING THE BOONE COUNTY PATRONAGE SHOULD ADVERTISE IN THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER. IT HAS A MUCH LARGER CIRCULATION IN THE COUNTY THAN ANY OTHER PAPER. PERSONS WORKING FOR THE BOONE COUNTY TRADE SHOULD REMEMBER THIS FACT.

THERE was a large crowd at Court Monday.

THE price of dog-skin gloves will now surely decline.

THE dog law was cussed and discussed generally Monday.

THERE are some one dollar dogs and some three dollar dogs in the county.

THE Assessor gives it as his opinion that he will list two thousand dogs this year.

WE take notice that homemade sugar has not been abundant about our sanctum yet.

BOOTS and shoes for winter wear below cost at C. Kleymeier's, 20 Pike street, Covington, Ky.

IT is said that there was never known to be as many wrecks along the shores of the Ohio River as there now are.

A FEW days last week were well calculated to swell the fruit buds and put them in condition to be killed, if not already so.

THE law says persons are responsible for all the dogs on thier premises. So, if you kill your dog, be sure and get him off your farm.

THIS series of land trades was closed Monday: T. B. Rouse sold his farm to John G. Gaines, Roswell Randall to T. B. Rouse and W. B. Adams to Roswell Randall.

OUR neighboring town, Florence, has turned out a corps of book agents. They are all quick, active young lads. "The Abduction of Charlie Ross" is their stand-by.

WHEN over in Aurora, give G. W. Stephens, Wm. Leive and H. J. Marshall each a call, and examine their large stock of goods. Their advertisements are in this issue; be sure and read them.

THE stock law and the dog law will be made the issue in the next campaign for Representative. There will be no less than a million questions propounded to every candidate to ascertain his attitude as to these two laws.

THE Rising Sun (Ind.) News says:

"Three thousand three hundred and seventy dogs and pups found by the Assessor in Cass County—and it is not a very good county for dogs either."

That's about the number the Assessor in this county generally finds without owners.

THE contract for the construction of the Burlington and Bellevue turnpike was awarded, last Monday, to William Wake, of Williamstown. The amount of his bid will not be made public till after the agreement between him and the company is signed, which is to be done next Monday.

A FEW of the fun-loving youths, last Friday night, groped their way through mud and darkness to Mr. Alfred Cason's, where they expected to find a number engaged "tripping the light fantastic." Imagine their chagrin when they discovered that their trip was in vain. A good joke and a number one mud haul.

THE ground-hog got a glimpse of his shadow last Friday, and, if tradition is correct as to his manner of proceedure when he sees his shadow the first day he makes his appearance, he took himself back to his subterranean abode, there to remain the next six weeks, and we may look out for more frigid temperature.

J. FRANK GRANT, of Petersburg, has again turned himself loose upon his patrons with a large stock of spring goods and farming implements. He can furnish a person with anything, from a pin to a mowing machine. He is determined to supply the wants of his customers, and keep them posted as to what he has. See his advertisement this week.

LAST Saturday Webb Smith, the druggist at this place, compounded a prescription, composed of sulphuric acid, corrosive sublimate, turpentine and Spanish flies, put it in a quart bottle and corked it up. He then gave the bottle a shake, and an explosion at once followed, scattering the contents of the bottle and fragments of glass over the room, and breaking other bottles that were on shelves some distance from him. A fragment of the ill-fated bottle struck him in the forehead, cutting quite an ugly gash, from which the blood flowed profusely. A quantity of the contents of the bottle also struck him in the face, burning him severely. Drs. Smith and Grant were at the scene of action in a few minutes and dressed the wound and sent Webb home, where he has suffered considerable pain. It has been but about one year since Dr. Blanton, of Union, had a like experience with a prescription, probably the same chemicals. These "explosive prescriptions" are dangerous, and druggists can not be too careful in compounding them. To say the least of it, a dose with the properties of the mixture Smith was handling would be bad to take, and brings to mind the experience of the dog Cuff with the food administered by the Arkansas doctor.

Roberts Recaptured.

Last week we gave an account of the slaughter of the jail, and the exit of the trio of prisoners that had been confined therein for some time. Since that, one of the three, Ben Roberts, the white man charged with stealing a horse, has been recaptured, and is again lodged in jail here, this time in the second story.

On the Tuesday night following his escape Roberts got possession of a horse belonging to a Miss Rogers, near Walton. C. B. Clarkson, Constable of the Union District, and Thos. Rogers started in search of the horse Wednesday morning, and, following the track to within a mile or so of Berry's Station, on the Kentucky Central Railroad, came upon the object of pursuit. It was about 1 o'clock when Clarkson and Rogers arrived where Roberts was lodging, and, upon being shown to his room, they were, for the first time, enlightened as to who they were following. Clarkson says Roberts was engaged to a daughter of the old gentleman with whom they found him, and that in a day or two they were to have been married. Roberts had reported to the family of his betrothed that he had got into trouble in Boone by knifing a man, and that he was leaving on that account. Roberts surrendered without a word, was brought to Walton, tried and remanded to jail, where he arrived last Saturday afternoon, in good health and spirits.

Last Monday evening he addressed the following letter to the people of Burlington. The letter is both humorous and repentant:

BURLINGTON, BOONE Co., KY. February the 5th, 1877.

To the people of Burlington:

I, one Benjamin B. Roberts, has been returned back to my old quarters, but I was given a higher room than I had before. I also was made a present of a nice pair of bracelets, but the style has changed since I had my last ones from my wrists to my ankles. I did not think, when I left, to return so soon, but it looks like the people are all glad to see me once more. I think if Uncle Sammy was to charge them all a quarter apiece what come to see me, he could have got enough money to have the jail fixed better than it ever was before. For when my kind old Jailer fetched me my dinner, it put me in mind when a show first opens—everybody rushed for the door to get a look at the great man that made the window for summer time. I could hear them say: "Why, I think he is about sixteen!" Another said, "He is about twenty-two." One fellow says, "Look at them bright things on his legs!" But the funniest part of all was one old fellow that come to take a look at me. He put me in mind of a man that was shying from some great wild beast. I imagined I heard that man say, "I believe that man eats iron." I looked at him and sort of laughed. Well, gentlemen, I don't think they can get a jury to try me in this county, for I believe every man in the county has heard of the case. At least, I think they have all been here to see me. Gentlemen, there ain't but one thing I hate about it; that is, it is so long till court, for I am worn out laying in jail. Gentlemen, when I was arrested I was took by Black Clarkson and Tom Rogers. They treated me like men ought to; they appeared to sympathize with me. I had Mr. Rogers' mare, but didn't take her with the intention of robbing him of her, but took her to make my escape on, for my feet had blistered so I couldn't walk to do no good; so I think if any of you had of been in my fix, you'd done the same thing. Well, I'll give a piece of advice to young men: Come, all young men, warning take by me—I, young man, scarcely twenty-three years of age. Just to look at my troubles. You must take your parents good advice and shun all bad company. Don't let older heads lead you astray. My father died when I was but ten years old. My poor old mother strove to raise me, and always taught me to do right. Oh! if I had of only taken her advice, how much better off I would been. No one knows my troubles but me and my God. But I hope some day I'll be relieved from prison and make a good citizen of my country.

Well, getting late, I will close by asking Mr. Riddell to please print this for me.

B. B. ROBERTS, Prisoner.

We have corrected the orthography of the letter and punctuated it, but the phraseology remains as in the original.

A young man who has talked to Roberts in regard to the manner of his escape, reports the following to us:

The tool used was a saw made of a common case-knife that he picked up off the floor. The file with which he made the saw was thrown in at the window, but by whom he says he does not know. The cutting was commenced the day Webster's trial began. The first thing done was to cut the heads off the rivets and replace them with soap heads. The cutting was all done in the day time. They had considerable trouble getting the iron lining to tear. The last time the Jailer brought their dinner they kept the meat, and that night fried the grease out of it, and with a rag made a lamp that afforded sufficient light to work by till they completed their labor. The mortar and brick gave them considerable trouble, it being so substantial. Roberts went out first. One of the negroes followed him, first having stolen the boots belonging to the other negro, who had got sulky, refused to work and was asleep when they left. They remained in town some time after getting out. The negro went with Roberts to Hard Scrabble, where they separated, the negro going to Virginia afoot, having turned loose the horse which he took about the same time the one Roberts had was taken. The negro, when he left the jail, had no coat, but before he left Roberts he had knocked a man down and took his coat. Roberts says the negro stole the horse and let him have it. The above is the substance of the conversation as detailed to us.

Robert's feet are now chained together, his hands being so small that he can take handcuffs off as fast as two men can put them on. He seems to realize his circumstances, and is not likely to attempt escape again.

SOME of the young gentlemen of the town expect to receive valentines bearing on their mustache. Be this the case we recommend Dr. Ulrey as a first-class hand to make repairs that will inevitable result.

BOYS, now begin rehearsing poetry and making selection for valentines for your "dulcineas."

The Literary Society.

The Literary Society met on the night of the 31st ult., with all the officers on hand, and also quite an audience, composed of the members and visitors.

The house being called to order, the musical department rendered two songs, one entitled "Light and Gay," the other, "Hear the Echo."

This brought the programme up to the discussion of the question, "Affirmed, That the education of woman should be as extensive as that of man."

That this important question might forever be settled, and the minds of the human race cleared of all doubt as to which side of the question should be adopted, a "Grand Commission," composed of Mrs. Viola Grant, F. P. Walton and T. Z. Roberts was selected to decide the question upon the argument adduced.

Dr. J. F. Smith opened the discussion. The Doctor stepped up to the Secretary's stand, and, looking over his spectacles, declared in emphatic tones that the question is one of mighty magnitude, and the issue of the greatest importance. With a few other preliminary remarks, the Doctor commenced his arguments by claiming that the education of the child commences in its infancy, and that the first impression made on its mind is made by its mother, who should be so educated that she will make none but impressions on the infant mind that will, in its riper years, redound to its good; that physiological investigations demonstrates the fact that female minds are as susceptible of reasoning and learning as that of the male, and that the education of woman is as easily accomplished as that of man; that, inasmuch as like produces like, the intelligence of the human family depends largely upon the learning of the mothers; that three-fifths of the intellectual powers of any nation are imbibed from the mothers, and, there being such importance attached to the intelligence of the female portion of the human race, her education should in no wise be restricted, but equal to that of man.

A. W. Gaines followed in quite a lengthy argument, at the commencement of which he gave his opponents a fearful boost, calling them silvery-tongued orators and learned gentlemen. Mr. Gaines took the ground that the word "should" in the proposition, in its connection with the accompanying words, simply means expediency, and that the proposition should be so worded. He argued that the education woman gives man is simply instilling into his heart the love of God; and, that she should accomplish this, it does not follow that her education should be co-extensive with man's; that man's dealings are much more extensive and intricate than that of woman, and, to be able to meet these, he required a superior education; that the mental faculties with which woman is endowed are not susceptible of reasoning as extensively as man, and her mind will not comprehend subjects to the same extent; that her mind is not a logical one, and that she excels only in a few of the fine arts, such as painting, &c.; that reasoning is out of woman's sphere, and mental exertion is detrimental to her beauty, and no one should be willing to see female beauty marred from mental over-exertion; that woman's education, being coextensive with that of man, would in a few years bring about results that are in opposition to the advancement of mankind.

Mr. Foster took the ground that the education of woman has a tendency to elevate the world; that she has an unbounded influence over the world, and her being educated to the brightest standard will redound to the good of the world. To sustain his position that woman's mind could be trained to warfare, or administering government, he referred to the Maid of Orleans as a proof of the first, and the reign of Queen Elizabeth as proof of the second. He argued that woman is the better of the two sexes to exert a general influence, inasmuch as the influence emanates from a refined mind.

Mr. Grigsby then came forward with his field notes, asserting that the question should be brought down to the different branches. He then went into an elaborate explanation of the word education, after which he commenced on physical education, taking the ground that, if his opponent's side of the proposition was adhered to, it would work a revolution, and make woman a colaborer with man; that she has no use for physical education, as in many instances she would be unable to apply it; that woman's brain is not capable of imbibing knowledge to the same extent as that of man, and that the brain is the measure of the capacity; that woman's brain is not of the same material as that of man—that it is finer; that her brain is smaller, and can not entertain the same learning; that in certain studies woman's mind will grasp the same as that of man; that she can not engage in naval or cavalry service, neither in engineering, and for woman to understand these would be of no practical advantage; that woman is the great moralizer of the world, and therefore can not engage in many of the branches of duty for which it is necessary to educate man.

Dr. Smith closed the discussion in a second speech, in nearly both senses of the word. The Doctor claimed that the weight of the brain is no measure of the capacity for learning, but that the surface of the brain is the measure for intelligence. This was all the argument the Doctor made in the closing speech, which, with the decision of the "Commission," settled the dispute.

The Judges decided in favor of the negative.

A dialogue by David Blythe and John Duncan, reading by C. C. Connor, an essay by Miss Carrie Winston, subject "The Literary Society," and an essay by H. C. Trimble, subject "Slang," and two pieces of music, entitled "The Song of the Fairies" and "The Heaven Declareth the Glory of God," concluded the exercises of the evening.

NEXT Wednesday is St. Valentine's Day.

WHAT is better calculated to impress one with the solemnity of the occasion, than to thrust his head out of the window of his sleeping apartment just as Luna darts a few rays through the fracture in the clouds of a chilly night, and behold a solitary horseman slowly wending his way down the street on a neighing steed, and a fellowman standing on the corner at the hotel, with eyes turned heavenward, and in humble tones calling, "Mat, Mat, get up—Mat, get up! I want som whi-whisky!"?

MY SWEETHEART.

"I have seen her, my love, my queen,
And the flowers were kissing her feet;
Daises and lilies in white and green
Looked up her coming to greet;
And the sunbeam stole through the leafy sheen
Where the oak and linden meet.

She is as sweet as the breath of the spring
That comes laden with scent of flowers,
When the lark soars aloft on the wing
In the blush of the blossoming hours.
And the soft-voiced thrush and the linnet sing
In the shade of their leafy bowers.

My love with the violet eyes,
And the hair of golden brown,
Where the sunshine forever nestling lies
Half hid in the radiant crown.
'Till the glowing light of even dies
Away over hill and down!

Winds, breath soft on her head!
Kiss, O, ye flowers, her feet!
O, rosy sun, in the Western red,
Gently upon her beat;
Beat till the rose of love is spread
Where the oak and the linden meet!"

Starting Osage Hedges.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The object of the writer of this brief article is to give some practical information to those designing to plant Osage for hedging.

1. Soil and Preparation—The ground to grow a hedge upon successfully should be well broken to the depth of twelve inches and made mellow. It should be moderately rich; if not so, manured with well-rotted manure.

2. Plants—The plants should be of medium size and fresh dug—not dried or shriveled. They should be well assorted. Plant those of the same size together.

3. Pruning—The plants will need to be pruned before planting. We want about eight inches only, six of the root and two of the top. With a sharp knife cut to that length, and shorten side roots to two inches of main root.

4. Planting—Plant about the first of April. If the plants are large, open a straight furrow with the plow seven inches deep. Plant from six to nine inches apart. Press the soil firmly around the roots of the plants with the foot, and draw up the earth about the plants, leaving one inch of the plant above the ground. If the plants are small, stretch a line where you design planting, and use a narrow spade or sharpened iron rod to plant with.

5. Culture—Keep the ground mellow and clean for three years. Early in the following March cut each plant one-half off close to the ground, bend down lengthwise the hedge and confine down with hooks drove in the ground or otherwise, and in one year afterward you will have a good hedge.

J. P. KELLY.

MIDDLE CREEK, KY., Jan. 25, 1877.

SUSAN SHROCK had the reputation in Princeton, Ky., of being a wonderfully trustworthy fortune teller. She was not an old hag, according to custom, but rather young and pretty. She predicted that C. Lewis Hollingsworth would meet death at the hands of unknown men on the highway, and that his horse would return home alone, and that his body would never be found. A few days ago he started a horseback journey, and soon the horse came back riderless. His wife was grief-stricken until she learned that Susan had also disappeared, and that her husband had taken his best clothes and all the money he could accumulate. Now she is searching for his body, but she expects to find it alive, near by Susan.

WOMAN, who whilom was weak, was wrou ht upon by the wheedling words of the wily one, since when the world weeps o'er its wickedness. Wanting woman, the world were a waste, and we wending our way through its wilderness, would waft our wailing to the wind and waves. Woman, without thy winsome ways, wealth were wortliless, a will o' the wisp. The witchery of thy wooing words works wonders, like the waving of the wizard's wand; witness thy weariless watching over the wounded and the wretched, withstanding our waywardness through weal or woe. Wanton waddlers on the wane, writhing under wrinkles, may wage thee warfare, but the wise welcome and worship thee.

WHE-E-UP! whoo-o-up! hur-raw! I iz de wildest nigger in dese sarrounin's, and don't you fur-git it!" And with that he flew about six feet into the air, striking his feet together exactly five times before reaching terra firma. "I'ze de wuss dose o' medicine in de human 'pothicary shot, and when you takes me you takes pizen. Don't you hear me, nigger!" By this time his antagonist, who had shown some signs of fight in the outset, was rapidly making tracks around the corner. Old Uncle Billy walked quietly off, chuckling to himself—"Humph! I'ze a bad nigger, I iz."

"I NEVER go to church," said a country tradesman to his clergyman. "I always spend Sunday's in settling accounts." "You will find, sir," said the clergyman, "that the day of judgment will be spent the same way."

LETTER FROM TEXAS.

TARRANT COUNTY, LONE *, Jan. 22.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

My pen is not much given to repeating, but I am inclined to drop you a word this evening, though only two weeks have passed since my last. "The wind and the weather, and the news of the day," are heavily laden with impressive sensations; and allow me to congratulate you upon the fact, that your debut into the Editorial Brigade is at a period when every breeze wafts news, and telegrams from every cardinal point, startle even the most far seeing. I say, when that which falls by the "wayside" among the "briers" on "stony places," as well as that on "good ground" produces manifold of news, the editor's "easy chair" is made as soft as cushions of swan down and his purse as dropsical as Ben Butler's spoon bag. A gentleman the other day, on reading in the Courier-Journal mention of the convention to be held in Louisville on the 18th, said: "I suppose Kentucky Democrats will pass resolutions of neutrality in their convention next Thursday." Think I must show him resolutions passed by Burlington mass-meeting.

The weather here in the past two weeks has been variable, an occasional "norther" lasting 24 hours, but not freezing enough to stop plowing.

By the pen of your Big Bone correspondent in your last issue, you say, "the extreme cold weather has given many the Texas fever." Let 'em come; the Lone Star latch string is on the outside, and the glowing fire on her broad hearth is sufficient, ample and able to send a cheering ray to the remotest of her homeshold. Let 'em come: the Creator's hand was lavish in bestowing rich gifts upon this portion of his handiwork. Let 'em come: within her borders she holds means of sustenance for millions; her virgin soil is plentiful and rich, and offers the reward of a bountiful living to the industrious, homes to the penniless, who have the nerve to wield a determined hand. Let 'em come, and know only as things of the past excessive cold winters, to be followed by more excessive deep mud in the spring, accompanied by scratches in horses, and many other things more vexatious. Let 'em come, and take up their abode in that State, which will one day be the empire Stae of the Union, (if we have a Union) and if we have none, she will be able to take care of herself on "independent principles." Let 'em come now and keep out of the apprehended mess.

Corn here is worth (in the crib) from 25 to 40 cts., oats 20 to 25 cts., cotton in Dallas and Fort Worth markets from 10 to 11 cts. per lb. The wheat crop has not improved much in the past two weeks, the weather being too dry and cold.

Hog cholera has been prevailing in some parts of the county, thought by some to be caused by hogs eating cotton seeds. The lint on the seeds, they claim, affects both the bowels and lungs of the hog. Fat hogs here, on foot, have been selling at from 5 to 5½ cts.; pork delivered, 6 cts. Not soon will emigrants again obtain supplies as cheap as they are getting them here at this time. Let those Texas inclined, "take notice, and govern themselves accordingly."

When "Jim Horse" gets the "westbay" well trained to harness, send him (the westbay) over to Gov. Hayes, to hold in readiness for an emergency, that is, if the RECORDER can spare him.

Yours, &c. S. B. HUEY.

THE grasshopper question is the all absorbing one among the farmers of the North-west, for it will matter little to them who is the next President, if these winged pests destroy their crops and leave them without money to pay any taxes. In an address recently delivered before the St. Louis Academy of Science by Prof. Riley, whose previous forewarnings upon this subject have been remarkably accurate, some interesting intimations of grasshopper probabilities were advanced. The Professor commenced by calling attention to the fulfillment of his predictions for 1876, he having a year ago expressed his belief that in Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska there would not hatch the following spring as many locusts as would naturally hatch in ordinary seasons from indigenious species; that those States ravished by locusts in the spring and early summer of 1875 would enjoy peculiar immunity during the same seasons of 1876, not only from locust injuries, but also from the injuries of most other noxious insects; but that they would be liable to suffer from migratory swarms from the far Northwest later in the year, all of which came to pass in accordance with the Professor's prophecies. The present situation, according to Prof. Riley, is this: The swarms of Rocky Mountain locusts, though they came too late to seriously affect maturing crops last year, have laid eggs over large parts of Minnesota, Nebraska, Kansas, and Colorado, and in restricted portions of Iowa, Missouri, Texas, and Arkansas. Should nine-tenths of these eggs be destroyed, the remainder would hatch enough young insects to destroy everything green in the regions named, unless steps should be taken to prevent such a result. Fortunately, means have been discovered for checking the ravages of these pests, various descriptions of grasshopper exterminators have been invented, and the farmers in the threatened regions are very generally preparing to defend their crops. —N. A HEAD wind—A sneeze.

Something About Divers.

Very exaggerated stories have been told as to the endurance of experienced divers under the water—that is of those who go into the depths, like the pearl seekers in the Indian seas, without any mechanical assistance. It is folly to say, as many do say, that the pearl divers of the East are by constant practice, enable to remain under water from ten to fifteen minutes.

Very skillful and experienced divers may remain under water for two, but they very rarely remain there for three minutes. The best of the Ceylon divers, in fact, do not often continue submerged for more than a minute and a half, and their condition of health must be very good to permit them to do this.

Those who use the diving dress, which makes the diver look so frightful that even sharks are said to be frightened by it, must be physically qualified for the work. Many a strong fellow has gone down, and, after a short pause, has reappeared, bleeding alarmingly at the ears, nose and mouth.

The strain upon a diver's physical powers depends mainly upon the depth to which he ventures. The greatest depth to which the Ceylon pearl divers go is thirteen fathoms (a fathom is six feet); but the usual depth is nine fathoms; and they do not go down except when the water is placid.

The external pressure on an average size man, who may be assumed to present about six thousand inches of surface, would be, at a depth of twenty fathoms (one hundred and twenty feet), nearly nine tons. The greatest depth to which any man can safely descend, with existing appliances, is about one hundred and sixty feet.

A diver goes down with shoe-soles weighing together about twenty-eight pounds, and with fifty-six pounds more on his back and breast. For a depth of one hundred and twenty feet he would be required to be weighted with not less than one hundred and twelve pounds, and at the outset any nervous bungling might result in his reaching the bottom the wrong end uppermost.

It is usual, in shallow water, for a man to drop from the end of a short ladder, hung over the side of a boat, merely carrying a coil of line with him. In deep water, however, it is obvious that in dropping in this manner, there would be great risk in being carried away from the desired spot, and the common plan is first to send down a line with a heavy weight at the end of it.

This weight being properly planted, the line will, of course, afford a guide down by which the diver may lower himself, and which, held on to, will enable the man to wander over the bottom of the deep, or into the hold of the vessel, being, of course, connected with the aerial world by a breathing tube, and carrying a life line to that by which he descended, as a means of finding his way back again in the dark.

We say "in the dark," for the interior of a ship under water is in utter darkness. The gloom or the light at the bottom of the sea depends on the clearness, smoothness, and depth of water.

In some parts of the world the transparency of the sea is said to be somewhat marvelous. Travelers have given wonderful accounts of the brilliancy and beauty of the Caribbean sea bottom, as seen lying in immense depths below the surface.

THE tobacco season in Cincinnati may now be considered as fairly opened. For the previous two months but little has been done, owing to the severe cold weather and consequent close of navigation, holidays &c. For the past week or two our market has been steadily improving, and now that the weather is moderating, and navigation fully resumed, we may look for better times. The offerings or the first three days of this week have been 747 hhds. and 28 boxes. Prices have been well maintained and there has been but few rejections. Most of the tobacco being received now is from the new crop. The receipts are rather light, owing to the dry cold weather we are now having, which is not favorable for the handling and packing of the weed. In regard to the quality of the new crop of 1876, it is much superior to that of 1874 and 1875, and we think fully equal to that of the famous one of 1873. The prospects for the future look much brighter than for a long time past.—Western Tobacco Journal.

A California Wild Goose Story.

The large flocks of geese that are constantly passing over the town are frequently shot at, but they generally fly at too high an altitude to be reached by leaden missles. Sometimes, however, the shots take effect. The other day we were watching a flock flying southward, when the report of a gun was heard, and we saw one of the geese begin to fall slowly. The others perceiving that their comrade was wounded, uttered shrill cries of distress, and about a dozen of them flew under the wounded bird, huddling together so that their backs formed a sort of a bed, on which the wounded one rested. They bouyed it up for some time, the others looking on and manifesting their concern by uttering loud discordant shrieks. Finding that their companion was unable longer to accompany them in their flight, they abandoned him to his fate, and he fell into the arms of an expectant Chinaman.

Grazing Plains in the Moon.

Every one has noticed the dark spots which mottle the surface of the full moon. These long ago used to be considered seas, and in the geography of the lunar orb went under such names as the Sea of Tranquillity, the Sea of Nectar, the Sea of Serenity, the Sea of Rains, and the Ocean of Tempests. They are still designated seas by astronomers, for convenience sake, but are known to nothing but vast plains hemmed in, in some cases, by lofty rugged mountains. When examined through the telescope some of these plains exhibit a greenish tint, strongly marked, but here and there difficult to catch, except under favorable conditions. This verdant hue has excited speculation. If the moon has no atmosphere and no water, it may arise from the color of the ground, but certainly can not indicate vegetation. If, however, the moon has an atmosphere, the case is entirely altered, and recent studies of the state of the lunar surface have excited grave doubts as to its being nothing but an airless waterless, unalterable desert, a changless mass of dead matter. An American scientific contemporary proceeds boldly from doubt to certainty. "The moon," it observes, "is now known to have an atmosphere of considerable volume and density, to present abundant evidence of physical activity and change, and to have, in all probability, water enough to make life easily possible on its surface. The moon is dying, but not dead. Being so much smaller than the earth, it has run its course more rapidly, but it is still a good way off from that goal of ultimate deadness to which so many astronomers have theoretically assigned it. There is not the slightest adequate evidence, Nelson says, of the popular view of want of life, and its truth would be admitted by no astronomer who had developed sufficient attention to selenography to enable him to thoroughly realize the probable present condition of the moon." If such be the case, the green-tinted plains may be nothing but vast grassy regions, covered with flocks and herds. The "man in the moon" may have abundant pasturage for his cattle, and many a shepherd boy may be there seated on the ground, piping as though he should never grow old. It is a pity we can only speculate. Reality is true romance, and if we knew all that goes on in the moon, astronomers would probably shut up their books and break their telescopes.—Cassel's Magazine.

THOSE who knew the late John B. Floyd, of Virginia, will remember that his complexion was dark, and his hair, although of fine texture, very curly, clustering in close ringlets all over his head. He always dressed in exceeding good taste, and wore the best of broadcloth, so that he presented an exceptionally fine appearance. During the administration of Mr. Buchanan, a reception was given at the White House to a delegation of Indians from the plains, and Governor Floyd attended, as Secretary of War, to receive the gentle savages and present them to the President. He was arrayed in full evening costume, swallow-tail, choker and white kids, in order that the occasion might be as impressive as possible. The aborigines were gotten up in a most extravagant display of paint, feathers and gewgaws. After the ceremony had been concluded, Governor Floyd, by way of divertisement, proudly touched his own manly breast and remarked to one of the chiefs, in the usual vernacular: "Me Indian—Virginia Indian blood—Pocahontas!" The chief gazed at him from head to foot, looking very doubting, and then, putting his hand on the Governor's head and feeling his curls, gravely answered: "No Indian—no Indian! Hair heap like nigger!" "Old Buck" roared at the sally, in which Governor Floyd, who loved a joke even at his own expense, heartily joined. But historians say he never subsequently claimed Indian blood.

A Little Romance of Love.

There was a wedding at Grace Church the other night, and the bride and groom were warmly congratulated, while many were the wishes of friends for a bright and happy future. Such an announcement would not create any surprise, were it not for a bit of romance connected with this uniting of young hands and hearts. It is said that the bride, a beautiful young lady of this city, had two ardent lovers, both of whom were equally confident that they had won the prize of her heart. One of the lovers lives in St. Louis, and, as the story goes, was to have been married to the young lady this evening, every arrangement having been made for the wedding, but the other lover came forward on the prestige of old love, ardently plead his suit, and carried off the prize at the very time the lover over in St. Louis was preparing to start for Louisville to claim his bride. He is expected to arrive this morning, with his hopes bright and soaring, only to learn that he has been "counted out."—Louisville Commercial, Feb. 1.

THE solemn punster of the Burlington Hawkeye rescues this from oblivion: The other day some of the boys induced a young man from Flint Creek to take hold of the handles of a galvanic battery. As it puckered him up he roared: "Jiminy Criminy, let up! Who ever heard of a thing that could make you taste green persimmons with your hands, before?"

OH! LET ME DREAM TO-NIGHT.

Now let me dream, my thoughts are gone
Upon you wave's blue track;
And pleasant are their wanderings,
I would not call them back.
Within an hour the dance begins,
Where festal lamps are bright;
But ask me not to join the throng—
I'd be alone to-night.

I'll watch the shadows softly creep,
The woodland's seeming trance,
The sparkling rippie's quick reply
The moonlight's loving glance.
And if from where the revel shines,
The wind wafts soft refrain,
I'll close my eyes, and dreaming live
My days of mirth again.

But in the crowd I could not smile,
Or strike one note of glee—
Though warm and loving hearts are there,
None kindred are to me.
I should but sit with vacant gaze,
That doy's sweet self would fright;
For all of heart, and mind, and soul,
Are straying home to-night.

Ye will not miss the stranger's step,
Mid well-known friends and dear,
Nor in the pauses of the dance,
Sigh that I am not near.
I'd join you if my presence lent
One ray of cheering light;
But feast and song will need me not—
So let me dream to-night.

A SHERIFF'S EXPERIENCE.

"I have served two terms as Sheriff of Osage County," said the little man, as he lit a fresh cigar and braced his feet against the stove, as if about to delight us with a story.

"Did you ever hang anybody?" was the natural inquiry that was quickly propounded to the ex-Sheriff.

"No," and I thought I detected a faint smile on the speaker's lips. "But I held a man under sentence of death, and he wasn't reprieved either."

Of course all of us wanted to hear about that man, and Mr. Mittimus proceeded at once to gratify our curiosity.

"I knew before the case was called that John Upshot would be found guilty of murder in the first degree. His relatives—and they were numbered among the most wealthy and influential people of the district—engaged the ablest attorneys in the State for the defense. But money and talent could not save the criminal. A good deal of legal lore was lost upon the twelve honest farmers who filled the jury box, and the only interest that seemed to attach itself to the trial was the chicanery of Upshot's counsel.

"For four days that trial dragged its serpentine length through the October term. It worried me, for, as I felt that I was to have a hanging on my hands, I wanted to get through the ugly job as quickly as possible. I did not sleep much of nights, for I had to lie awake and hear the murderer pacing his cell, as if the ghost of his victim was keeping him on a terrible march. The closing of the trial was a great relief, and I breathed freer, even when I heard the only verdict at which twelve honest men could arrive. I heard the cheer that greeted the verdict, and when I took 'my man' back to jail, he looked up into my face and said with a smile:

"'You will do me a favor by committing no blunders when the time comes, Mr. Mittimus.'

"His words and tone told me that he would die courageously, and I felt like thanking John Upshot for that, for I was fearful that he would play the coward. I felt that I could hang a man that was not afraid to die. A coward, squirming and weakening on the gallows, might have unmanned me.

"The county town of Osage was not large then. The jail, to which was attached the Sheriff's residence, stood on a rise, and the rear windows, barred and very strong, overlooked a gently sloping piece of ground, which boasted of a fine grove of beech and butternut. That grove held many pleasant recollections to me, for there I had played through boyhood, and I loved to frequent its cooling shades, long after I had reached man's estate. It was upon this pretty scene that the sole window of John Upshot's cell looked. More than once during the trial I had discovered him standing at the bars, as if sighing for the freedom of the birds that filled the grove with their music.

"The day of execution approached, but very slowly to me. I assure you, gentlemen, that I wanted it to come on the wings of the wind, for, as I have already said, I wanted the hangman's job off my hands. The prisoner appeared indifferent for several days after the trial; but the horror of his approaching fate soon fell upon him, and his smile faded away. A reprieve was totally unlooked for, and I believe that no steps were ever taken toward one. It was given out everywhere that Upshot would be hung.

"The weather for the fall was delightful. Indian Summer was upon us, and the days had the mellowness of the true Indian Summer, and the skies were soft and beautiful overhead. I used to wander into the grove on Sabbath afternoons, but my visits ceased suddenly. One day I happened to cast my eyes toward the jail, which was visible from the place I occupied, and behold! I saw a pale face at the window of John Upshot's cell. The condemned man seemed to be looking at me, who had been commissioned to launch him into eternity. His eyes seemed full of mute pleading, and burned into my very heart. I could not stand that awful look, and made my way back to town, unnerved for the first time since his conviction.

"I did not return to that spot until the night prior to the day set apart for the execution. The town was becoming filled with people, for the few executions that had taken place in the county had been public, and the precedent was to be adhered to in Upshot's case. My programme had been carefully studied, and, wearied with the matter, I concluded to seek the cool grove and find a little rest. For several days and nights the prisoner had paced his cell with that terrible tread which rings in my ears to-day, and I wanted to get beyond earshot of the awful sounds.

"The night was lovely. A full moon was in the sky, and her light fell directly upon the jail. The white walls had a ghost-like look from the grove, and the winds that rustled the leaves around me seemed to sing the requiem of the doomed man. I found relief among the trees, but all at once I was wishing that I had not left my house.

"A face, white and wan as death, appeared suddenly at one of the barred windows. I knew that it was John Upshot's. The apparition startled me, and I was on my feet in an instant, staring at the window. He seemed to be taking his last look at the beautiful earth, unfolded to his gaze by the moon, and a longing look it seemed to me. I could see that his face was pressed against the bars, and when I recollected that the man must be standing on the very tips of his toes in order to maintain his position, I felt his eagerness. For many minutes I watched that white face, and if I pitied its guilty owner in that moment of his pain, I am sure, gentlemen, that you will pardon me.

"I was thus gazing at John Upshot when the loud report of a gun caused me to start and whirl quickly in my tracks. The weapon seemed to have been discharged within a few paces of my position, but I could not see a living soul besides myself in the grove. My first impression was that an attempt had been made upon my own life; but I had not felt the whistle of the ball, and was quite certain that it had not penetrated my person. But, in order to be prepared for a second shot, I drew a weapon and started toward the suspected position of the assassin. My search proved fruitless; but, as the trees were throwing long shadows, I knew that any person could easily elude me. The shot worked me up to a little pitch of excitement, and as I turned my head toward the town, I happened to glance at the jail.

"John Upshot's face was no longer at the window!

"I returned home, mystified by the shot, but resolving to discover its author. My wife met me at the door with a white face, and said that she feared that Upshot had taken his life, as she had heard the fall of a heavy body in the direction of his cell.

"A minute later I flung wide the cell door, and, to my horror, found John Upshot lying on the floor, with the moonlight falling upon the bloodiest face I have ever beheld. Of course my first thought was one of suicide; but the rigid hand grasped no revolver, though there was a ghastly bullet wound between the eyes. I lifted the man, but he was dead, and I knew I would not hang him on the coming day. Of course I was not long in associating the shot in the grove with the criminal's death, and an observation taken on the following night convinced me of the fact. The affair is still involved in mystery to the people of Osage, but to me it has been made clear.

"A year after this thrilling event I was summoned to the deathbed of Lillian Blake, the beautiful daughter of Upshot's victim. She was near the grave, but she told me a strange story, and before I left the room I knew that the fair girl had avenged her father's death by slaying his murderer on the night before the day of legal execution."

A Curiosity of Numbers.

The multiplication of 987654321 by 45 gives 4,444,444,445. Reversing the order of the digits and multiplying 123456789 by 45 we get a result equally curious, 5,555,555,505. If we take 12345678 as the multiplicand, and interchaging the figures of 45, take 54 as the multiplier, we obtain another remarkable product, 6,666,666,666. Returning to the multiplicand first used, 987654321, and taking 54 as the multiplier again, we get 53,333,333,334—all threes except the first and last figures, which read together 54, the multiplier. Taking again the same multiplicand and using 27, the half of 54, as the multiplier, we get a product of 26,666,666,667—all sixes except the first and last, which read together 27, the multiplier. Next interchanging the figures in the number 27, and using 72 as the multiplier with 987654321 as the multiplicand, we obtain the product of 71,111,111,112—all ones except the first and last figures, which read together give 72, the multiplier.

WHAT is the difference between a mouse and a girl? One harms the cheese and the other charms the he's.

English Wife-Selling.

As has been stated, wife-selling was frequently practiced during the last century, and the dissatisfied husbands frequently "sold" as well as their wives. One fickle wretch was deservedly punished. Having parted with his spouse for a quarter of a guinea and a gallon of beer, he was disgusted to hear, a few weeks afterward, that she had, by the death of a relative, come into a little fortune of two hundred pounds. Only a few years ago, a bachelor in easy circumstances, living at Dittisham, a village on the banks of the Dart, took a strong fancy for the wife of one of his neighbors; and after some negotiation, it was agreed between him and the husband, that he should take the lady for fifty pounds, her baby being thrown into the bargain; and the newly mated pair soon set off on a sort of a wedding-trip. The husband, however, found he had been sold, for, after having delivered up his wife, his customer went off without paying for her, and the deluded scamp was left lamenting. In 1766, a carpenter who had sold his wife hung himself upon her refusing to return to his repentant bosom, on the plea that she was perfectly satisfied with the result of his trading. Although the women generally consented to these singular transfers, they sometimes rebelled. One woman, wife of a tavern-keeper, refused to be delivered over to her purchaser, and the disappointed wife-buyer was obliged to depart as wifeless as he came; while, to render his disappointment more mortifying, mine host declined to refund the earnest money. Another young man, finding it impossible to live comfortably with his spouse, resolved to give somebody else the chance of doing so, by disposing of her at public auction. Not being successful in finding a customer in his own neighborhood, his wife suggested that he should try Newcastle. They went there; and the wife so contrived matters that certain gentlemen employed in his Majesty's service—very pressing service—introduced themselves to the husband, and he found himself one fine day safe on board a frigate bound for a long cruise on distant waters; and so the tables were turned, and instead of getting rid of his wife, she got rid of him.

Anecdote of Washington.

It has often been remarked of Washington that no one was ever in his presence without being strongly impressed by reverence for his dignity. But it seems, by the following anecdote, that at least there was one exception:

"When the President was procuring the ground for the city which was to be the seat of government, he had but little difficulty in procuring the necessary releases, except in one instance. Mr. James Byrnes was the owner of a lot or tract which it was advisable should be included in the plan. The General had various conferences with Mr. B., who was very obstinate, and resisted all the reasoning and persuasions of the great man. Indignant at being thus opposed, Washington turned upon him with indignation, and said, with great severity, 'Mr. James Byrnes, what would your land have been worth if I had not placed this city on the Potomac?' Byrnes was undismayed, and coolly turned to him and said, 'George Washington, what would you have been worth if you had not married the Widow Curtis?'

Drunkenness.

Drunk! Young man, did you ever stop to think how that word sounds? Did you ever think what misery and woe you brought upon your friends when you degraded your manhood by getting drunk? How it rings in the ears of a devoted wife! How it makes the heart of a fond mother bleed! How it crushes out the hopes of a doting father, and brings reproach and shame upon a loving sister. Drunk! See him as he leans against some friendly house. He stands ready to fall into hell, unconscious as to his approaching fate. His wife, with tearful eyes and aching heart, sits at the window to hear her husband's footsteps. Alas! they come not. He is drunk! The husband, the parent, is drunk! spending his means of support for liquor, while his family is starving for bread, his children suffering for clothing. His friends one by one are reluctantly leaving him to a miserable fate.

Take Notice!

We are indebted to our friend, Mr. Clement Olhaber, of Cincinnati, for a copy of a notice which he assures us was posted by the roadside in Campbell County, Ky. Mr. Olhaber is a veteran wag, but as he shows us the hole in the paper made by the carpet tack which fastened it to the fence post, there can, of course be no question as to the genuineness of the document:

NOTTIS.

Know kow is allowed in these medders, eny men or women letten thar kows run the rode, wot gits inter my medders aforesed shal have his tale cut orf by me OBADIAH ROGERS.

A PHYSICIAN gave a patient a box of pills with the direction, "Take one five times a day."

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

So many Connecticut farmers have been swindled into giving notes to traveling agents on false pretenses that a State Convention of victims is to be held.

"WHAT would you be, dearest, if I should press the stamp of love on those sealing-wax lips?" "I," responded the fairy-like creature, "should be stationery!"

"IT has been the problem of my life," said Potter, "to know how they get soda water into these fountains. When you open the faucet it flies out tremendously, but how it was poured in stumbles me."

He took a sudden seat he did,
In all his gorgeous foppery;
Such mournful spectables we see,
When sidewalks are so sloppery,
And she, poor girl, went down with him,
In all her pull-back frippery;
Such tragic incidents take place,
When sidewalks are so slippery.

"MY boy," said a solemn-visaged Evangelist to a lad who had just emerged from a hair-pulling match with another boy, "do you expect to rove hereafter in a land of pure delight?" "No," said the lad, "I've busted another button off'n my trousers, and I expect to get licked for it."

A WESTERN paper says that an editor of a rival sheet was skating recently, and broke through the ice. He went up to his ears, but the hole was not large enough to let them through. While he was waiting for some one to take him out both his ears froze, and they have since been amputated, and are used for door-mats.

A PROMINENT Connecticut writer is noted for neglect in his personal appearance. The night before Christmas, a gentleman spoke to a friend of making the author a present. I want to get him something that he would keep," observed the gentleman. "In that case I would suggest a cake of soap," remarked the friend.

A NEW JERSEY editor lost his best gold pen and holder a few days ago. After making a thorough search all over the office, and accusing a dozen tramps with its theft, he happened to remember where he last placed it, and bending down the top of his ear, discovered no less than fourteen penholders of various styles which he had lost during the past two years.

A PAIR of Pennsylvania girls were greatly offended by a young man who said he didn't think they were as beautiful as a couple of dreams, and meeting him in the Postoffice not long ago, they each drew a cowhide and went into him "like pandemonium beating tan-bark." When they got through with him he went home and took a good look at his back with the help of two looking-glasses. And then he went to a circus proprietor and tried to hire himself out as a two-legged zebra.

IN all policies of life insurance these, among a host of other questions are asked: "Age of father if living?" "Age of mother, if living? A man in the country who filled up an application made his father's age "if living," one hundred and twelve years, and his mother's one hundred and two. The agent was amazed at this, and fancied he had secured an excellent customer; but, feeling somewhat dubious, he remarked that the applicant came of a very long-lived family. "Oh, you see, sir," replied he, "my parents died many years ago, but if living, would be aged as there put down." "Exactly—I understand," said the agent.

A LONE woman writes from St. Louis to her husband: "We ben marrage 18 munth. A COUPLE of tramps waylaid a wealthy farmer a few days since, and sprang upon him, demanded his money or his life. He showed them a clean pair of heels, and they went at it. They chased him half a mile down the roughest lane they ever stumbled over. Then the whole crowd dashed through a briar patch, and went panting and sweating across a corn-field; then the chased struck for the woods and went wheezing up a steep hill, while the tramps pressed hard after him with bloodshot eyes and shortened breath; then the farmer dashed across a frozen creek, and the tramps, following, broke through, but got out and chased the fugitive through a blackberry patch, across a forty-acre field, over another hill, down a ravine, across a stump-field, and finally they overhauled him in the road, searched him, and found that he didn't have a nickel—not a solitary red cent. And if they weren't the maddest tramps.

Why don't somebody jump up and declare himself candidate for the Legislature? This Presidential affair has worn out; let people have something fresh on their political dish. Don't all jump up at once, though, because everybody knows you are legions.

Simon Cameron has a little breach of promise suit on hand. It is claimed by a young widow in Washington that she has a right to his heart and hand, but she is willing to take the sum of $50,000 instead. She values him more highly as husband than many others do as a statesman.

The Farmers' and Mechanics' Joint Stock Fire Company, of Merideth, New York, has been ordered to take in its shingle and wind up its affairs. This order was the result of an investigation which showed that the Company could not continue to do business with safety to the policy holders.

Three million dollars in double-eagles recently arrived in New York on a Baltimore and Ohio railway car. The treasure, which weighed six tons, was taken overland from San Francisco, to be deposited in the New York Sub-Treasury. It filled fourteen iron safes, and was guarded by a squad of soldiers, and was in charge of eight Treasury Department clerks.

From the accounts of petty thievery that is going on all over the State, it seems that this Commonwealth is cursed with a band of outlaws that are giving both cities and country a thorough investigation, and stealing everything they can get their hands on. Every week our exchanges abound with accounts of house-breaking. We give this as a warning to our readers to look well to their doors every night.

Judge Fisher, of Carroll County, has made the following decision in regard to local option:

That where a vote is taken, under the provisions of the Local Option Act, and results against selling liquor, that there is no authority two years afterward to take another vote on the question, in the same locality. That whenever the prohibitionists carry the election, the liquor traffic is afterwards unlawful in that community, unless subsequently authorized by an act of the Legislature.

We must congratulate those who have been untiring in their efforts to have a turnpike constructed between Burlington and Bellevue. They have spent considerable time and are now bound for no little amount of money, but all this is for the prosecution of a commendable scheme, and one that will for all time to come be of untold value to them. They will, in less than one year from the date of its completion, be perfectly astonished at their having done without the road so long.

The Joint Commission on counting the electoral vote, decided on the 7th inst., by a vote of eight to seven to receive no evidence in the Florida affair, except that submitted by the Vice-President to the two Houses in Joint Committee assembled, and bearing on the ineligibility of Humphreys, one of the Hayes electors from that State. This first step was a forerunner of what might be expected by the Democrats who at once became despondent, while the Republicans were greatly elated over the first fruits. All kinds of conjectures as to the result of the action of the Commission in regard to the ineligibility of Humphreys were immediately indulged in, but the suspense was soon terminated by the decision that Hayes was entitled to the four electoral votes from Florida. The decision was at once reported to the two Houses in Joint Assembly, when, as provided for in the Electoral Bill, objection to the decisions was made, the two Houses separating to consider the matter. In the Senate the report was sustained by a vote of 46 to 25. The Commission gave for its grounds upon which it made its decision, that it is not competent under the Constitution and law as it existed at the date of the passage of the act constituting the commission to go into the evidence aliunde, the papers opened by the President of the Senate in the presence of the two Houses to prove that other persons than those holding certificates of election, granted by the Governor of the State, were the legal electors are inadmissible. That the evidence as to the ineligibility of Humphreys does not show that he held office on the day when the electors were appointed, and therefore he is a legal elector. This, so far as the Commission was concerned, settled the question in that State. The vote in the house on the decision was a party vote. The counting, upon the assembling of the two Houses Monday, progressed without interruption till the State of Louisiana was called, when objections were made and the matter referred to the Commission where it now rests.

There is a considerable discord in the membership of the Methodist Church at Carrollton, and that the troubles might be adjusted they have resorted to a court of justice. It appears that a portion of the membership think Mr. Overstreet, who, at the last annual Conference, was appointed to take charge of the church, is inclined to exercise too much authority, and more than they intend he shall. Overstreet, among other things not indorsed by the entire membership, attempted to have the pulpit lowered, when an injunction was sued out to prevent him from carrying into effect his design. The congregation of this church is said to be the largest and wealthiest in the town, and has existed harmoniously for many years.

But a few weeks since we mentioned the discovery of an illicit distillery in Dearborn County, Ind., and the arrest of John C. Stenger, the proprietor of the concern. Stenger had his trial before Judge Gresham in Indianapolis, last week, and was convicted; his punishment being fixed at three months confinement in the county jail and a fine of $500. He is now in jail in Lawrenceburg, serving his time. Thus we see Mr Stenger's little illicit speculation resulting in a fine of $500, three months imprisonment and a confiscation of his still and all the brandy found on his premises.

The career of Colonel Weeden O'Neal, as United States Marshal for the District of Kentucky, was of short duration. A few days since the President nominated General Speed S. Fry for that position, and it is thought he will accept the office. Mr. Fry is said to be well qualified to fill the office creditably.

The first comet seen for two years was discovered on the 8th inst., by M. Borelly, at Paris. It can not be seen with the naked eye, but will thus be visible in a few days. To get a view of it you should look for it between three and four o'clock in the morning, a few degrees south of Alpha Ophiuchi, which is a bright star. This comet as seen through the telescope in Cincinnati observatory, presents a good size and is very brilliant.

It is a general opinion there will be an attempt made to defeat the completion of the count of the electoral vote in time to inaugurate the President on the 5th of March. This defeat will be attempted by filibustering, which is expected to commence so soon as the count of the Louisiana electoral vote is made. If the Commission gives the State to Hayes it is prophesied that the Democrats will commence that game, and the same is expected of the Republicans, should the vote not be allowed them.

The New York Sun takes the ground that the Electoral Commission is an unconstitutional body, and has no power, neither legislative nor judicial. It gives strong arguments in support of its views of the body.

KANSAS LETTER.

Clay Center, Kansas, Feb. 8th, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The Recorder took us somewhat by surprise when it announced the startling fact that the new fire proof, burglar proof, $4,800 iron jail, otherwise known as "that beastly job," has been "bulldozed" so shamefully. What will be the result? Will "Gas Gun," otc., take up the cudgels again? or will the aforesaid "G. G." rest proudly on his laurels with an exultant, "I told you so," and so let it pass? Let us entreat him to use his victory modestly; to remember that it is the mark of a great soul to be generous to the fallen, or, in the words of the average Kansan, "not to kick a fellow when he's down." And the other party. Be patient in adversity, and be not cast down by defeat. The noble structure will yet stand and be better and more beauteous from the scar that will grace its southern wall. Look at the bright side of things.

Our weather has shown altogether a new phase during the last few weeks, to wit: a regular spring thaw, which has had the effect of making our roads very muddy, our town very dirty, our citizens very wrothy, and in addition thereto the Republican has got "up on her car," broken her fetters of ice, and with a rush and roar, swept away all obstacles, backed a bridge off its piers on one of the affluents, knocked the top off the milldam, and scared everybody generally. But she has got down now, and is as gentle as Mary's little lamb.

The warm spell has also had a tendency to hatch out the hoppers. If, as many affirm, it has done so, the chances are good that they (the hoppers) will get their toes, ears and incisors frozen off before we have settled spring weather; if so, good for 'em, and for us too.

As a voice from Texas has challenged Prof. Stepenson to an orthographical tilt, we propose to make it a tripartite arrangement, and our boys (and girls) will guarantee to vanquish the victors, be they Texans or Kentuckians; and on the honor of an "average Kansan" (that's good enough, isn't it?) we can do it. If they don't believe it, let them try it.

We are glad to know that Burlington has got a Literary Society. They had the incipiency of one some time ago, but it promised fair to be a failure, and, suppose it was. How we would like to hear the shiver of lances and clash of steel in the coming contest between Foster and Smith, and Tigsby and Gaines. We'll bet on the negative, and are sure of winning, unless, which isn't likely, Prof. Grigsby has lost a great deal of his vim and logic. You must give full reports in Recorder. C. C. C.

The New Orleans Times says the swamps in Louisiana are dryer than they have been for thirty-five years. A man may ride on horseback or a wagon may be driven through tracts of country heretofore impassable within the memory of man.

Madisonville Republican: The tobacco growers have already commenced bringing their tobacco into the market to sell, and as the buyers of that narcotic have monopolized and kept in check large sums of money which should be in circulation, this will compel them to part with it, and we may soon look for better times and a more plentiful supply of money in future.

A dispatch from Columbia, February 7th, says: In the case of Wm. H. Wallace, Speaker of the Democratic House of Representatives et al. vs. the Carolina National Bank, the State depository, and F. L. Cardoza, Republican State Treasurer, asking for an injunction restraining the bank from paying any money upon checks drawn by Cardoza as Treasurer, Judge Carpenter, who a few days ago held that Chamberlain was legally Governor, holding over untill his successor was qualified, filed his decision continuing the injunction against Cordoza and the bank.

Louisville Commercial: On the 8th inst., John Hideway, who was convicted last October in our Circuit Court and sentenced to the Penitentiary for one year for stealing a hog from the Alms-house, was pardoned yesterday by the Governor. Since his conviction, Stephen Prather and Frank Shaw, the principal witnesses for the prosecution, have been indicted for stealing the same hog, and in the Circuit Court, Tuesday, Prather pleaded guilty and was himself sentenced to one year in the penitentiary. It appears that the real thieves, by combining together, succeeded in convicting an innocent man, but as soon as these facts became known Hideway was pardoned.

The Texas fever has taken off none of our young friends at the present writing. All those tears were shed for naught.

A considerable quantity of Fifteenth Amendment could be seen on the street corners here at any hour Sunday last.

The card of Huey Miller & Co. will be found in this issue. They have recently embarked in the grocery business in Covington.

The whole female portion of a negro Sunday-school, assaulted by a dog no larger than a pint of mush, will be stampeded immediately.

Read the announcement of Blase & Nie, of Covington, in this issue. They are selling their stock of clothing at remarkably low prices.

Don't forget that next Friday evening is set apart by the dancing portion of this community for a social hop at the Morgan Academy Hall.

Maple molasses has made its appearance on the market. One dollar and fifty cents just pays for one gallon of the extract of sugar-tree.

The Maple Hill Grange has received its stock of goods for the operation of the store at Rabbit Hash. The store was opened last Monday morning.

Rev. B. F. Bristow and Rev. T. B. Cook commence a protracted meeting at Petersburg Tuesday evening, the 20th inst., to continue nine or ten days, and probably longer.

The Boone County Recorder declines to make a club-room of its sanctum. Unless it keeps a club there, we don't see how it can get rid of leafers.—Frankfort Yeoman.

You are about right, friend Yeoman.

What a strong force Mr. Wake might get out of Burlington to work on the new pike! We know these boys have lots of work in them, too, because none of it has ever been gotten out.

Rev. Jas. A. Kirtley will commence a series of meetings at Union, Sunday night, the 18th inst. Monday night Rev. W. H. Felix will be there also. The meeting will continue during the week.

The last couple started on the journey of life together in this battiwick was J. W. Smith and Kate Klopp, of Woolper Valley. Rev. H. J. Foster tied the knot and started them on the journey of life as a double team.

Last week the last matter put in type before going to press was an item announcing the departure of Geo. Blythe for Glendale, Ohio. Had he returned a few moments sooner we could have announced his return in the same paragraph.

It seems very hard for the local press to decide whether or not 'Squire Ground-hog got a glimpse of his shadow when he came forth on the 2d inst. As this has been an uncommonly severe winter, probably the old fellow was too thin to make a shadow. Who knows? This question is as much disputed as the result of the Presidential election.

The building of the Bellevue and Burlington pike is a thing that will be done. The contractors, Wm. E. Wake and Geo. Burgie, were in town Monday and executed bond, as required by the board, and will commence work in a few days. Those who prophesied, saying, "The road will not be built," proved to be false prophets.

A man bought a gallon of gin to take home, and, by way of label, wrote his name upon a card, which happened to be the seven of clubs, and tied it to the handle. A friend, coming along and observing the jug, quietly remarked, "That's an awful careless way to leave that liquor." "Why?" said Tom. "Because somebody might come along with the eight of clubs and take it."—Exchange.

Yes, and we will bet he would declare his intention of going alone first.

The first session of Prof. T. H. Stephenson's school expired last Tuesday week, but he immediately commenced the second session, and, we are glad to learn, under more favorable prospects. Mr. Stephenson, during the entire session just closed, was the most attentive teacher that has taught in the Morgan Academy for many years. It is to the interest of the entire community to lend a hand in assisting him in building up a good school at this place.

The Literary Society.

This society becomes more and more popular, and the attendance is larger and still on the increase. Should the society survive another month, it is doubtful whether or not there is a room in town sufficiently spacious to accommodate the multitude that assemble to listen to the sayings of the wiseacres that have of late been discovered in the "literary firmament."

Last Wednesday evening, some time before the hour for commencing the exercises came, the Methodist Church was occupied by as many persons as could be comfortably seated. When the hour arrived, the house was called to order by the President, and the following pieces of music were performed by those to whom this part of the programme is assigned: "Merrily on We Go," and "Leaf by Leaf the Roses Fall."

After this the regular order of business was taken up. Of this, the most important was about a half-score of amendments which were offered to the constitution. Several of the members displayed their ability as constitutional lawyers, after which the society got down to business, and commenced tabling everything that came before it, and only by the generalship of the President was the programme for the evening saved from a premature death at the hands of the triumphant "tablers." The society, it seems, has resolved to table all proposed amendments to said compact, and, if the proposer escape being kicked under the table afterward, he may congratulate himself.

The question for discussion was, "Affirmed, that woman should have the same civil and political rights as man."

Miss Carrie Winston, Mrs. John Craven and Mr. Wm. M. Conner officiated as Judges.

The affirmative argued that the theory of the negative was bound to be the same as that held by the most heathen nations of antiquity when they assumed women were so far inferior to man that they were entitled to no privileges, and scarcely the respect of man, and when they were treated as slaves, without enjoyment and no hope of a world to come; that, as man had advanced in enlightenment and knowledge, woman was permitted to enjoy greater privileges, as a matter of favor, resting on man's high respect and magnanimity, but no actual increase of her rights were recognized; that the higher liberty she now enjoys is solely of the favor and grace of man; that the theory of the affirmative rests upon the principles of eternal right and justice, recognizing the original equality of man, as first boldly announced in the Declaration of American Independence, drafted by Thos. Jefferson, the greatest statesman of America, and perhaps of the world. This paper declared the whole human family, male and female, free and equal, and was indorsed by the Franklins, the Adamses and the whole Congress, and defended by the soldiers of the Revolutionary War; and upon these truths was American independence gained. Taxation without representation and denial of the right of representation are two things alone that leaves woman at the mercy of the sovereign man. The rights of property are now really denied woman, the law-making power being in man's hand, as well as is the whole power of government. Marriage gives all the wife's personal property to her husband, and none of his to her, and the law as to her real estate is fully as unjust. What woman must have is a full recognition and guarantee of political rights—to vote and hold office, the same right that man has to go to the fountain head of political power and give her vote and influence as one of the sovereigns of the land in making and unmaking laws—without those rights she is simply a creature whose enjoyments of life, liberty and property are at man's mercy. That ladies being allowed to vote would prevent drunken broils and disputes at the polls, and their refining influence would purify the ballot-box, and the result of the elections be more in accordance with the honest sentiment of the masses; that they would feel more interest in political affairs, read more and post themselves better in all matters of interest, and become more enlightened, so that when they meet they could indulge in more important conversation than neighborhood gossip, and thus chase Mother Grundy's mouth; that the refining influence of woman is acknowledged wherever she goes, and man, without her society becomes a brute—a truth well established and in accordance with man's nature.

The negative argument was that the first argument on behalf of the affirmative finally placed woman in a very favorable position, because it shows that as man advanced in light and knowledge, even so has woman; that she has not been kept in obscurity, but allowed all the light her attitude in society requires; that to allow ladies the privilege of voting would result in degrading, and not in elevating them; that men would lose all their chivalry for woman so soon as she commences figuring in political contests, and demand that she should stand on her own strength and look to them no longer for protection; that woman is ruler of the household, and the idea that she could engage in the canvass of any section is a false and unreasonable one. Were women allowed to vote, intimidations (of the broomstick order) would be greatly increased. The position that women are taxed without representation is not correct, inasmuch as the law recognizes man and wife as one, therefore their interest is common, and man's vote is cast for her interest, the same as for his. Suffrage based upon property qualifications would result in a general revolution of suffrage, besides disfranchising a large portion of both sexes who own no property; that a man on that plan might own twice as much property as his wife, and therefore have two votes while she has but one; that arguments favoring such laws are in opposition to society—that which law proposes to protect; that in the first account we have of man he appears as a ruler—told that he was created in the image of a Ruler and given dominion over the world and all things therein, and that he still occupies the position given him by his Creator. The fact that woman, for the last 6,000 years, has occupied the same position in society is a strong proof that she is in her proper sphere—the one which her every day life demonstrates as the one the better adapted to her nature.

The affirmative was victorious.

Personal Mention.

Mr. Geo. McKenzie, of St. Louis, Mo., is visiting his parents at this place.

Miss Annie Bruce, of Walton, was visiting Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Bruce, of this place, last week.

Judge McKee, of Covington, was in town this week. We understand the Judge is to be turned loose upon the Bounty Fund case.

J. Frank Grant, of Petersburg, gave our town a flying visit last Tuesday. Frank reports business at his headquarters as "rushing."

It may be well, after a certain young man not a thousand miles from this office reads the following item, which is taken from the Glencoe correspondence in the Owen News, for his parents to keep an eye on him:

Miss Mattie Brown, formerly of Burlington, Boone County, now of Illinois, is visiting relatives in this vicinity. She is quite a pleasant lady, and will soon acquire a host of friends.

The correspondent to the Owen News from Liberty Station says:

Our new proprietor of the Eagle Valley House has arrived, and to-day will go to Carrollton, our county seat, for license. We need not say that it was with reluctance that we lose our late landlord, Mr. Garvey, but, from the appropriate manner in which Mr. J. O. Campbell, his successor, has been rearranging, refitting and renovating things, we are under the impression that Garvey's exit leaves us none the less off, but has been the prolific result of our town securing a landlord who is a prince of landlords—Mr. J. O. Campbell, of Big Bone Springs.

Died.

CALVERT—On the night of the 12th inst., after a protracted period of feebleness, Mrs. Calvert, widow of the late James Calvert.

On Thursday afternoon of last week Mrs. Calvert received two falls, from the effects of which she suffered considerably, and seemed to sink gradually till her death. It has been but a few months since her husband was buried, having been gradually declining for some time previous to his death, as did also Mrs. Calvert. The children and connections of Mrs. Calvert have the sympathies of the entire community in their bereavement.

Monday morning, as Jerry Blythe and Chasteen Fowler were going to town, their horse took fright near what is known as the Five-Mile House, on the Lexington pike, flew the track, upset the buggy, threw out Jerry and Chasteen, and commenced running and kicking. He kicked out of the shafts and ran near a mile before being stopped. The buggy and harness were considerably damaged, but the two men miraculously escaped without serious injury.

Bachelordom has lost one more of its worthy inhabitants, viz., W. W. Grimsley, of Big Bone. Last Tuesday, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 10 p. m., he committed matrimony by leading to the hymenial altar Miss Sallie A. Baker, daughter of Steward Baker. May their path along the journey of life be strewn with happiness, contentment and prosperity.

The second mission of the Assessor a few days since, caused a flurry among the dogs and created a suspicion that all is not exactly right, and that a little bulldozing might take place at any time. Pursuant to a call by Old Ring, Chairman of the Oriental Blood Suckers, a general indignation meeting was held by the dogs of the neighborhood, and the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, In view of the present tax that is levied on each mule head of our race, we are in favor of going behind the returns and declaring the result unconstitutional as well as fraudulent.

And Whereas, The beauty of our race is so enormously taxed that long-wool democracy is no longer compatible with the common curs interest; therefore be it

Resolved, That if the tax is collected from the members of the meeting, the shot-gun policy must be one of the things of the past.

Petersburg.

A party of young folks, who attended a party at Captain Geo. Terrill's, last Saturday night, saw fit to infest this town on a tour of inspection the same evening. An extensive dash was made, and the party came to grief. One of their buggies still decorates the landing in front of the blacksmith shop, where it was laid up for repairs.

Mr. John Hurd was married last week to a young lady of Covington. They made their bridal tour on the Minnie to this town. The rag-tag-and-bob-tail of the Brimstone Brigade, led on and instigated by the indecent motive that pervades their breasts, piled into an old cart, drawn by a mule, and escorted the couple from the boat to Mr. Hurd's home by hoots, yells and such other demonstrations as would disgrace a community of savages.

A wagon load of gentlemen attended the dancing party at the Grange Hall near Hebron, one night last week. It was one of the parties where "we don't go home till morning," and the party looked like it when they did come home at 5 o'clock in the morning, all red-eyed and sleepy, and one of them minus his new hat, and carrying his weary head carefully done up in a handkerchief. He is a practical blacksmith and keeps a shop for J. Frank Grant, but as yet he has not struck a balance in his account of Fun and Expense to see how he stands with his last adventure.

Last Sunday night a prominent member of the Lyceum took a young lady to church, got there late, house crowded to suffocation, only two seats vacant, i. e., the two immense, high-backed, hair-seat chairs away up in the pulpit. Not in the slightest degree did our hero show a sign of wavering, but, disengaging himself from his help for an instant, he marched up into the pulpit, captured about 500 pounds of furniture, carried it down to the floor, and comfortably and prominently seated his lady and self, to the unspeakable amazement of the whole house. That young man is a worthy subject for membership on the "National Returning Board," where cheek is at a premium.

The numerous friends of the ex-Sheriff hereabouts are congratulating themselves on the ability he displayed as a public speaker at the last meeting of the Literary Society of the Recorder city. Of course, the report of the speech is a verbal one, so far, and now we anxiously await the next edition of the Recorder for a full report. As he was not a champion of the ladies' defense, they are all saying, "I told you so."

The lecture on Odd-Fellowship by Rev. W. S. Keene, last Thursday night, was a grand success, if a crowded house and attentive audience are indications of success. Many members from Aurora and Lawrenceburg lodges were present, besides four welcome members of Venus Lodge at Florence. Bro. Porter was chairman of the Committee on Arrangements, and that means that arrangements were complete.

A little son of Captain Fenton, while playing with other small boys in a skiff, on Sunday, fell into the river and would have been drowned but for the prompt assistance of Mr. B. Bradley, of the steamer Water Witch, who jumped in, and, seizing the little fellow, swam safely to shore. The only thing to be wondered at, by way of moral to the story, is that a half dozen or so are not drowned every week, as about three-fourths of the boys in town are raised on the river, without any special guardianship.

SCOTT COUNTY.

Georgetown.

Rev. L. B. Woolfolk, of Lexington, by invitation of the two Societies connected with the College, delivered, on Friday night the 19th of January, his famous address on his new "Wind Theory." Old Professor Farnum, whose word upon a question of a scientific nature is almost regarded as law, and who is, indeed, one of the most learned scientists in the land, took strong issue with Dr. Woolfolk, objecting the premise upon which the Dr. based all his arguments. After most of the audience had retired from the church they "locked horns," and had animated discussion, during which time a challenge was passed to discuss the question publicly. Dr. Woolfolk proposing to discuss it either in print or orally, and Farnum proposing to discuss it orally at any place and time. Dr. W. stated that wind has more to do with the climate than either latitude or season; and the original premise upon which he based most of his arguments, is that the Polar winds blow more upon the surface of the earth and the Equatorial or warm winds move above the Polar current of wind, and such being the case it would only be necessary to contrive some machinery by which a vacuum could be continually kept in the cold Polar currents through which warm southern winds would continually sweep over the land and clothe the country in perpetual spring, and as the Dr. himself said, cause the "desert to blossom as the rose." He said that cannon could be used to effect this end, and that by the explosion of every cubic foot of powder four thousand cubic feet of gas would be formed, which would press upward and form a vacuum through which the warm winds could come down. Dr. Farnum objected to his statement that the Polar currents flow on the surface of the earth saying, that Meteorology teaches just the reverse. Whether the two learned men will get together and "fight it out," remains to be seen, but if Dr. W.'s theory proves a practical truth, as he confidently believes it will, his fame will, perhaps, excel that of Galileo or Sir Isaac Newton.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

BURLINGTON, KY., FERRUARY 15.

BOTH SIDES.

A man in his carriage was riding along,
A gaily dressed wife by his side;
In satin and laces she looked like the queen,
And he like a king in his pride.

A wood-sawyer stood in the street as they passed;
The carriage and couple he eyed;
And said, as he worked with his saw on a log,
"I wish I was rich and could ride."

The man in the carriage remarked to his wife,
"One thing I would give if I could—
I'd give my wealth for the strength and the health
Of the man who sawed the wood."

A pretty young maid, with a bundle of work,
Whose face, as the morning, was fair,
Went tripping along with a smile of delight,
While humming a love-breathing air.

She looked on the carriage; the lady she saw,
Arrayed in apparel so fine,
And said in a whisper, "I wish from my heart
Those satins and laces were mine."

The lady looked out on the maid with her work,
So fair in her calico dress,
And said, "I'd relinquish position and wealth,
Her beauty and youth to possess."

Thus it is in the world, whatever our lot,
Our minds and our time we employ
In longing and sighing for what we have not,
Ungrateful for what we enjoy.

Battle of the Bees.

According to a writer in the Augusta (Ga.) Constitutionalist, bees are disposed to rob each other's hives, and to fight for the booty. They don't know what fear is, and will fight anything. Sometimes a swarm gets out of honey, or finds it supply will not last through the winter. Then it makes a raid on the nearest hive, and a battle ensues. The correspondent thus describes a battle between a swarm of Italian bees and an American one:

A party of these robbers came and set in one of my Italian hives the other day. A good many of my Italian bees were out gathering honey, and the marauders effected a lodging on my hive, and fought their way inside the hive, though the home-guards of the Italians fought with desperation, and contested every inch of ground. A regular hand-to-hand Waterloo. A tempest of short, shrill notes and hoarser hums (the war-cries of the combatants) were heard fifty yards.

The fight is strictly hand-to-hand. An Italian bee throws himself in front of an American bee to stop his progress. Two or three little Americans throw themselves with blind fury upon the gigantic foreigner, and nip him with their sharp, snapping beaks in a thousand places. The object with him seems to be to catch them by the tip of the wing, and give them a twist which breaks or splits it, and deprives him of the power of flying. It is then easy for the Italian to bounce him and finish him up.

The robbers have just about fought their way into the honey-cells when the tide of the battle begins raging. A great many of the Italians have come in from their honey hunt, and seeing in a moment how the thing is, and, being fresh and vigorous, literally cut their way through the ranks of the little Americans. Enough of these have come to turn the fortune of the fight.

The defeat never becomes a rout, though. Though thousands of the soldiers are slain, the balance continue the fight till all are dead except a few dozens of them. They still wage the arrogant war, being determined on "honey or death," and they will struggle till the last one is slain. Then, without a moment's rest, the Italians run into the mass of dead and dying, and commence carrying the dead out of the hive. I came to their help, and actually took over two quarts of dead bees out of the hive, and the Italians retired to dress their wounds and discuss the combat. I never saw such a desperate fight in my life.

When to Prune Fruit Trees.

Long experience shows that when it is desirable to produce a free growth of shoots and leaves, pruning should be done when the trees are dormant, as in the winter season, or early in the spring, before the sap begins to flow. When fruit trees appear to grow too rapidly, and to produce too much wood, they may be pruned moderately in the summer season, cutting away a portion of the wood by degrees; but a shoot growing in an improper place may be cut away at any time. An experiment made by pruning apple trees every month in the year, for two seasons, shows that the wounds cut in the branches in February and March, at the end of five years, when all had healed over, were found to be the least decayed under the healed surface. When trees are pruned in winter, or, I may say at any time, it is best to cover the wound with a mixture of tar and pulverized brick dust, or fine sand. A solution of shellac in alcohol, as thick as can easily be applied with a brush, is considered by many as the best preparation that can be applied.

During the mild days of winter orchards may be pruned—while little else can be done; but good judgment should be exercised in regard to selecting the branches to be cut away. It is ruinous to an orchard to cut and slash away one-third to one-half the limbs. All that should be done is to give the trees a good shape, and only the few unsightly branches, and those improperly situated, should be cut away.—Rural New Yorker.

Fence Posts Top End Down.

A study of vegetable physiology led me to try several experiments, many years ago, to throw light upon this question. The sap of moisture goes up in the sap-wood from the roots to the leaves of the trees. I find if the post is butt-end down, the pores are open upward, and water can go up, and thus keep the post moist between wind and water, which must cause a rapid decay. It appeared probably that the pores were open only upward and not downward in the tree. To test this, I cut a small maple sapling, (two inches through,) in May, leaving the limbs all on, and placed the butt-end in a pail of brine. In thirty-six hours the leaves were saturted with this brine, the taste of the salt being strong.

At the same time I had cut another maple sapling, and cut off the top branch, leaving the rest of the limbs on. After winding a cloth around the butt-end, to prevent evaporation, I placed the top end in a small pail of brine, and allowed it to remain several days, but no brine had been absorbed at the top end. It had not penetrated the pores as far as the end was immersed in the brine, for if the bark was scraped, there was not the slightest taste of salt to be found. This being the case in the green tree, how much more must the pores of the dry tree be closed from the top end downward? I have tried many similar experiments, and think the question settled that if a post is placed top end down, no moisture can ascend from the bottom of the hole up the post to rot it; but when the butt-end is down, the moisture can ascend the pores very rapidly if green and very slowly if dry. Seasoned posts are found to last much longer, because the pores are more or less filled within the seasoned wood. I should also infer that placing the top end down would make more difference in a green post than in a dry one. In pursuance of the fact that the pores of green timber have been often saturated with different solutions to preserve it, by immersing the butt-end, freshly cut, in the solution to be absorbed, it will also be noted that burning or charring the posts only closes the pores and prevents the absorption of water.—E. W. S. in Country Gentleman.

Coming Back.

You are coming back soon? Yes, coming back. But who ever came and found things unchanged? Stray along the streets of your native town, you will find a change. Here and there a house missing or a new one in its place. Wander out to the old farm-house, embowered in green trees and with rose bushes. Do you not miss a tree here and a rosebush there, the flower beds altered? Enter the house, sit down in the family room. Find you it changed? Ah, yes! There is a picture missing from the wall, a sweet face from the household band; all things are changed and you most of all. Call up before you the forms and faces of those you loved in the beautiful past. Can you succeed? Ah, no! 'tis a pale phantom you hug to your breast. Was it wise in you, this coming back? Nothing on this earth can make up the separation between those we love. They may meet you again, but they can never be as they were; there is a void, a change somewhere. Long absence, like a misfortune, has within itself a recoiling power. You may go away poor and unknown, and come back with the wealth of fame upon your brow, the golden bowl of fortune in your grasp and the honors of the world resting on you; but the power to enjoy your laurels may have perished and all that would have made it sweet turned into bitterness and blight! Alas, you have lost more than you have gained!

"What matters it if man gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" There are more soul losses besides that of intemperance; losses which no earthly prosperity ever can make up; losses made more melancholy than any wreck of material fortune; and it is these losses when make "coming back" so sad a thing.

To Save Plums from Curculio.

As you want knowledge from those who have had experience and have succeeded, I will give, not my experiments, but the final and successful one to preserve the plum the curculio, namely: In the spring, when the trees begin to bloom, smoke the trees (with old rags or leather, or any old rubbish that is worthless lying around) in the morning, when the dew is on, if it can be done with safety. Don't trust to careless persons if there is a probability of destroying valuable property. Also, clean the ground around the trees of all grass, &c., that could hinder the sweeping up of all the plums that fall from the tree or trees. When the stung plums are gathered, throw them into the fire or to the hogs. Do this as often as every third day, and that will be the end of these. A little boy or girl can do this part. If left on the ground they will soon pass into the earth and then mature, rise and multiply the crop of destroyers. By constant watchfulness through the season, you will have a splendid crop of fruit. Sisters Ceres, Pomona and Flora and Matrons, try it faithfully, and next September give your name or initials to the Grange Bulletin, for I should like like to know the result, as I have never failed. My trees would have killed themselves bearing if the curculio had not taken some. The smoking process should continue until the blossoms have all fallen off, or longer if you like. Now, sisters, sing out to Mr. Husbandman to bring on the sugar.

By Accident.

Many of the most useful inventions have been the result of accident. The reflecting apparatus for lighthouses arose out of a wager, if the facts are correctly recorded. Somewhat more than a century ago, some one in Liverpool offered to wager that he would read a newspaper by the light of a farthing candle placed ten yards or thirty feet distant. The wager being accepted, he coated the inside of a wooden barrel with pieces of looking-glass, forming a rough substitute for a concave mirror, placing a small lighted candle in front of this mirror, the rays of light were reflected, and converged to a focus ten yards on the other side of the candle, and the light at that focus was sufficient to enable the experimenter to read a newspaper. An observant, practical man was present. The idea flashed upon him that, if the light of a farthing candle could in this way be thrown out to a distance, the light of a large lamp could similarly be projected to a mile or miles away. The idea grew into form, and resulted in the invention of the reflecting apparatus for lighthouses. While some snuff was under the drying process, it was allowed to become charred. Some one noticed the pugnant character of snuff, and how it tickled the nose, and knowing that some men liked to have the nose tickled more than others, he resolved to try whether high-dried snuff could be brought into favor. It not only did so, but proved a source of wealth to him. A diagonal pattern was first printed on calico by accident. Cheap pottery is due to the carelessness of a servant girl, who, while heating a strong solution of common salt, allowed the liquid to boil over. An enamel was thus formed on the out side which did not wash off, and the humble brown ware vessel acquired historical celebrity. A Barslem potter, learning what had taken place, saw that glazed ware might possibly hit the taste of the public; he introduced the system of glazing by means of common salt, a system at once cheap, easy, and durable; and England has made many a million pounds sterling by the accidental discovery. The inventor of a combing machine for long staple cotton gleaned his first crude ideas on the subject by watching his daughters comb their hair. Thus, in ways perfectly simple, has budding genius received encouragement, and the world profit from its growth.

Fast Walking Horses.

It has been shown in these columns that the production of thoroughbred and trotting horses has been largely in excess of the death rate; that as a necessary sequence the stock in the country is increasing from year to year, and that unless a foreign demand be created prices must inevitably decline. Breeders should therefore turn their attention more to the production of fast walking horses, both for the saddle and general draught. The business would pay handsomely, for the utility and value of such horses would soon be properly appreciated, thus creating a steady demand, which would not likely be diminished, for the next half century at least. On the farm a slow walking horse does not do half the work that a rapid walker is able to accomplish. In towns and cities where draught horses are used in the truck, cart, dray, &c., it is the same; not half the work is performed by the slow walker who crawls along at a snail's pace, and, when drawing a load cannot be galvanized into rapid motion. As a traveler, under saddle and in harness, the slow walker is a nuisance. No matter what work he is engaged in, time and money are lost to his owner every day he lives.

Hard Times.

In all our large cities there are thousands of men and women thrown out of employment. If discontented farmers, farmer's wives, sons and daughters, who think the delights of city life something worth realizing, could walk through the streets to-day and read the one-thousandth part of the misery and apprehension that haunt the heart of all classes and are making lines on their faces, they would thank God for the seclusion and abundance gathered in the garners of their homes. Few working men save money—particularly the working girls, who, as a class spend half their income for dress. Young men flock the streets with restless, eager, anxious eyes, with lips quivering with fear lest they fail to obtain employment. Boys and girls of the country, be grateful for plenty and shelter. You will, perhaps, never know how to value it until you want and can't get either. How many of these in the city are country-born; and how many would gladly go back the homstead for refuge? Yet many have not the means t get there. Farmers, thank God for the harvest, and that you have unsold food for your families. Your lot is a happy one!

When and How to Eat Fruit.

When fruit does harm it is because it is eaten at improper times, in improper quantities, or before ripened and fit for the human stomach. A distinguished physician has said that if his patients would make a practice of eating a couple of good oranges before breakfast, from February to June, his practice would be gone. The principal evil is that we do not eat enough fruit; that we injure its finer qualities with sugar; that we drown them in cream. We need the medicinal action of the pure fruit acids in our system, and their cooling, corrective influence.—Medical Journal.

THE LOUISVILLE COMMERCIAL is by far the ablest political journal published in the South.—Alabama State Journal.

THE LOUISVILLE COMMERCIAL,

Published daily (except Monday) and weekly, by the Louisville Commercial Co., is regarded as the

LEADING REPUBLICAN NEWSPAPER OF THE SOUTHWEST.

IT purposes in the future to follow, with increased vigor and truthfulness, the course marked out in the past—an earnest, truthful and fair-minded support of what it believes to be good in Republicanism, and an unsparing criticism of what it conceives to be wrong, in or out of the Republican organization. But the chief purpose of THE COMMERCIAL is to furnish a really good general daily newspaper at a price within the Reach of the Masses of the People.

To this end it will bring its very best energies, backed by a material improvement in its methods, resources and equipment. Everything possible will be done to provide a

First-Class Paper at Second-Class Prices.

The Daily Commercial,

A large sheet of forty-eight columns, in neat and convenient quarto form, is furnished, postage prepaid, at the following rates:

Per year, $10. Per month, 85c.

To meet the wants of remote country subscribers we will send

Five Copies, One Year, postpaid, for $44
Ten Copies, One Year, postpaid, for 80

☞ To secure this special rate, which makes THE COMMERCIAL the cheapest first-class daily newspaper in the country, the names and money for the complete club must be sent at one time. No paper sent by mail until paid for.

The Weekly Commercial

Is confidently recommended as equal to any similar paper in the United States. It is a neat and pretty quarto in form, having eight six-column pages, printed on good paper, on large, plain type, and one of the most attractive papers in the world.

It is Republican in principle, but thoroughly independent, fair and frank, uncontrolled by the commands of men, cliques or party.

It has the best and brightest of short and continued stories.

Its editorial discussion is live, able, earnest and candid.

It gives all the telegraphic and general news, home and foreign, and full Congressional reports during the session.

Its miscellaneous selections are always choice and attractive.

It gives the fullest and always reliable market and financial reports from every great commercial center.

Its agricultural department is carefully edited for practical farmers.

It has a "Household" department, designed expressly for housekeepers, and always full of practical suggestions, queries for answers, valuable recipes, etc., worth the price of a year's subscription every week.

Its advertising space is closely limited, and will be still further reduced on expiration of existing contracts, so as to give the greatest allowance for reading matter.

It is furnished at the following prices:

Single Copies, One Year, postpaid, $2 00
In Clubs of Five to Ten, each copy, 1 60
In Clubs of Ten or more, each copy, 1 50

THE MAMMOTHS' GRAVEYARD.

From the Owensboro Examiner.

The following description has been written out by the request of Prof. F. W. Putnam, of the Peabody Academy of Science, Salem, Massachusetts; but as this great natural treasure belongs to Kentucky, it should first be made known to Kentucky, where it is least known. As there is but one graveyard of the huge mammoth and gigantic mastodon on this globe, it is, with its attending mysteries, one of the greatest curiosities in the world, and as yet has never been made known to the world, except that there is a place where big bones are found, affording no knowledge of the vast accumulation and kind of bones, or how buried and preserved.

Big Bone Lick is in Boone County, Ky., and two miles in the interior from the village of Warsaw, a boat landing on the Ohio River, and is a perfectly level plat of ground, encircled by a number of hills from three to five hundred feet high, the imprisoned space containing some ten acres of a once marshy and quicksand earth, that swallowed thousands of animals that ventured into this valley of death to drink the salt water; and the wax-like clay has hermetically sealed them from the warring elements without, till their bones are there found of perfect flint, with opalized and agatized teeth of thousands of years' mineralization. The bone-bed is from ten to twelve feet beneath the surface, where vast quantities of bones of all animals that inhabited the country are to be found, with buffaloes' heads and horns well preserved. In my excavations we often came to piles of what I thought were collections of yellow, soft sand; but, seeing the old diggers rubbing it between their hands till warm, and smelling it with a grin and a leer of the eye that said to me you are green, I found it to be decayed flesh that still had the odor, as dogs around the pit would smell and scratch into it. In the bottom of this basin (for a large earthen basin it is) there bubble up a great many salt-sulphur springs, and, flowing off gently over a level surface, make a deposit of purely white and glittering sulphur, so odorous that the whole atmosphere of the valley is saturated with it. The earth in this basin, once swimming water, was so much like a bowl of jelly that a man could stand and shake an acre around him, and yet in places annually getting more solid by deposits. I shook more than twenty feet around me, and in these soft places you can not dig without a pump to relieve you of the percolating water. The earth has been so long saturated with salt and sulphur that it is beautifully streaked with blue and yellow, cuts smooth like cheese, and when dry bears a glittering polish, and I think it would make fine pottery or queensware, and this I name, not only as a thing unknown elsewhere, but that it may lead to investigation and prove valuable. Old persons, who have lived fifty and sixty years in the neighborhood, say that the whole valley was denuded of vegetation, and from a distance looked like a frozen pond of water, and portions of it yet remain so, the surface for rods around being naked, smooth and shining as the face of a mirror, and, like a gum-elastic bag or foot-ball blown up, will sink under the foot and tremble around, and yet neither break through nor soil your boots—alarming, indeed, to a stranger, yet perfectly safe to travel over.

I dug upon these grounds for thirty days, with ten men, and brought off seven barrels of bones, a number of buffalo heads, and both mammoth and mastodon molars, but found no very large bones or tusks (but had nine feet of a fourteen-foot tusk given me by Mr. McLaughlin, proprietor), and left upon the ground a cart load of bones of various animals. The bone-bed is from ten to twelve feet beneath the present surface of the ground. I say present, because the valley, having recently sunk, is annually inundated, till there is a deposit of several feet over the original earth. In sinking one of our pits, we came to a regularly built furnace, six feet under ground, and took up the pipes, partly decayed, that conducted the water from the main spring to the furnace, where salt was made nearly a hundred years ago. I will say to those who may wish to search for those ancient remains that, when they come to a head, rib, or any other bone of an animal, they can not expect, as I did, to find the entire skeleton; and my reason for the fact is that the wolves, bears and wild-cats (the remains of which I found) dragged the dislocated parts about, and that the deposits, as above named, covered them where they lay. And now I will say that this brings us to one of the unwritten and unsolved mysteries of Big Bone Lick. What caused this valley to sink?—as it certainly has, else why these recent inundations, that have deposited six feet of earth over the original surface, as shown by the discovery of the furnace and confirmed by the old inhabitants, who say that the inundations and filling up commenced about fifty years ago, previous to which it was well drained by a creek that ran through it. This depression has been not less than ten feet, there being six feet of made earth, above which the water stands, for a time, from four to five feet, leaving, as I saw, large piles of drift upon the flat. A further proof of all this is that, on the first discovery of the place, the bones lay so thick upon the then primitive earth, where solid, that the foot could not reach it for bones piled upon bones, that now constitute the bone-bed of six feet beneath, whereas in the hog spots the bone-bed is twelve feet. The largest excavation I made was at the furnace, where, six feet deep and upon the level of it, the bones were as thick as autumn leaves, while in other localities they were less abundant and from ten to twelve feet under the present surface, as above named, showing that this basin, though level in bottom, had hard spots, like islands in a pond of water, where some of these remains are found upon that level, and others six feet deeper, where they sank into the water—marshy, muddy, swampy, boggy spots immediately around the bubbling water.

The first white man who ever saw this place was James Douglass, of Missouri, in 1773, who reported the bones to be so thick upon the ground that he could walk upon them—teeth of ten pounds weight, tusks eleven feet long, thigh bones and ribs ten, which he used for tent poles, all being sound and firm; and Mr. Thos. Rich, who was born in sight of the Lick sixty-eight years ago (and who was one of my hands), told me that when a boy he often passed over creeks and ditches on bridges made of these huge bones. The first shipment made of these remains was by Dr. Goforth, who in 1803 loaded a flatboat with them and sent them by an English agent to England, where they are now to be seen in the British Museum. The news having spread of the great wonder, President Thomas Jefferson, then President of the American Philosophical Society, had a collection made in the year 1805, a portion of which he donated to the French naturalist, Cuvier; and in 1819 a third collection was made by the Western Museum Society; and the fourth collection was made by Mr. Finnell and sold to Mr. Graves for $2,000, which he took North and sold for $5,000. In the year 1833 Thomas Rich, as above named, who dug for me, was foreman in excavating for an agent of New York, and exhumed a gigantic skeleton, twenty-two feet long and eleven feet high, with tusks twelve feet long, all of which are now in the Kentucky Department of the British Museum, in London. Mr. Rich told me that he also disinterred, during the same digging, the skeleton of an elk whose horns were seven feet long, since which he has been digging for various parties, among whom was Mr. Shaler, our present geologist of Kentucky, but never found an entire skeleton of any kind; and I, to save money to those who may wish to search, say that I am satisfied there never will be another found. I obtained petrified horns of both deer and elk, but not very large.

And now, these sound bones found upon the surface of the earth in 1773, strong enough to make tent-poles and bridges, afford a key to the living age of these extinct animals, that has ever been a matter of conjecture with the scientific world. That bones, as well as wood, may be preserved for a great length of time sunk far beneath the earth is well known, and that they will last but a short time on the surface is equally well known; and I will say that, in the latter condition, they would not last more than a century, and more probably not more than from thirty to fifty years; so that this key of Big Bone Lick (never before or elsewhere found) unlocks the mystery and shows to a certainty that these now extinct giants might have been seen stalking through the forest like moving mountains, with their fearful tusks, glaring eyes and heads of a thousand pounds, but a short time before the discovery of their remains. I say that this philosophic key of the puzzled world was never known till found on Big Bone Lick, for no such undecayed bones were ever before found near the surface on any part of this globe. By way of information for those who may hereafter wish to search for these hidden treasures, that any number of faithful laborers may be found in the neighborhood who will furnish their own tools, board themselves and work for one dollar per day; but I will further make known that no permission, in my opinion, will hereafter be given to dig upon these grounds. The land is owned by three proprietors—Mr. McLaughlin, owner of the hotel, ample for two hundred visitors; Mr. Moore, and the county of Boone, and Major T. D. Carneal, once a prominent citizen of Cincinnati, owning the Lick and a large body of land around it, deeded to the county of Boone two acres, including the largest spring, and to my application for the privilege to search (though in the name of Louisville and the Free Museum of Kentucky), the Magistrates unanimously rejected my petition. Having, however, gotten ready to dig, thinking those "surly dogs in the manger" could not refuse to let me, at my own expense, bring to light these hidden treasures, that otherwise will remain forever unknown, I went to work, looking every hour for the Sheriff with his warrant for trespass, but come he did not. The other owners, at first, also firmly refused, saying that persons had been there from Europe, as well as from all parts of the Union, tearing up the ground, which, by recent deposits, had become a rich and valuable garden spot, but who subsequently granted a limited search.

I am sorry to say that our people in Kentucky are not yet sufficiently cultivated to appreciate anything but the almighty dollar and the driveling and veering petty things of fashion and art, and have let their rich treasures of nature go off to other countries, unobserved and uncared for; and moreover, that the labors of a man who is building up a monument of future fame for them, at his own expense, is unthanked for. Another remarkable feature of the Mammoths' Graveyard is the singular trees adjacent, with bodies as large as the tallest trees in the forest, and with greatly larger tops, and yet not half as tall, called by the inhabitants the Mammoth's tree, having been kept down, as they think, by those browsing beasts, and, from personal observation, I am convinced of the fact. In my desire to make known to strangers, as well as to our own people, all about this wonderful rendezvous, city and cemetery of a race of beings that have gone out of existence, and the search for whose remains being greatly more interesting that the excavations at Pompeii and Herculaneum for petty pottery, I have necessarily been somewhat tedious. And now, in fine, I must give the Scripture account of the death and remains of these animals, given by a good old churchman, who interviewed me on the subject. To save trouble and time I told him I knew nothing about it. "Well," said he, "I know all about it. These beasts was too big for the Ark, and, being left out, they was drowned, and the flood washed them in here; and that, now, you can see is reasonable, and, of course, there was none left to breed from." "That is all reasonable," I replied. "Well," continued the old man, "I am glad you are a Christian; and now let me tell you, a man come to dig, all the way from what they call Harbard College, and they sed he were a geolergirst named Shaler, and when I told him what I tell you, he sorter turned up his nose and sed he didn't believe it. 'Well, sed I, 'how did them bones come here?' 'The beasts,' sed he, 'brought them here with them when they come and left them here when they died.' And now, let me tell you, I don't think much of them science men nohow, for I don't think they believe in Scripture, and they tell me there is a man named Darwin who says we come from monkeys, instead of Adam as the Scripture tells us." Having forgotten to give my views in regard to the sinking of the valley, I will premise that geology has discovered parts of our globe where large tracts of land are imperceptibly sinking, and others as slowly rising, from unknown causes; but in the present case I will suggest the cause to be the melting down of the foundation of the valley, that must be composed of salt and sulphur, which, by affording the perpetual flow of numerous springs, must as certainly waste away as that any portion taken from the whole leaves the whole less.

C. C. GRAHAM, M. D.

Mumford's Pavement.

Some person accidently upset a bucket of water on Mumford's pavement one of these snapping cold evenings, and Jack Frost slipping along soon after, transformed it into a sheet of glistening, bone-breaking ice.

Mumford, wholly unconscious of the pitfall in front of his door, had just taken his seat at the basement window, when a stout old gentleman came along, carrying a half-peck of cranberries tied up in brown paper, and softly humming to himself:

"I wish'd I was a turtle-dove,
I wish'd I was a sparrow,
I'd fly away to Je—ru—salem!"

he exclaimed, as his legs spread themselves suddenly apart. A frightened, dazed look crept into his eyes, and a moment later he had busted the suspender buttons off his pantaloons and hopelessly ruined a new eight-dollar silk hat, trying to butt a barrel of ashes into the gutter, while the air in that vicinity was filled with blue profanity and red cranberries.

Owing to the thermometer being one flight of stairs below Zero, and the old gentleman not having a calcium light in his vest pocket, he concluded not to pick up the $8,000-and-odd scattered cranberries, but contented himself by shaking his fist violently in Mumford's direction and yelling as he moved away:

"I can tick the stuffing out of a hall cart-load of such 'smartys as you!"

"Mercy, what a funny old gentleman! first he falls down, and then he jumps up and blames me for it," remarked Mumford to his wife, who was sitting by the light, sewing.

He can't to this hour recollect what reply his wife made, his whole attention being suddenly riveted upon a very tall, thin woman, with a long nose and a big bustle, who was dragging a fat, dumpling-built little boy along by the hand. She had reached about the same spot where the old gentleman a moment before had been performing, when she stopped suddenly, clutched wildly at vacancy, tried to kick her bonnet off, missed by a few of the shortest kind of inches, tripped up the little boy and sat down on him with a force that threatened to drive him through the earth to China.

The prompt use of the boy preserver saved her bones and bustle from destruction, but it flattened the sacrificing youth to the thickness of a Jack of Clubs in a euchre deck.

"Don't you grin at me, you nasty big baboon you!" she screamed, nodding her head at Mumford, while she groped around for her false teeth that had slipped out of her mouth in the confusion.

"She must certainly be drunk," soliloquized Mumford, watching her actions with amazement.

"If I was a man I'd skin you alive for this, you wretch!" she shouted, when she had got her teeth back, her bonnet on, and her bustle propped up.

"Drunk and a lunatic both. What have I got to do with her slamming herself around on the side-walk, I'd like to know?" he asked himself, as he watched her fading away in the darkness, with her flattened boy in tow.

A few moments later, as he was flattening his nose against the window-pane, a pair of lovers came tripping along.

"And, Amy, love," said the gentleman, "I can hardly realize that you are to be my own little darling, dicksey—Suffering alligator!" he shrieked, as his legs opened like a pair of compasses, and he struck the sidewalk with a jar that threatened his back teeth, raised his scalp an inch or two, cooled his love, ripped his best pantaloons, started his eyes full of tears, and made him regret bitterly that he'd forgot so much of his boyhood's profanity.

"O, Fred!" exclaimed his fiance, trying to lift him up by his paper collar, and, the next instant, his charmer's feet slipped on the ice, and after swaying to and fro violently for a moment, she attempted to turn a back summersault, which her lover did not look upon as a success, owing probably to the fact of her kicking him in the ear as she went over, with more the force of a yellow mule or a dynamite cartridge than that of the cardinal-stockinged idol of his heart.

They got up, glanced sheepishly around to see if anyone had noticed them, tried to coax up a sickly smile, and limped away trying to look as if they didn't want to rub themselves.

"Hang it all! why don't you sprinkle some ashes on that ice?" called a grocer who had skated off into the gutter and smashed two dozen eggs, the back of his head, and a bottle of olive oil, in falling.

"O! there's ice there; so that accounts for the gymnastics," said Mumford, filling the scuttle with hot coals and ashes and hurrying out.

Some of the neighbors who chanced to be looking out of their front windows about this time say that it was a grand and awe-inspiring sight to see Mumford, after remaining for a second on the back of his neck, pointing at the twinkling stars with his heels, and emptying his pockets out on the walk, suddenly collapse into a tangled, scorched and bruised heap, and fill the air with shrieks and more sparks than a fire works explosion would make.

A policeman helped his wife and the cook to carry him into the house, and he has informed the doctor who is attending him, that as soon as he can cultivate enough skin to cover the bumped places he's going to move to a climate where it don't freeze once in a billion years. His wife thinks she has read of such a place in the Bible.

LAST Thursday morning, the body of a young woman, half devoured by dogs, was found near Crawfordsville, Ind. The Coroner's inquest failed to give any clue of how she came to her death. The body was recognized by no one. The name Fredica Bodine was found written in several places on her clothes.

THE exceptions taken to the rulings of the Court in the trial, at Salt Lake City, of John D. Lee, the Mountain Meadow murderer, and to his sentence, have been overruled by the Supreme Court of the Territory, and another day for Lee's execution has been ordered.

AN attempt to assassinate Packard, in New Orleans, last week, is the latest stir in the political circles of that place. The Republicans pretend they think it was an effort on the part of the Democracy to put Packard out of the way. There is considerable mystery connected with the affair, but at the same time, anyone disposed to be in the least fairminded will readily conceive that it was not occasioned by a conspiracy on the part of the Democrats, who know that such a move would not lighten but greatly increase their political burden. The person guilty of the offense, to say the least, is a lunatic.

THAT we have too many pistols engaged in adjusting disputes in the country, and especially in this county, is a deplorable fact, which is attested by the frequent display of these peace makers (?), if not by bringing them into use. The practice of carrying concealed deadly weapons is one that has engaged the minds of our Legislatures session after session. They have enacted law after law looking to the wiping out of a practice which so often culminates in one of the highest crimes known to the law—taking a fellowman's life. But what does it amount to? The law is not enforced against those who have friends and money. The penalty which is best calculated to break up the offense, they invariably get clear of—we have reference to the imprisonment—and so long as this can be done, that portion of the law is of no use. Let the law be enforced against every individual who violates, not only in part, but entirely. If a person violates one part of the law, he violates the whole law, and should suffer the entire penalty. The juries before whom such cases are tried are often to blame for the intervention of the pardoning power. They say one moment that a party is guilty, and the next moment will sign a petition to the Governor to pardon the convicted party as to the imprisonment. Such proceedings are inconsistent, and just so long as this is practiced, just so long that portion of the law will be of no use. We see into what our county is rapidly drifting—shooting "scrapes" are rapidly increasing, and nothing but a rigorous enforcement of the law will check them. Give every party found guilty of carrying concealed weapons a full benefit of the penalty now prescribed, and if this is not sufficient have a still more severe penalty enacted. The carrying of pistols can be broken up and the sooner it is done the better for society.

THE Electoral Commission lost but little time in digesting the Louisiana case when brought before them. They soon decided to follow the programe in the Florida case, and not go behind the returns from Louisiana Mat Carpenter made a long and argumentative speech on behalf of the citizens of Louisiana, whom he considered the action of the Returning Board had disfranchised. Carpenter voted against Tilden, and said he would do so again; but, while he considered the inauguration of Tilden would be a great calamity to the country, he considered the inauguration of Hayes through fraud a much greater calamity. The decision of the tribunal was a crusher on the hopes of the Democracy, and wiped out all expectations of success at the hands of the Commission. Unnecessary delay in the action of Congress on the matter will not be attempted, and the Southern Democrats will commence perfecting the best arrangements concerning their State Governments possible. There will be a strong effort to have the Nicholls and Hampton governments recognized, as will also come from the other party an equally strong effort to have them dispersed, and their men put upon the throne of government in South Carolina and Louisiana.

MILTON SAYLER'S Investigating Committee that went to South Carolina to investigate the election, says: "Before South Carolina claims, through her Representatives, to help make laws for the people of her sister States, or, through her Electors to participate in the election of a President of the Republic, she ought in justice be held to the provisions of her Constitution to secure a just and honest election. That the recent election in South Carolina was held in violation of the mandate of the Constitution is clear." The Committee thinks the conduct and bearing of the officers and soldiers of the United States Army in that State, were both prudent and wise. The Committee says at one precinct, where 422 Republican votes were cast, an attempt was made to count 1,317, and at one precinct it was alleged that 800 more votes were cast than were in the county in 1875. The Committee considers the present State Government, like its predecessor, has no power to protect the people, and is so utterly weak that nothing but the moral power of the support of the General Government keeps it in existence a single day, and the instant this support is removed the government the State now has will at once vanish.

ENGLAND, during the month of January, was visited by destructive floods which suspended agriculture. The stock of wheat in that country is very limited and the prices on the increase.

THE following report of sales of tobacco are reported by the Western Tobacco Journal of last week:

THE Dallas (Texas) Herald says: The tide of immigration grows larger and larger. If the figures could be given they would startle even our own people. Judging from the evidences that appear in our exchanges and before our own eyes, we do not deem it an extravagant estimate to say that Texas bids fair to have twenty Congressmen after the next census, instead of six as now. We mention this to show our estimate of the population now pouring into the Lone Star State.

IN England it is acknowledged that American manufactures are superceding English, and that American goods are now sold alongside of the factories in England. At a meeting of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce on the 6th of this month, the President said that the exports of Manchester goods to the United States, which formerly afforded an excellent market, were now nothing, and that in Manchester there is considerable trade in cotton fabrics manufactured in America.

THIS week we present to our readers the name of Mr. G. V. Rouse as candidate for Legislative honors to be achieved in the next General Assembly of the State. Mr. Rouse is a worthy gentleman and can ably represent Boone in the next Legislature should the people of the county choose to honor him with the office. Doubtless there will be other aspirants and the race may be expected very interesting.

TWO Sioux Indian Chiefs, who arrived at the Spotted Tail Agency on the 19th inst., report Crazy Horse and Make-Them-Stand-Up, in command of all the hostile Sioux except the Uncapapas, encamped on Tongue River, and that Sitting Bull with his contingent force is marching to join them. These Chiefs report all as anxious to make peace on the best terms they can get, and that they are agents for that purpose.

PITTSBURG has been enjoying one of the most extraordinary temperance revivals that any town in the United States ever experienced. Mr. Francis Murphy, a reformed drunkard, of Portland, Maine, has been conducting the meeting. Mr. Murphy combines the work of religion and temperance by holding prayer meeting during the day. It is estimated that thirty-five thousand persons have signed the pledge.

ANOTHER trouble which perplexes the unsophisticated Democrat at this juncture grievously is that David Dudley Field, Tilden's bullying counsel, like Hon. Matt Carpenter, voted for Hayes, and thinks that Tilden's success would be "a public calamity." Both lawyers are working for a large fee.—Louisville Commercial.

Ditto Louisiana Returning Board, on the sly.

BAD luck attended Robert Hayden, of Pulaski, Ky. In one week his house was burned, his wife eloped, his son died, and finally, he got under an overhanging rock just in time to be crushed to death by its fall.

FRANKFORT YEOMAN: The point was made upon a witness in the Circuit Court that he was an infidel, and ought not to be allowed to testify; but this was overruled by Judge Drane. The testimony of the witness was excluded on another ground. Our informant was mistaken in reporting the infidel point as sustained. The man did not believe in future punishment, and Judge Drane did not consider that sufficient to preclude him. Infidelity is no ground to exclude a witness.

OWENSBORO EXAMINER: On Upper Third street there have lived since last spring, Mr. J. W. Price, his wife and six children. Some four or five weeks ago one of the children was attacked with pneumonia, but after good nursing and proper medical attention the child recovered. About the time of the child's recovery the mother was violently stricken with the same disease, and, after an illness of only five days, died on Friday last a week ago, and on Saturday was buried. On the same day that the wife and mother was laid away in the "city of the dead," the father was taken down with pneumonia, and after one week of illness death again entered the household and took from the children the remaining parent. Thus, in one brief week has a once happy family been broken up by the loss of its leading members, and six children orphaned. Mr. Price formerly lived in the vicinity of Yelvington, and is spoken of by those who knew him as an honorable, upright man in all his dealings; a good husband and affectionate father, and a member of the Baptist Church.

LETTER FROM TEXAS.

INDEPENDENCE, WASHINGTON CO.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

We have been in Texas a few days and will now try giving you a sketch of things as we find them here.

To the many friends who wished to hear from Texas we would say she is certainly the State for poor people. A man can rent ground any way to suit himself. We have rented ground from T. C. Clay for the present year; he furnishes everything and gives us one-half of all we raise. All we have to do is to find our own grub, and there is plenty of that here.

Last Sunday we had two as fine prairie chickens for dinner as ever graced the table of a king. There are plenty of deer, turkeys, rabbits, quails and prairie chickens here. All that Texas lacks is plenty of good horses and mules. There are plenty of them here, but they are very small.

I would not ask anyone to come to Texas unless they have the patience of Job, for a man will not secure one bit in this land; it will stick to anything, from a piece of wood to a highly polished razor. We have been plowing with a yoke of oxen to-day, and about the first thing they did this morning was to run away.

While plowing yesterday we found a horned frog, which is still on exhibition.

Enclosed with this letter you will find the ear of a mule rabbit, which you can show to your friends.

The weather here is as pleasant as it is in Kentucky in April.

The land here will produce about forty bushels of corn per acre, and one bale of cotton. F. C. MIRICK.

THE contractor, W. E. Wake, was out on the line of the Bellevue pike, last week, locating sites upon which to erect shanties to be occupied by his laborers. The road will be commenced in a few days, and the work put through as soon as possible.

THE sidewalks in Burlington, save a few yards, are in better repair than they have been for many years. The portion excepted is fearfully ragged, and renders traveling somewhat hazardous. A few pounds of nails and a dozen or so plank are in order at that particular point.

SOME of our correspondents, unthoughtedly no doubt, embody too much advertising in their communications, and when they see them in the paper, purged of the "advs.," consider them horribly mutilated. They must bear in mind that we charge by the line for advertisements inserted as reading matter. We want the news, in a brief and comprehensive style.

THE door flew open; he lit in the center of the room, with his hair erect, eyes protruding till they could see each other across the bridge of his nasal organ, gills white, teeth rattling like loose clap-boards on a dog kennel, and his knees knocking together at the rate of seventy-five strokes to the minute. He had been interviewed by a female in regard to a valentine.

A Bold Robbery.

One night last week a masked robber entered the house of Mr. W. B. Adams on the Burlington and Petersburg pike, and succeeded in bulldozing Mr. Adams out of cash to the amount of $40. The particulars, as we get them, are as follows: Mrs. Adams had finished her work in the kitchen and had gone to the sitting-room, the door of which opens on a porch. She had stepped in the room and endeavored to shut the door behind her, when she discovered it would not close. She then pulled the door open to see what was the matter, when in stepped a masked man, with a revolver in his hand. He immediately covered Mr. Adams with the revolver and demanded his money. Mr. Adams got the $40, which was all the money he had about the house, and laid it on the table; but this did not meet the approval of the robber, who demanded Adams to place the money in his hands. Adams obeyed. The robber then told Adams and his wife if they attempted to give the alarm that night he would shoot them, and if he didn't do it that night, he would do it some time in the future. He then took his leave, leaving Adams $10 worse off. The mask the man wore was a knit overall, that covered him from the top of his head to the knees, there being holes cut for the eyes. There are many conjectures as to the cause of the robbery, the principal one of which is that the thief had heard of Mr. Adams selling his farm a few days since, and expected he had received the money.

Shooting in a Cemetery.

Our exchanges from Rising Sun, last week, contain an account of a shocking occurrence that took place in that city on last Thursday night, resulting in two men being wounded, one of them seriously and the other severely. The circumstances that brought about the shooting are about as follows: Mr. Albert Talbott, of that place, had a little daughter buried in the town cemetery on Tuesday before, and, as there had been considerable excitement in that community about the workings of ghouls, it was thought advisable to have the grave guarded for a few nights. From some cause, two parties of men were sent to the cemetery to stand watch that night, neither party having any knowledge of the fact that the other was to be present. The Mayor sent the Sheriff and two other men; the grandfather of the deceased child also sent two gentlemen as guards. When these parties discovered each other in the cemetery late that night, each mistook the other for a body of resurrectionists, and at once set about the duty for which they were detailed, and with the result above mentioned. It does seem there was some careless management on the part of someone.

The Burlington Social Hop.

The hop given by the Burlington Dancing Club, on the evening of the 16th inst., was a brilliant affair, and was a far greater success than anticipated by the most sanguine of those interested in reviving that source of enjoyment for which the town was once noted, but of late has ignored entirely. There were about fifty couple in attendance, and at one time there were forty couple dancing. The crowd was very orderly and everyone present was apparently in the midst of enjoyment. Among the young ladies present from a distance were, Miss Emma Brown, of Covington; Miss Kate Kriley, of Beech Grove, Kenton County; Miss Allie Stephens, Miss Fannie Stephens, Miss Kate Carpenter and Miss Hester Carpenter, of Florence; Miss Lucy Sanders and sister, of Union. The Burlington String Band, assisted by Geo. Bagby with cornet, furnished music for the occasion, and they acquitted themselves in a style belonging only to number one musicians. To sum up, it is only necessary to say the hop was equal in every respect to any known in the annals of Burlington.

The Pistol.

The usually quiet little town of Union was the scene of a sad and fatal shooting affray, last Friday, about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The parties to the unfortunate occurrence were Ira Percival and Dr. R. H. Brashier. It appears that there had been hard feelings existing between the parties for some time, and on the evening above named it resulted in Brashier's being shot and mortally wounded by a pistol in the hands of Percival. Brashier received two wounds, one in the bowels and one in the back, from the effects of which he died last Sunday morning about 8 o'clock. After the shooting Percival surrendered to the authorities, who notified the County Attorney of the case. Saturday morning the Justices of that district met to hold the examining trial, which was postponed till Monday, when it was again continued till to-day. Not wishing to prejudice either side of the case, for the present we suppress the particulars, as detailed to us, but will endeavor to give the facts, when satisfied we are in possession of them.

THE "literary" was largely attended on Wednesday night of last week. The exercises "programmed" for the evening were both interesting and entertaining. The question, "Affirmed, that corporal punishment should be allowed in school," was argued on the affirmative by Mr. A. G. Winston and Dr. J. M. Grant, and on the negative by Mr. C. C. Conner and Mr. W. F. McKim. In handling the question the disputants expended considerable lore, and fought hard for their respective sides of the question.

THE question is often asked, "When does Criminal Court convene?" By reference to the County Directory, on the first page, you will get the following answer, which is a correct one: On the third Monday in March.

WE have noticed several wagons loaded with plows leaving the shops, where they have received repairs for the spring campaign.

THE last couple licensed to marry was Henry L. Tanner and Carrie Vaughn.

Personal Mention.

WEBB SMITH changed his domicile last Tuesday.

MRS. HENRIETTA HUEY has returned from Cave-in-Rock, Ill.

PROF. ORLANDO SNYDER illuminated our streets with his effulgent smiles one day last week.

DR. JONAS C. TERRILL has returned home, and is willing and anxious to administer to the wants of the afflicted.

MR. F. P. WALTON is making arrangements to move to the country, where he will indulge in agrestic pursuits.

DR. J. F. SMITH says he is paddling his own canoe in the medical whirlpool, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

PROFS. JORDON and Jones, late of the Petersburg school, gave us a call Tuesday last, and, by the way, Prof. Jordon, appreciating a good thing, subscribes for the RECORDER.

MR. R. A. BRADY and family, late of Carroll County, have moved to Boone and settled near Burlington. It is with pleasure that we welcome such worthy persons to our county.

Transfers of Real Estate.

The record in the County Clerk's office shows that the following real estate transfers have been made since our last report:

Beth Ann Wagoner to Samuel Taylor, 15 acres on Bullock Pen branch.

T. B. Rouse to John G. Grimes, 63 acres near Hebron.

John Colter to Henry Colter, 146 acres on Big Bone Creek.

A. R. Toph to Lewis Jenkins and L. H. Gard, lots in Taylorsport.

John T. O'Neal to D. M. Bagby, an undivided interest in the lands of Geo. O'Neal.

Sarah F. Stephens to Jas. Moore, about 80 acres.

B. C. Calvert to Stephen R. Mock, storehouse and lot in city of Rabbit Hash.

J. S. Scott, John Galbraith, E. E. Scott, Adaline Galbraith to Sarah F. Stephens and Granville Stephens, 40 acres.

Henry A. Crigler and wife to T. B. Aylor, an undivided half interest in the lands of Mrs. Rhoda Aylor, deceased.

Mary C. Coleman, Preston C. Coleman, Walter P. Coleman and Samuel B. Coleman to Mary A. Thompson, house and lot in Burlington.

Thos. C. Graves to Jennie Riggs, lot in Petersburg.

Same to J. Frank Grant, undivided half of lot No. 61 in Petersburg.

MR. WM. M. CONNER, of Florence X-Roads, is one of those men who, when he undertakes anything, pursues it with both heart and soul. He has recently completed his dwelling-house, and, being a member of the order of P. of H., has them to hold regular meetings at his house. Being a man of literary attainments, he has induced his neighbors to organize a literary society, which meets regularly at his house. Certainly William is happy.

LEGAL business is certainly on the look-up in this county. The attorneys here are seemingly busily engaged their entire time. Taking depositions has been in progress nearly every day for some time past.

THE common school having closed, the attendance at Prof. Stephenson's school has been considerably increased.

THE valentine trade was not as good as expected. There is a large stock of that class of goods on hand.

Rev. Robert Kirtley preached at the East Bend Church last Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night, to a well filled house.

The Methodists will begin a protracted meeting on Friday before the first Sunday in next month, at the East Bend Church.

Mr. James Hardin, of Indianapolis, and the boss swing man is in town.

Beaver Lick.

Once again I attempt the pleasant task of informing the the inquiring readers of the RECORDER of the prosperous condition of our crescent little hamlet. Beaver assumes quite a beautiful appearance at present. Mr. John Conner's mercantile establishment is quite an ornament to Beaver, and it has engendered a rare rivalry among the merchants, so much so that they are vending at "killing prices," and one feels that he is slighting his generosity when he purchases articles of commerce of them, as they seem loth to receive remuneration. Opposition is the life of trade, and without a village could never flourish as ours does. Isn't it strange for a moment?

Mr. T. M. Rich's placid countenance daily ornaments the throng of busy populace in our streets. He's a jovial fellow, a dabster farrier, and has taken charge of the blacksmith shop, better known as "Old Dad's Stand."

Prof. Daniel T. Rose delivered his valedictory address last Monday evening, to his pupils at the Osborn School-house, it being the last day of his school, which he has taught satisfactorily to his patrons.

"Change places" is the order of the day among the tenant fraternity. J. T. Underhill says he has canvassed Grant, Gallatin, Boone and Owen counties, and has not been able to find a vacant "shop" wherein to deposit his moveables. Go West, young man.

The industrious farmers have begun to sow tobacco seeds, which indicates that the spirit of wisdom still "laboreth in them." The old crop of tobacco seems to be a little heavy on the market just at present. None of the owners of the weed about Beaver have yet sold. Tobacco buyers, where are ye? Why delay longer? Bring a little money into the neighborhood; 'tis essential. Ye might discourage some of the abundant cultivators of the weed, and then what would become of him that smokes? and if he chews too, it's nuff trouble to be "outen" it, everybody knows. So come while yet ye can do good.

At Mr. James Fitzharris's it was that we enjoyed our last agreeable quadrille with the sweetest flowers of old Ireland. I admit they were embellished considerably by American adoption. But whether in America or Europe, their beauty and fascinations command the same praise in a fantastic hop.

Florence.

Mr. Aaron Yager, an old and highly esteemed citizen, died very suddenly on Wednesday evening of last week. He had been up town for some groceries, and on returning home remarked that his head hurt him very badly. He sat down and in a few moments fell over dead. He was buried Friday afternoon from his late residence. Revs. Winston and Stephens preached the funeral sermons. He was seventy-five years old. The remains were interred in the family burying ground on the farm.

Mrs. Sarrah Blankenbeker, wife of Thornton Blankenbeker, Esq., died on Saturday, of consumption. She had been sick for nearly a year. She leaves a large circle of friends to mourn her loss. Rev. Mr. Stephens preached the funeral sermon.

The funeral of Dr. Brashier, who was shot in Union last Friday, was preached in the Christian Church at this place Monday, by Revs. Foster and Stephens. Quite a large crowd was present to pay their last respects to the deceased, who was interred at this place.

Personal.—Eli Carpenter, sr., is quite ill .....J. W. Howe has sold his property to Mr. H. T. Snyder for $3,600. Mr. Howe is going to leave, and we can heartily recommend him and his amiable wife to the community where they may cast their lot.

There has been no little excitement in our town during the past few days, over the absconding of one Baker, a carpenter by trade but of late a book peddler. Having obtained quite a number of subscribers for his books, he borrowed about $200 from some merchants and other persons, as he said to pay for the books ordered. Having the money in his pocket, he gathered together his family, jumped the town and a $100 store bill.

A few days after Baker's disappearance, a shoemaker in the employ of Mr. Robinson started off with a pair of boot legs, $10 in cash and indebted for a week's board. A motion is now before the house to have the town fenced in and sentries appointed to watch the dead beats who are trying to get away with our valuables.

Dr. Starbuck, a few days since, while arranging some of his goods on the shelves, fell from a box and ran an iron wire through his hand, which made a painful and ugly wound. UNO.

Petersburg.

The past week has been a rather lively one. Besides the plain, straight-forward workings of the High, Royal Seven-Up Tribunal at Washington on the vexed question, news of which is constantly arriving and being put on sale at the low price of a nickel a dose, to borrow up the public mind, we have had the closing exercises of the public school at the M. E. Church, last Friday night, and an exposure of some of the test tricks of Spiritualism at the School-house on Saturday night. The first of the two last mentioned being, in the language of Billy Barlow, a free blow, it was witnessed by about eleven-tenths of the whole community, and as much more as could find room to sit down by standing up. In the last case, however, the exasperated and suffering public of adult years was debarred by two small dimes, while those of more recent production had a couple of insignificant five-cent pieces interposed between them and the big show up stairs, thereby accounting for the small-sized audience, who patiently witnessed the performance of the Professor(?) for two of the longest hours since the flood.

There was another dance out at that Grange Hall, last week, and, although invited, not one of our young men ventured to go. When all the young gentlemen(?) of that vicinity have secured a new hat each, if they will get up a dance and send us a dispatch, we will wear our old hats and go out. Perhaps we may succeed in making a trade ourselves.

St. Valentine, that most unceremonious of all the saints, has gone again, which means that he has been again, and again the different keys in human nature have been touched, gently or otherwise, accordingly as the hit has been complimentary or critical.

The literary young folks of the plains of Willoughby, stimulated by the example of the Burlington Society, have gone and done likewise; and now you can see the fur fly, the hair stand on end, hear the windows and shingles rattle as one dictionary after another is rifled and shot off in defense of some newly raised question of ethics or polemics. Their meetings are wealthy (be careful how you spell that word, Mr. Printer), and are correspondingly interesting.

The public school at Petersburg, under the management of Messrs. M. C. Jordon and J. G. Jones, held its closing exercises at the M. E. Church on Friday night the 16th inst. Quite an audience was present, and the "farewell" by the scholars and teachers was feelingly rendered. That the school has proven a success is shown, not only by the large average attendance, but by the support the school has received from the patrons and the treatment received from the people, who are more than favorably impressed with the great value of the common school system. The average attendance of scholars attending the public school at Petersburg during the session of this school year was 92. The severe winter and the poor accommodations for the comfort of scholars being taken into consideration, this speaks well for the teachers of the school and the citizens of the town.

BURLINGTON, KY., FERRUARY 22.

A TIGER-LILY.

"Of life my love a riddle makes,
All sweetness when I please her,
A lily when the whim she takes,
A tiger when I tease her!

"With kisses oft of shy surprise,
She smiles in fond love-languor;
Sometimes with frowns and flashing eyes
She looks superb in anger!

"A checkered path of glooms and gleams
Fate to our feet hath given;
One half our life a jungle seems,
The rest a little heaven.

"With words as sharp as claws she tears
My heart-strings all unheeding,
Then soothes me with her lily airs,
And music of her pleading.

"O lily fair! O tiger-pet!
Whatever mood may hold you,
A double love must sway me yet,
And to my bosom fold you!"

The Action of Lime upon the Soil.

Soils which contain a wealth of organic matter—although lime may abound in considerable quantities already—stiff clays, drained peat, swamps, and coarse, heavy land, and especially those destitute of it, are all benefited by the application of lime. Good results are seen to follow the use of lime on light soils after being mixed with organic matters, as rain, manure, thick turf, &c. But lands that are not of condition are rendered less capable of producing good crops by its application. Care should be taken not to apply lime to land that is in need of drainage, as little good will be experienced by its use, but if application is made to such wet soils, the quantity should be materially increased. Clay lands should have organic matter applied in connection with lime, and a light plowing should follow.

It is frequently observed that the effect is much greater the second season than in the first, hence a very good result has been given by sowing broadcast and simply harrowing the surface of the soil. This practice is found to succeed well on rye grass layers, especially if applied during the autumn. It is best to have the lime air-slacked and in as fine a condition as possible.

The most profitable quantity to sow depends greatly upon the character and degrees of humidity in the soil, wet soils and those freshly charged with organic matter, and all clay soils taking most. We recommend from twenty to sixty bushels per acre, according to circumstances.

Careful observation will explain why soils already abounding in lime are improved by its use, and also why, though an excess of lime in soils causes the production of coarse, rank grasses, yet by its use these pastures are frequently benefited by a top dressing.

We have frequently proved that an application of lime previous to sowing the turnip seed has materially increased the bulk of the crop, and insured their keeping well. It is a notorious fact that sheep do well off land that has been treated with lime, whether the food produced be grass or turnips.

The quality of most grains is improved by the use of lime, especially peas and beans.

It is by no means an expensive aid to our crops, and may be tested with but little trouble.—The Farmer(Eng.).

Working Land on Shares.

Working land on shares seems to be a poor business for both parties. It is to the interest of the tenant to spend as little for extra labor as possible, because the owner of the land gets half the benefit, without bearing any of the expense. When the country was new and the land rich, a man could, perhaps, afford to give half the products, as he could get fair crops with little labor; but now that the land is more or less run down, and it is necessary to build it up with manure and good culture, it is impossible for a man to expend the necessary labor and give half the produce for rent. It may be done for a year or two on land in high condition; but the farm must inevitably deteriorate under this system. A man might afford to rent a grass farm on shares, but not an arable farm. It is difficult to take one of our ordinary run-down farms and raise enough from it, for the first few years, to pay the cost of labor and support the teams. It would be cheaper, so far as immediate profit is concerned, to pay one hundred dollars an acre for land in high condition, with good buildings and fences, than to accept as a gift one of these run-down farms. It is time this matter was understood, so that those uneasy mortals who are always expecting to sell, and consequently make no efforts to keep up and improve the land, should be compelled to turn over a new leaf, or else dispose of their farms at a low figure.—Ohio Farmer.

It is related that the Rev. Dr. Samuel West, a distinguished Unitarian clergyman of New Bedford, made a prophecy just one hundred years ago, founded on Daniel 11:44, and Ezekiel 38:2. "According to these texts," he said, "I understand that the Russians are to conquer the Turks; but that previously the Greeks and many other subjects of the present Turkish Empire will revolt, and put themselves under the protection of the Russians, that by their means they may free themselves from the Turkish yoke."

Change of Feed.

It is now well known that a change of food, made quite often, is necessary to the good health of persons, and is it not reasonable to suppose that the same rule must hold good with reference to domestic animals? In their organizations they do not differ materially from us, and hence the treatment good for us with reference to our food must be good for them. It is; there can be no question about that.

When free to make choice of the things thy want as feed, our domestic animals will select as great a variety as human beings do. As the epicure will sometimes leave green turtle for a red herring, so the cow will run from a blue-grass pasture to get a bit of hay. Sheep that are in the best of pastures will leave the richest grasses to feed on weeds and bushes. Hogs are very fond of a change of food, and if nothing but corn is offered them, will devour earth or gnaw the wood of the pens in which they are confined. Farmers who limit their stock to what they consider the best sorts of feed commit a very grave error. No sort of feed is the best if its use is continued a great length of time. Cows will tire of hay alone, as men tire of raised bread made from wheat flour.

Marriage of a Widow of Fourteens.

The office of County Clerk was invaded on Saturday by a wedding party in search of a marriage license. The affable clerk proceeded to fill out the necessary document, and inquired the ages of the candidates for matrimony. The groom's was given as thirty-four, while that of the bride was stated to be only fourteen. This statement caused a stay of proceedings, and the clerk informed the parties that it was against the law to issue a license to a woman under eighteen without the consent of her parents. Thereupon the father of the bride, who was one of the party, stepped forward and said the bride had his full and free consent; that she had already been married once and buried her first husband. The astonished clerk, rightly thinking that a would-be bride of such ripe experience didn't need any legal protection, hesitated no longer, but made out the necessary document, and the bridal party went on their way rejoicing. Maid, wife, widow, and married again, all within fourteen brief years, seems to be crowding things a little. What a history that woman will have by the time she is fifty.—Alton (Ill.) Telegraph.

Cow Music.

The cow has at least four tones or low. First, there is her alarm or distressed low, when deprived of her calf or separated from her mates—her low of affection. Then there is her call of hunger, a petition for food, sometimes full of impatience, or her answer to the farmer's call, full of eagerness. Then there is that peculiar frenzied bawl she utters on smelling blood, which causes every member of the herd to lift its head and hasten to the spot—the native cry of the clan. When she is gored or in great distress she bawls also, but that is different. And lastly, there is a long, sonorous volley she lets off on the hills or in the yard, or along the highway, and which seems to be expressive of a kind of unrest and vague longing—the longing of the imprisoned cow for her lost identity. She sends her voice forth so that every god on Mount Olympus can hear her plaint. She makes this sound in the morning, especially in the spring, as she goes forth to graze.—From the Galaxy for January.

The Story of the Blarney Stone.

Five miles west of the city of Cork, where two streams meet, is the little village of Blarney. The fame of the castle of this valley is widespread. In the northeastern side of the castle, up very high is a stone. Whosoever has courage enough to risk life in an attempt to reach and kiss this stone, will thenceforth have a wonderful persuasive power, and his words will flow with marvellous rapidity. Therefore, when anybody uses flattery in order to gain a favor, he is said to have "kissed the blarney stone." The origin of the virtue imputed to this stone is lost in mists of antiquity. The legend is that a certain Lord of Blarney was ordered to deliver up his castle to the English in order to show his loyalty. He was always promising to do so, but contrived never to do it; therefore, the word "blarney" means something very much like the word humbug.

A Sinking Island.

The Island of Heligoland is reported to be gradually disappearing. It is now, says Iron, less than a mile in superficial extent; but in 1649 it was four miles in circumference, in 1,300 forty-five miles, and, in 800, a hundred and twenty miles. The encroachment of the sea is effected almost entirely from the northeast, owing to the set of currents and the direction of the prevailing winds.

"I had ten children to support, and it kept me busy," said Smith to Jones, as they met, "but one of the boys got married. Now I have——" "Eight?" interrupted Jones. "No, eleven—counting the daughter-in-law!" said Smith with a sigh that might have been heard afar off.

A boat containing a human foot was picked up on the beach of Scarboro, Me., on Saturday, and the citizens of the town consider the man who left the boat without taking his foot along, the most remarkable case of absent-mindedness on record.

The Talmud.

Jews, Protestants, and Romanists all agree in receiving as canonical the books of our Old Testament. But as the Romanists would add to these the apocryphal books, so the Jews insist on adding their oral law. They say that when the written law was given to Moses, inscribed on two tables of stone, God also gave another and verbal law explanatory of the first, which he was commanded not to commit to writing, but to deliver down by oral tradition. When Moses came down from the mount, they tell us that he first repeated this oral law to Aaron and his sons, and then to the seventy, and finally to all the people, each of whom was oblige to repeat it in his hearing, to insure its correct remembrance. Just before his death, they say, he spent a month and six days in repeating it to them again; and then, they assert, he committed it in a special manner to Joshua, through whom it was imparted to Phineas, and so on through the long line of prophets, and afterward of teachers, down to the time of Judah the Holy, who lived in the second century, by whom it was committed to writing, lest it should be lost. This work, consisting of six books, is the famous Mishna of the Jews, which, with its Gemara, or commentaries, constitutes their celebrated Talmud, in which is comprehended all their learning and much of their religion as a people. The whole work is held by them in far higher esteem than the Bible, so much so that they say the Bible is water, but the Talmud is wine; and they even declare that he who studies the Bible when he might read the Talmud does but waste his time; and that to sin against the latter is far worse than to sin against the former. So implicit is their confidence in this oral law, that it is almost useless to reason with a Jew out of the Old Testament; for he is ever ready with an answer from the Talmud, with authority of which he is fully satisfied. —Tryon Edwards, in Scribner for February.

Anecdote of Telegraphing.

The following is told by Mr. Rogers: "I think the most curious fact that I have ever heard of the electric telegraph, was told me by the cashier of the Bank of England. 'Once upon a time,' then, on a certain Saturday night, the folks at the bank could not make the balance come out correct by just £100. This is a very serious matter in that little establishment. I do not mean the cash, but the mistake in arithmetic, for it requires a world of scrutinity. An error in balancing has been known, I am told, to keep a delegation of clerks from each office at work sometimes the whole night. A hue and cry was, of course, made after this £100, as it the old lady in Threadneedle street would be in the Gazette for want of it. Luckily on Sunday morning, a clerk in the middle of a sermon, I dare say, if the truth were known, felt a suspicion of the truth flash through his mind quicker than any flash of the telegraph itself. He told the chief cashier that perhaps the mistake might have occurred in packing some boxes of specie for the West Indies, which had been sent to Southampton for shipment. The suggestion was immediately acted upon. Here was a race, lightning against steam—steam with eight and forty hours the start. Instantly the wires asked, 'Whether such a vessel had left the harbor?' 'Just weighed anchor,' was the reply. 'Stop her!' frantically shouted the telegraph. It was so done. 'Heave up on deck certain boxes marked so and so; weigh them carefully.' They were weighed; and one—the delinquent—was found heavier by just one packet of a hundred sovereigns than it ought to be. 'Let her go,' said the mysterious telegraph. The West Indies were debited with just £100 more, and the error was corrected without ever looking into the boxes or delaying the voyage an hour. Now that is what we call doing business."

He purchased his sweetheart a pair of ten-button gloves, and handed them in at the door himself. The servant girl took them, and going to the foot of the stairs, bawled up: "Please, miss, 're's a young man as has brought you a pair of leggins."

A negro in South Carolina, who was complaining of the hard times, declared that they were the hardest ever known. "Why," said he, "I works all day and steals all night, an' yet I'm blest of I ken make an honest living."

Woman wants to "enjoy all the rights of man," but we can't see what pleasure it would afford her to sit on a store box on a street corner complaining of the scarcity of labor and spurting tobacco juice at a lamp post.

A negro was put on the stand as a witness, and the Judge inquired if he understood the nature of an oath. "For certain, boss," said the citizen, "if I swear to a lie I must stick to him!"

"Remember who you are talking to, sir," said an indignant parent to a facetious boy. "I am your father." "Well, who's to blame for that?" said the young impertinence, "tain't me."

A very polite lady, who did not wish to ask for a cradle, asked the storekeeper if he had any matrimonial baskets.

The first gold discovered in California was at the root of a wild onion which a man was pulling for greens.

GOING TO PRESS.

BY REV. L. N. CARMAN.

[Wm. A. Jones, foreman of the composing room of the New Orleans Times, died last week. Just before his death he became conscious for a moment, and in that gleam, dwelling upon the habit of his life, he suddenly exclaimed: "The ads. are all right, Sherman; lock up the forms and let's go to press."]

Fellow-man, a moment linger
On the dying printer's speech;
For it bears a weighty lesson,
Our unheeding hearts to teach.

Day by day thou art composing
What a universe shall read;
Type to type art ceaseless setting,
As thou addest deed to deed.

Ah, how surely life's full columns,
When the hand that set them lies
Fixed in an unbroken stillness,
Their composer advertise.

Soon their forms are locked forever,
Changeless shall th' impression be;
Scan thy proof in time, O printer,
Thou art near eternity.

Are the "ads." all right, composer?
Art thou standing justified?
Ready now for death and judgment,
Their unfoldings to abide?

So shalt thou, as right advances,

GRANGE ADDRESS,

Delivered by Lecturer of the County Grange Before that Body.

WORTHY MASTER: As I occupy the position of Lecturer in this branch of our Order, and believing that every consistent member of every Grange should come squarely up to the discharge of his duties, I offer a few suggestions for your consideration. You recollect, however, that in the charge to the Lecturer at his installation, he is required to be brief in his remarks; that he shall deliver short addresses; and a part of his duty shall be the suggestion of topics for discussion by the other members. Keeping in mind, then, the rule that brevity in the important matter with the Lecturer, I will endeavor not to transgress it; but if I should, you will recollect that at our last meeting I did not occupy any portion of your valuable time, and will hereafter endeavor to keep strictly within the rule.

I ask you in advance not to think, when one is honored with an office such as that which I am filling, he must necessarily be better qualified than others to discharge its duties. You know it has been proved, at least in statesmanship, that a very small man may be the incumbent of a very big office. I have at home an engraved portrait of that honor to womankind, as well as to human nature, Florence Nightingale, and once the question was asked whom it was. The answer, as given by Becky or Budge, who then did me the honor to look after my household affairs, that it was "Florence Nightingale, the greatest singer that ever lived." You must not make a similar mistake, and think he is Lecturer, the greatest, &c.

There are many subjects of grave import which might be called to your notice, none of which are entitled to precedence, and scarcely any can be touched at all without attracting earnest attention. So we will consider those which appear to be of more immediate interest, without any regular order. Some of these may demand present attention; others may be the subject of reflection after we shall adjourn. Of course, only a few can be even alluded to. It would take long sessions of many days even to hint at a tithe of them.

Shall I take a starting point and ask who are we and what do we here? unroll the volume of history and reverse the order of time, as a thousand years come rushing by, filled with the memory of the past? Let us give our attention for a moment to one fact, which is shown by the testimony of travelers, statesmen and statistical observers in all ages and quarters of the world—the fact that the possession of property in land is the first step in social improvement, and the great efficient agent in changing man from a savage to a civil state.

Despite of Rousseau's famous paradox, we all can see that the first man who enclosed a field and called it his own was the author, not of all the ills that followed, but he was the first and greatest human benefactor of his species. And his successors are now blessed if they prefer the simplicity of country life to the vices, the false pleasures, the seductions of towns and cities. I do not give all the happiness to the country, nor all the ills to the city; but, comparing them, who can doubt? You have had many a glowing picture of the felicities of rural life, and you have known much of its reality, that brings with it not unmingled pleasure. Yet, taking it as we find it, encountering its stern realities and divesting it of its poetry, may we not say that the farmer is a favored mortal, and that we may look with certainty to his class for the moral strength and glory of our country? Yet there lies upon that class the necessity that it should be on a level with the knowledge of the age and abreast of its progress. Until lately this necessity does not seem to have been realized. The honest cultivators of the soil were plodding along in their accustomed way, and the rest of the world were posting by them with the speed of an express train; and the organization that holds us here as members is an earnest indication that such shall be the case no longer. The beginning has been too long delayed. We have a vast amount of leeway to bring up, and everything that has gone before; and the danger threatening us in the future urges us to be prompt and earnest in our work. We are warned now that we must let the time we have wasted and the opportunities lost suffice, and to bring into practical use—into earnest and fervent effort—the powers with which we have been endowed.

The gentle Granger, as he is flippantly called by some who seek to ridicule us, has at length learned the important secret that he must combine his forces with those of his fellows, and that he can not longer look for right and truth and justice if he depends on his single, unaided powers to obtain them. He must have some knowledge of the acts and intentions of his brother farmers, and if he can get this in a practical form he will remove the great obstacle to success and prosperity; and that he has not done this heretofore is what has been keeping him back. This, I conceive, is the first great lesson that he had to learn; and in proportion as it has been learned and acted on have we been benefited by the Grange.

We have to meet combined forces at all points, and if we do not combine against them, we are defeated without remedy. The farmer ought to know, and the Grange ought to give him the information, what has been the most profitable commodity in the past, and what is the most promising in the future. We need statistical information, which the Grange ought to give us, and we should be guided by such facts more than we have ever been. I would humbly suggest that, notwithstanding all that has been written and talked about the social feature of the Grange, it is not to be compared to the business feature, if I may so express it. This is what created the Order, and this is what must and will sustain it, and you and I and all of us ought to look to it that this be brought to bear practically and vigorously. We need to know what our brother farmers, Grangers or not, are doing and design to do all over the land, and we need this in order to understand what may be best for us as individuals to be about. A thousand illustrations might be given. I will take one:

You know, brothers, that hay has been, until lately, an important, and in the main a profitable, crop to our neighbors. It has lately been almost a drug on the market. Do we know the cause of this, and can we take any steps to correct it? Is it not very important for us to know the extent of the supply of that article within reach of our market? Would it be possible, by means of concerted action on the part of the producers and holders of the article to control the market?

Again, as to the market for hogs. Is it not notorious that prices have heretofore been, in a great measure, governed, not by the old-fashioned proportion of supply to demand, but by the arbitrary will of the packers. This can surely be corrected by the producers of the article, if they only act with discretion and in concert. If this can be accomplished in one case, it can in all others, and the farmer meets the world on equal terms, compels it to a fair field and asks no favor.

If we find that there is likely to be an over-supply of anything, we can govern ourselves accordingly, but we must learn how to obtain the truth as to these matters. We can not trust the general accounts of crops, as published in the venal press, which has been, as I believe, universally and invariably acting in the interest of the merchant and speculator. Did you ever know it otherwise than that full and abundant crops were reported about the close of harvest? And has it not been the rule for articles to advance when they have passed out of the farmer's hands?

Our greatest need is, in my opinion, a well-devised system of inter-communication throughout the land conveying information as to what we are doing and proposing, as well as to what our prospects are as to crops and prices. We are now driven to the necessity of regulating our business transactions by circumstances as they occur; we must be ruled by circumstances as they occur, and we can not go on in the old routine. If hay won't pay a profit, we must try something else; and we can learn through the Grange, if the association shall do its duty, what course in the future promises best for us. Such a system as this has long been in operation among all other classes, and, now we have learned it, we are bound to reduce it to practice in our own case, and to act on it. If we do not, we will be driven to the wall.

And this brings me to the consideration of the question that I wish to present to the consideration of this County Grange. It is one, perhaps, more easily asked than answered. It is simply, What shall we do to advance the interests of our Order? We are the body recognized by the State Grange as the medium of intercourse between that and the several subordinate Granges, and I have seen it stated somewhere that we should strengthen these latter, but I have not seen any regulation by which that may be accomplished. I would respectfully suggest that we depart from the ordinary formula for the prosecution of our business, which does not differ from that in the other Granges, and establish an order which will insure certain practical results. As, for example, that we shall show ourselves interested in the condition and working of the several Granges in the county, that we shall have reports of the working of the individual members of the several Granges that we shall know what is the plan of farming proposed to be carried on during the coming season—and I hope it may not be deemed inquisitive if we extend these inquiries to the other counties and the States cultivating the same crops that we do—in short, that we have among the several County Granges in the whole region a system of as full reports as to stock and crops as may be attainable. I think we need a different system from that now practiced, as we get no information now on these points of any practical value. I hope our County Grange will try to bring this into practice without delay. And I would suggest that we who are here to-day shall communicate to each other what our experience has been as to profit and loss, as well as what our intentions and expectations are for the coming season.

The matter of the establishment of a "supply house" has been before us so long that it needs no special attention by us to-day, if I am not misinformed about it. Let us have it, if possible.

It seems to me that it might also come fairly within the legitimate duties of this body to establish some judicious system of selling the various commodities that we have to dispose of. The details of this will be a matter for consideration. There are Grange agents at the stock yards at Cincinnati, but this is the only move that has been made in this direction. A little judicious and earnest effort in this direction might be a very great help to many farmers. It would be a great end accomplished if ye gentle Granger could have some other chance than the tender mercy of those who make a profit on his commodities.

We have our County Grange inaugurated under favorable circumstances. There are here, I hope, brothers from all the Granges in the county, and we are cheered by the presence of sisters sufficient of itself to prompt our best efforts to advance our common cause. Let us go forward and have in our vocabulary no such word as fail.

Having referred to the great original Granger, will it weary your patience if I follow up the course of events that naturally attend on his wisdom and forecast, and notice his descendants, in the course of time surrounded by forms and proportions beyond the power of a Claude or a Salvator to paint? Can anything on earth present a greater charm to the eye or gratification to the taste than a well-ordered farmstead? An admired writer, who, unfortunately, has passed away after describing in glowing terms his ideal of such a much-loved spot, sees with rapture that the plow walks in rustic majesty across the plain and opens the genial bosom of the earth to the sun and air; natures holy sacrament of seedtime is solemnized beneath the vaulted cathedral sky; silent dews and gentle showers and kindly sunshine shed their sweet influence on the teeming soil; springing verdure clothes the plain; golden wavelets pass over the joyous wheat fields; the tall maize flaunts in her crispy leaves and nodding tassels; while we labor and while we rest, while we wake and while we sleep, God's chemistry, which we can not see, goes on beneath the mold; myriads and myriads of vital cells ferment with elemental life; germ and stalk and leaf and flower and silk and tassel and grain and fruit grow up from the common earth; the implements, which are wonderful achievements of human genius—the mowing machine and reaper, mute rivals of human industry—perform their gladsome office; the well filled wagon bears aloft the golden treasures of the year; the bow of promise fulfilled spans the foreground of the picture, and the gracious covenant is redeemed that while the earth remaineth summer and winter, and heat and cold, and day and night, and seedtime and harvest shall not fail. I believe the author of these lines, Edward Everett, was neither a farmer nor a Granger, yet he deserved to have been both.

THE Court of Appeals of Naples has declared against the abolition of the death penalty by a vote of 40 to 18. On the other hand, the Council Order, an association of lawyers in Leghorn, responding to a call made upon them by the Minister of Grace and Justice, pronounced in favor of the abolition of capital punishment by a vote of 9 against 1.

A WOMAN is either worth a good deal or nothing. If good for nothing, she is not worth getting jealous for—if she be a true woman she will give no cause for jealousy. A VIRGINIA hunter says that he saw about seven hundred thousand ducks settle on a pond. They were wedged closely together. He fired both barrels of his gun into them. IN the House, the Appropriation Committee has reported a bill reducing the number of cavalry regiments to eight, artillery to four, and infantry to sixteen. The bill contains a provision prohibiting any of the money appropriated by the bill from being applied for the pay, transportation, or subsistence of troops to be employed in the support of the claim of either Nicholls or Packard as Governor of Louisiana, and prohibits the employment of any portion of the army in support of the claims of any State Government, or any officer of said State, till duly recognized by Congress.

AFTER the dispute as to the proper owner of the Louisiana electoral vote, and the Commission by a vote of seven to eight declared that Hayes was the proper owner of the eight votes sent in from that State by J. Madison Wells & Co., the electoral count progressed smoothly till Cronin's political proboscis was encountered, and it became necessary to smash it before the count could proceed further. The big guns on both sides having discharged their load of arguments, the Oregon case was put into the hands of the Commission, which, when the claims of Cronin were passed upon, voted unanimously to reject them. When it came to the question of confirming the Hayes electors the vote stood again 7 against and 8 for the confirmation. The ground for the decision in favor of the Hayes electors is, that they appear to have been lawfully appointed, and that they voted as such at the time and in the manner provided for by the Constitution of the United States. The Commission is of the opinion that the laws of Oregon make it the duty of the Secretary of the State to canvass all the returns of votes given at an election of President and Vice-President, and no one else has anything to do with the canvassing. That the Secretary of State canvassed the returns, and that the canvass showed the Republican electors were chosen by a majority of votes given. The canvass showing the result was tabulated as required by law, and filed with the Secretary of State as shown by certificates of the Hayes electors under the seal of Secretary of State and forwarded by them with their voters to the President of the Senate. That the Governor's refusal to sign their certificates does not defeat the appointment. The act of the Governor of the State giving Cronin, who received 1,000 votes less than Watts, a certificate on the grounds that Watts was ineligible, was considered without authority and void. The Commission held that the fact that Watts was a Post-Master when elected, was rendered immaterial by his resignation both as a Post-master and an elector and his election to fill the vacancy in the Electoral College of Oregon.

THE Grand Lodge of Ancient Free Masons, for this State, at its last annual communication made an order requiring a poll to be opened in each subordinate Lodge in the State, on the 27th of last December, for the purpose of taking the sense of each Lodge upon the proposition to tax each Lodge one dollar for each member thereof, per year for five years, for the benefit of the Widows and Orpans Home, located at Louisville. The vote was taken, and, as shown by the proclamation of the Grand Master, resulted in favor of the proposition by a vote of five thousand one hundred and eighty-four to three thousand four hundred and eighty. The Masonic Fraternity have for several years been laboring to complete and endow the Widows and Orphans Home, which, when done will be of untold value to the helpless widows and orphans of the deceased brethren of the Mystic Tie.

THE Cynthiana Democrat gives an account of a bloody murder committed last Monday night near Connersville. Three men went to the house of an old black man by the name of Armstead Morton, and called him to the door. When he came to the door they seized him, accused him of having been the cause of the death of one Hiles, stabbed him three times, when the old man ran a short distance and fell dead. Another negro man who was in the house at the time escaped, but not without receiving a cut, and gave the alarm. The assassins left for parts unknown. If in any instance mob-law is justifiable, it would certainly be in one of that kind.

The rout, when commenced, should be kept up till the last one in the land is no more.

IT is suspicioned that railroad pirates have made their appearance on the Louisville Short Line. On the 24th, a train on that road, bound for Louisville, ran off the track at Beard's Station, about twenty miles from that city. The train was taken from the main track by the switch, which had been misplaced and showed signs of having been tampered with. There was no serious damage done to the train, and but two or three persons slightly injured.

At the August election this Senatorial District will be called upon to elect a Senator. But as yet, candidates for that office in this county, have we none, nor have we heard any spoken of. In the county, there are several gentlemen who can fill the office ably, and, as it requires much time to make a canvass for that office, it is about the hour they were upon the track to commence scoring. A good send off in a close race very often decides the heat.

The Two Dukes.

"The Grand Duke is six feet one or two inches in height, and weighs not less than 200 pounds. His face is hand some, of the blonde type, with English side whiskers. His figure would be called fine, though not graceful in its proportions, and he resembles nothing so much as a good specimen of the English gentleman. Nearly every day he lands on 'the point,' the fashionable quarter of the city, and walks down to the business part, apparently for exercise and to relieve the monotony of ship-life. A small bull-dog usually follows him. The people here are not given to hero-worship, and they are disposed to extend to the Grand Duke all the courtesies within their limited power, they do not place him on the list of 'great living curiosities.' The children, however, are much interested in his bull-dog, and the negroes and gamins are often highly entertained by the pranks of the sailors. The Grand Duke Constantine is also here, but being much younger, not so handsome, and only a sub-lieutenant in rank, does not attract as much attention as the Grand Duke Alexis. Nevertheless he, and in fact all of the officers, have made a most favorable impression. The Virginian Club has opened its doors and extended its courtesies to the Russian officers. It is said here that Alexis is well pleased with Norfolk, because he is not bored with attentions."—Norfolk Letter.

THE BRASHIER-PERCIVAL TRAGEDY.

The Examining Trial at Union Saturday—The Testimony—Verdict of the Court, &c.

After the shooting which took place about 3 p. m. on the 16th inst., Percival gave himself up to the officers. The charge of shooting with intent to kill was preferred, and the examining trial set for the 17th, before Judge Connelly and Esq. Bannister, of Union. On that day it was continued till the following Monday, that the effects of Brashier's wounds might develop. On Sunday morning the wounds proved fatal, and that evening court was opened and the charge changed to murder. Monday the cause was again continued till Thursday at 1 p. m. Thursday the court met, when the prosecution asked further time to obtain assistant counsel, which was granted, and the trial continued till 9 a. m. Saturday, the 24th inst.

SATURDAY,

When the case was called for trial, Judge O'Hara, J. M. Stanifer and Gov. Carlisle appeared for the defense, the County Attorney, R. C. Green, and Judge O. D. McMannis for the prosecution. Both parties announced themselves ready for trial. The witnesses on behalf of the State were called and sworn, and the examination commenced. The first witness introduced was

R. K. CONNER,

Of Union, who testified in substance as follows:

When the shooting was done, was in my store-room, near the door, and saw Brashier and Percival together about 85 yards down the street, on the sidewalk and near the saddler's shop; saw Percival take one or two steps backward, draw a pistol and fire; Brashier by that time had turned his left side rather to Percival; saw Brashier reel and stagger; heard a second report of the pistol, but couldn't say whether or not Brashier was down at the time.

Cross-examined—Percival's hands were in his pants pockets; think Percival and Brashier were probably three feet apart; saw Percival draw the pistol from his hip pocket after he stepped back; did not go to parties.

BENNIE RILEY.

Am 12 years old; knew Brashier and Percival; was playing marbles in the street near where the shooting was done; Percival was standing on Clements' porch, and Brashier was in the saddler's shop, nearly opposite; Percival went across the street to the saddler's shop; don't know what passed between Percival and Brashier; they walked down the sidewalk toward Percival's house together; don't know what they talked about; saw Percival step away, draw a pistol and fire; the pistol was fired twice; Brashier was laying on his back when the second shot was fired; the shooting was nearer the saddler's shop than Percival's house; there were no men about at the time of the shooting, but some soon came up; Brashier was on his back when they came.

Cross-examined—Think Percival spoke to Brashier first; didn't hear Brashier say anything; they were not talking when they walked away; I was standing up when the shooting was done; think Brashier had his hands in his pockets; Percival drew the pistol out of his hip pocket; noticed them before the pistol was fired.

Re-examined—Did not see Brashier attempt to take his hands out of his pocket or do anything.

The testimony of Doctors Lasaing and Blanton, who were with Brashier several times before he died of the wound, as to the wounds and their effect was given, they agreeing as to the range of the balls, and that they could not trace them, and knew not where they lodged; and that the wound in the belly produced peritonetis which caused death.

L. C. NORMAN

Had a conversation with Brashier about 11 hours after he was shot; at that time Brashier was calm and collected; Brashier said he knew the nature of the wounds, and that he would die; Brashier then made the following statement as to the shooting, which the witness called to memory: "I and Percival met in Hartkey's shop; neither spoke; Percival went out first, and when I came out he was standing on Clements' porch; he came across the street to where I was standing, in front of Hartkey's shop, and said to me, 'I want to speak to you;' we walked down the sidewalk toward Percival's house; he asked me if I remembered what I said to him the other day; I answered I did; he asked me if I had any apology to make for it; I responded that I had none; Percival then said to me, 'I will not take the advantage of you that you took of me the other day;' I then said, 'Wait till I am ready;' (the witness here stated that he understood from Dr. Brashier that when Percival used the language, 'I will not take the advantage of you that you took of me,' he (Percival) was stepping back from him, and when he replied, 'Wait till I am ready,' he discovered Percival getting his pistol); Percival drew the pistol and fired; I fell to my hands and knees, and turned over on my back, and begged him not to shoot again, that he had already killed me, but he fired the second time, and I believe he would have fired the third time had he not been prevented." Witness stated that Brashier said when Percival came across the street he seemed in good humor, and when they walked down the sidewalk he believed it was for making an amicable settlement; had known Brashier for a long time; saw him after he was dead; was at the burying.

Cross-examined—Was in town, but did not see the shooting, but heard the report of the pistol; met someone who told him Percival had killed Brashier; assisted the doctor in examining the wounds; got there before Brasier was undressed; saw no weapons; didn't examine for any; didn't examine the clothes; N. Talbott and Lewis Weaver heard Brashier's statement.

N. TALBOTT

Corroborated Norman's testimony as to the dying declaration of Brashier.

This closed the testimony for the prosecution. The first witness for the defense was

J. H. JOHNSON.

I live in Kenton County; knew Doctor Brashier about six or seven months; on Christmas day Brashier told me if Percival didn't quit saying he would not pay his board, he would get a double-barreled gun and shoot him; I told Percival of the threat that evening.

Cross-examined—Am a brother-in-law of Percival.

FRANK BENTZ.

Was boarding Brashier; had been for nine weeks; saw Brashier when at Percival's with pistol in hand; Brashier had a pistol in his hand; did not say he would use it; held it in his hand by his side; Percival said but little; think both left about the same time; Brashier went away from Percival's house with pistol in hand; Brashier was at Percival's four or five minutes; didn't notice the pistol till he commenced talking to Percival on the sidewalk; Mrs. Percival and Mrs. Baker came to the door while Brashier was talking; saw a pistol afterward at my house in stand drawer; I put it in a drawer in Brashier's room; think Clarkson has it; Percival, in the quarrel told Brashier he wanted his just dues; Brashier said if he had them he would have a ball through him, but he was too cowardly to resist anything; never heard Brashier make any threats.

Cross-examined—Helped take Brasier's pants off; had no weapon in them; Percival was excited and agitated when he went toward his drug store; don't think Brasier was out of town longer than one day and night at a time since the first altercation; never saw Brashier and Percival meet after the quarrel at Percival's.

THOMAS BAKER

Corroborated Bentz' testimony as to the quarrel at Percival's on February 2d.

GEORGE BAGBY.

I loaned Brashier a pistol the day of Mrs. Johnson's sale; think it was on the 2d of February; The pistol was a five-shooter, with a five or six-inch barrel; heard of the difficulty at Percival's house afterward; Brashier did not tell me what he wanted with the pistol; returned it that evening.

JAMES CLARKSON.

The day of Mrs. Johnson's sale I gave Brashier my pistol, and Brashier gave me Bagby's, saying he had no confidence in it; gave him new loads for the pistol; this was about 4 or 5 p. m.; heard of the trouble; told Brashier to return the pistol; he did not do it; said he had stood all the abuse a man could stand; went to shave Brashier after he was dead; found the pistol in a drawer when looking for a razor and took it.

JOHN M'HATTAN.

On the day of Mrs. Johnson's sale I saw Brashier coming from toward Percival's with pistol in hand; came to where I was, pistol still in hand; said he had had a difficulty with Percival—had said all he could say to him and he did not resent it; said if Percival ever crossed his path, he would try what virtue there was in blood.

Cross-examined—Said Percival had mistreated him and drove him to this.

Dr. Blanton and E. A. Riley testified about the same as the above.

THOMAS COCHRAN.

Between my house and Union, a day or two after the quarrel at Percival's, Brashier told me Percival had slandered him; that he couldn't and wouldn't put up with it; said he went to Percival's to clear his character of things Percival had said about him; said he intended to have revenge; my father told me Brashier would do what he said, and I intimated to Percival I had heard something, and that he had better be on his guard.

LUCIEN SANDERS.

About three weeks ago Brashier told me, had he been present when Percival had his things attached, he would never have got out of the yard alive; that he would have to stay on his own side of the path; did not tell Percival what Brashier said about him; told him I heard Brashier making threats; told him the first or second Sunday before the shooting.

IRA CRIPPEN.

Knew Brashier about two months; saw him Wednesday before the shooting in Neal's woods; told me he and Percival had had a falling out; that he went to Percival, and had he not taken what he said, he would have shot him, and that he would do so yet if he crossed his path; told Percival of the threat the same evening.

Cross-examined—Brashier waited on my mother last fall; Brashier and I were good friends; Brashier paid me $50 there.

Re-examined—Brashier came to me for money; might as well have said he was going to marry.

FERD HENDERSON (COL'D).

Knew Dr. Brashier slightly; met him in the road and asked him for a prescription to a "nigger;" asked him about the quarrel; said while out one day Mr. Percival "detached" his things; said it was a low trick, and if he ever crossed his path he would shoot him; in a day or so was in Mr. Percival's drug store and told him.

MRS. BAKER

Corroborated the other testimony as to the quarrel at Percivals.

SUMMING UP.

The evidence all being in, Judge McManama, on behalf of the Commonwealth, made a motion that the prisoner be remanded to the custody of the Jailer of the county without bail. It was 4:30 p. m. when the attorneys for the defense commenced arguing the motion. They did not ask the Court to acquit, but to allow the accused bail. Two speeches were made on each side. The case was submitted to the Court about 7:30 that evening, and the hall in which court was held was then cleared to allow the Judges to consult. In about thirty minutes the crowd was admitted to the room, and the Court rendered its decision, which was a refusal to allow bail, and ordered the Marshal to convey the prisoner to jail, where he was lodged last Sunday morning about 11 o'clock.

THE CROWD.

The attendance at the trial was undoubtedly larger than at any examining trial ever before held in the county. The room in which the trial was held was large, but the crowd was so eager to catch every syllable of testimony as it fell from the lips of the witnesses, that several times during the progress of the trial it appeared that the Court would be trampled under foot. More than once was it necessary to suspend the examination of a witness and call upon the Marshal to compel the anxious crowd to give back, that the Court might have even elbow room. So soon as it commenced growing dark, the crowd began whittling down, but quite a number remained till the Court rendered its decision. A few terms of Criminal Court, with as large attendance as that of last week, would wear out the Town Hall in Union, but the citizens of the town want no more crowds assembled at that point for a like purpose.

If you consider Professor Tice good authority as to the future state of the weather, here is for you. The Professor, casting his horoscope into the month of March, says:

THE angling season is at hand.

A Colored Minister Smoked out of a Ranch, and then Egged.

Last Saturday night a colored preacher, who has for some time had charge of St. George's Chapel at this place, was the recipient of an egging, administered by some unknown parties. The parties that did the egging worked it pretty fine. In the early part of the night, while the minister was away from his room, which stands some distance from any other building, the "eggers" ascended to the roof and "spiked" the flue. When the divine returned and commenced an inventory, he found he had more smoke in stock than comfort. Having made a reconnoiter, and failing to detect the cause of his headquarters being besieged by smoke, he determined to evacuate the premises, go to the house of one of his "kind," hold a counsel, summon a posse, be recognized as ruler of the domicile with "spiked" fine, return, go behind the returns and have things reconstructed generally. He had gone but a few yards before he heard rather a suspicious buzz as something passed his Rev. cranium, then another and another. Having had experience in eggings, the minister was not long in taking the hint nor to his heels, but didnot escape a complete coating of eggs. The shower of eggs being over, the minister got his friend, returned, discovered the cause of the misbehavior of the flue, got everything in running order and at once decided he had better take his leave for other parts. This is the second time he has been egged, and the general opinion is that the assault was unprovoked.

Died.

GAINES—On the morning of the 26th inst., after an illness of some weeks, Mrs. MARY JANE GAINES, wife of JOHN G. GAINES, in the 68th year of her age.

By the death of Mrs. Gaines, the community has met with a loss that will be felt by a very large circle. If heaven is to be earned on this earth, she surely deserved it. If heaven is a gift of grace, it could not have been bestowed upon a more worthy person. If there is no future world, she made the best use of this in exemplifying that spirit of forgiveness displayed by the Savior on Mt. Calvary when He said, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." D. M. H.

And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, "Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."—Rev. xiv., 13.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Bellevue.

It appears, since the fact is established that the pike will be built, that property is rapidly increasing in value, as a man can not buy property without paying one-third more than its real value.

Business has been brisk on the wharf this week in consequence of Feiburg & Co. receiving 3,500 bushels of corn, for which they paid 37 cts. per bushel.

The Willoughby Debating Society met at the usual hour on Friday night and discussed the following question: "Resolved, That the works of art excel the works of nature in beauty and attraction." The following question was selected for the next discussion: "Resolved, that intemperance causes more distress than war." T. H. Baker, D. M. Snyder, O. Snyder and E. L. Grant, jr., affirming, and H. C. Betts, Dr. H. Grant, T. Z. Roberts and S. W. Tolin, denying.

Shipments during the week were as follows: T. Cloro, 25 head of hogs; E. Green, 15 head of same, and J. P. Kelley, 16 barrels apples.

MICAWBER.

Petersburg.

Taken as a people, we have a strong inclination to be premature in many ways, as for instance the closing exercises (?) of the school, an account of which appeared in two or more places in the RECORDER of last week. The gentleman whose names appear in connection with the most complimentary version of the exhibition, having been for the past eight or eight to seven, days industriously engaged teaching a postscript, or two weeks, to the regular term of five months allowed by law, it having been discovered that lying around loose and without any just or lawful claimant, several valuable dollars not to mention a few old nickels &c &c, by way of change, were still unexpended from the commodious coffers of the head schoolmarm of the county. We feel strongly inclined at this late writing to announce that the final conclusion had been reached, but knowing that the uncertainty of the white man is great, we will try and hold on to that morsel of news for a few days longer.

It might be well to supersedd just here, that our Ex-Sheriff of latest date, has been respectfully invited to attend the inauguration of Hayes at Washington, D. C., next Monday. An extra amount of those much admired "pumpkin pize" have been added to the bill of fare for dinner on that occasion for his sole and exclusive benefit.

W. E. Grant, of Carrollton, turned himself loose on us last Sunday and Monday, but, like our disposition to be good, he never stays long, and shook the sand of our streets from his number 32's on Monday evening.

N. B. It made a big pile of sand.

There has been more than the usual amount of sickness here during the past two weeks, but no serious cases, that of Mr. J. N. Early, who has been confined to his room for nearly two months, being the most troublesome one to persuade to yield to treatment.

Revs. Cook and Bristow have been holding a most interesting meeting at the M. E. Church in this town, during last week and continuing into this. They are meeting with some encouragement in the way of large congregations and an occasional convert.

The unusual notoriety at present attaching to other parts of this county, on account of the ability and willingness of its citizens to use the pistol, has had a very damaging effect upon this section in thus throwing it into the shade. Can't some blood-thirsty citizen come to the front once more and again bring us to the notice of the public?

BURLINGTON, KY., FEBRUARY 29.

GET OUT OF MY SUNSHINE.

BY FRANCIS S. SMITH.

"Get out of my sunshine!" Diogenes said—
The sky was his covering, the earth was his bed—
"Get out of my sunshine, oh, King of this land!
That favor alone I'll receive at thy hand!"
And so like Diogenes let me repeat
To those who would win me by fraud and deceit,
"Get out of my sunshine, and let me alone,
I'll take nothing from you—I want but my own."

Get out of my sunshine, ye fickle and proud,
If slander should reach me you'd go with the crowd.
I am happy, contented, light-hearted and free,
And I crave neither fair words nor favor from thee.
I love my true friends, and am ready to speak
A word for the erring, the poor, and the weak
I pity my foes, and I wish them no ill—
Their frowns can not fright me, their hate can not kill.

Get out of my sunshine all ye who conspire
To ruffle my feelings and waken my ire.
The ills I have suffer'd afflict me no more,
And the storm that once raged in my bosom is o'er.

I can sing and can dance with the soul-cherished few
Who gather around me with hearts warm and true,
In the bright beams of pleasure, contented I bask—
Get out of my sunshine—'tis all that I ask.

Rotation of Crops.

A simple, short and successful rotation has for many years been practiced by an Ontario County farmer. His rotation is corn or potatoes, or both, on clover sod, followed by barley seeded heavily with clover, and the third year a crop of clover hay, followed by clover seed, and plow in the spring. He keeps no stock in the summer, excepting horses and one or two cows, which he soils; fatters some sheep and cattle each winter, and he and his farm are steadily growing richer. Dispensing with the uncertain wheat crop entirely, barley, potatoes and clover seed have been his staples for marketing. He finds the clover fed in his barnyard fully as valuable to the soil as if plowed under green, and he gets the clover seed extra. By thoroughly cultivating his hoed crops, he has always secured a good catch of clover with the succeeding barley crop, which can not be done where the land has been poorly tilled. This three years' rotation involves the necessity of a great deal of labor. It keeps two-thirds of the farm in hoed crops and grain, but is all the better adapted to small farms on that account. I suppose that this farmer also, with all others, is tired of hiring so much help. I shall be interested in learning if he proposes to change his three-year to a four-year course, as other farmers are changing from a four to a five or six-year rotation.

In making any change in an established rotation, it is important that the crops which in a long series of years have paid best should not be curtailed. Despite low prices and high rates of labor, there has each year been some profit in hoed crops and in spring grains. The losses have been in wheat and pasture, especially the latter. Will a change which devotes a larger share of the farm to pasturage increase the farmer's profits? The question is worthy of careful consideration.—Cor. Country Gentleman.

Advantages of a Hard Winter.

Even the severity of the winter, which to many is an undoubted calamity, has (according to Dun's statistical circular) compensating advantages that may contribute to an improved spring business. Our country friends will be able to say whether these conclusions are well founded or not, though they seem sensible enough:

"The abundance of snow, which is termed the poor man's manure, and which unquestionably enriches and irrigates the soil, also protects the fall crops, besides providing an abundance of water for the cattle on a thousand hills, which were impoverished for need of it all the early spring last year. It also makes magnificent country roads, the advantage of which are obvious when it is remembered how seriously trade last year was interfered with at this and later periods, when the roads in whole sections of country were impassable from the want of frost and snow. The delivery of grain, pork, and other farm produce, will, during the present season, throughout the north and northwest, be at least double that of the winter months of last year, while the operations of lumber men will be greatly facilitated. The consequence will be much freer purchase at country stores, a larger absorption of goods, and a more active circulation of currency than has been witnessed in some years past."

THE "Maine law" has long been the synonym of extreme sumptuary legislation, but the recent session of the Legislature in that State proved that there could be a still deeper depth or a more dizzy height, according as people look at it. The "intensified liquor law," as it is called, will soon go into effect. The penalties for selling any intoxicating liquors, except cider, made by the seller in the State are two months in the county jail and a fine of $1,000, the offender to stand committed until the same is paid. The law treats cider vending by the glass just as it does whisky; so dealers expect to sell it by the gallon for home consumption, and if any "medicine man" can discover a sure cure for stomachic gripe, Maine is the State where a fortune awaits him.

Hay for Hens.

The Poultry World advises the use of hay in the diet of fowls in winter, as they eat grass to advantage in summer. "Bulk in food is required for health as well for poultry as man or animals. Rich and concentrated food is not readily digested and invites disease." Some think a craving for bulky food is one cause of feather eating in winter, or among fowls confined. Now, just try and secure a good supply of second crop hay, short, and, if possible, containing clover. Cure only enough to preserve, and your fowls will eat a portion of it all winter when they would turn away from stale cabbage. What is not eaten will furnish untold amusement in scratching over. Remember in winter, if poultry stand on one leg, unemployed, all day, they are disposed to have the blues. Idle meditations lead away to bad habits; while a healthy mind, in a vigorous body, suggests business, which, with fowls, means eggs and early chickens. Secure your rowen this month before it is too late, if you have not already attended to the matter, and before severe frost if possible, for it is injured in quality by being frost-bitten."

The above advice is good, although few suppose hens would eat hay if given them, but this is because they have not watched the habits of their poultry. We have noticed them often picking short bits of cut hay of almost any variety, and hay cooked for cattle is eaten greedily by them. We advise short-cut clover well boiled for them. Clover is better than any other hay, because it possesses egg-making nutriment, besides fibre to separate the concentrated food in the stomach, so that the gastric juice can circulate through the mass. The stomach can not manage solid food. Only a few minutes will be required to prepare this hay for a large number of poultry.—National Live Stock Journal.

A Chinese Shower of Grasshoppers.

I saw a sight the other day that put me in mind of that fair State, Minnesota, viz.: A flight of grasshoppers or rather locusts, only they look far more like the former than the latter, as we see them at home. They began to rise about ten miles off, and resembled a dense column of smoke. Gradually they deployed into line and started for "green fields and pastures new," which by the way, were the sickest specimens of agriculture inside of twenty-four hours I ever saw in my life. When on the other line of flight an observation was made by the Harbor Master, who reported the column as eight miles long and one mile wide. No other observation is necessary, if you please. They darkened the heavens like a dense cloud, and in the surrounding country it was impossible to avoid crushing them under foot by the dozens. It would make your heart sick to hear of the terrible privation and suffering caused by these terrible pests. Indeed, China had a bad year of it altogether. Long droughts made scanty crops, and these the locusts have consumed; and now the winter has come, and, though "John" is always represented with an umbrella and a fan, it is bitterly cold all the same, the thermemetor falling below zero.

THE present winter is remarkable in England for unusual symptoms of early vegetation; and this is still more the case in France, where in some districts the season appears, by all reports, to be several weeks in advance. One of the French papers has taken the trouble to refer to the records of past centuries for examples of abnormal winters, and gives the following instances of premature springs: In the winter of 1183 the fruit trees in France were in bloom in December, and the vine in February. In the winter of 1288 violets picked in the meadows on the banks of the Rhine were sold in the streets of Cologne. Cornflowers were seen in February, and the vine was in blossom upon the hillsides of the Moselle in the month of April. In 1572 the trees were covered with leaves in January, and the young birds were hatched in February. In 1621 there was a general flowering of shrubs and plants in February. In 1658 there was neither snow nor frost. In 1782 the heat was extraordinary in December. There were thunder storms as in August, and everything was in blossom in January. In 1821 the temperature was singularly mild; green peas were in flower in December, and the rye was gathered before the 24th of June. The vine harvest was one of the most remarkable of the present century. The winter of 1857 is the last which can be placed on the list of "spring winters."

Home Beauty.

A tasteful woman can make a garret beautiful and homelike, and at little cost; for the beauty of home depends more on educated and refined taste than mere wealth. If there is no artist in the house, it matters little that there is a large balance at the bank. There is usually no better excuse for a barren home than ignorance or carelessness. A little mechanical skill can make brackets and shelves for the walls. A thoughtful walk in the woods can gather leaves and lichens and ferns for adorning the unpictured rooms. A trifle saved from daily expenses can now and again put a new book upon the table or shelf. The expenditure of a few shillings can convert the plain window into a conservatory. In these and fifty other ways can a plain bare room be converted into a scene of beauty.

Cowards in Religion.

There is at least one matter on which the Protestants and Catholics agree. Father Burke said the other day, that there are "a great many people who seem to be ashamed of what they ought to prize most. They go out to a dinner party, but they don't dare to make the sign of a cross as a kind of grace for fear they might be seen." A great many people have just enough of religion to make them cowards. They might live for years in society, and it would never find out that they had anything like religion about them, and for the best of reasons. It is like a bottle of medicine which they carry in their pockets for fear of a sudden attack of disease, but which they conceal until they are in danger. Then, however, they are glad enough to pull it out, and they don't care who sees it, if it will only save them for just that once.

The tenderest instance of a parishioner's solicitude is that of an old lady who sent for a dissenting clergyman to come and administer to her son, who was dying of typhus fever, because she would not allow her own pastor to subject himself to the contagion. She wouldn't risk him with a bad case of typhus, but as for the dissenter, it wouldn't do much harm if he were to be carried off. As an illustration of party bias and Christian charity beautifully intermingled, that is, so intermingled that the charity couldn't be discovered, it stands preeminent. It is not often permitted to mortals to kill two such birds, charity and a clergyman, with one stone.

Swindling Charities.

The exposures recently made of some so-called charities in this city, should induce good-natured givers to be careful where they put their money. It is alleged that positive swindling and stealing are going on in some of them, and the State Board of Charities ought to make thorough investigation. It is sad, beyond expression, to know that there are men among us who get money by pretending to be caring for the poor, while they spend it on their lusts. Such fellows ought to be in the State's Prison. They may write "Rev." before their names, but they are scoundrels nevertheless.

There are institutions the officers of which are men above reproach and well known. To such, and such only, ought money to be intrusted for the poor, for children, or widows and orphans; but these unknown agents, prowling about the city with subscription books to prey upon the benevolent and unwary, ought to be given into the hands of the police, that they may be dealt with as swindlers.—N. Y. Observer.

Widow Van Cott as a Revivalist.

The Widow Van Cott is achieving success even in New York; at least she draws multitudes to every meeting at which she shows herself. As soon as she occupies the pulpit of a church it is seized with the spirit of revivalism, and sinners crowd to the altar. She appears at the brokers' prayer meeting, and the hard hearts of stock operators melt under her power. She goes into the rougher parts of the city, and the horny-handed sinners get anxious about their salvation. She has now taken up the subject of teetotalism, and yesterday she brought together the largest tectotal mass-meeting that has been held in the city for many a day. Her discourse was of the old-fashioned enthusiastic kind, and she appealed to the liquor-dealers in a style that must have stirred them up. The Widow has undertaken heavy work in New York.—N. Y. Sun.

WILLIAM SMITH, aged 70, who lived near Liberty, Ind., became widowed some years ago, and had since lived in entire seclusion, was deaf, demented. A few weeks ago he offered $5,000 to anyone who would furnish him a wife. The announcement created merriment at the time, but nothing further was thought of it till this morning it was announced that the old man was married to Miss Phœbe Jones, a highly-respected young lady aged 17. The old man's offer had been taken in hand by Powell Slade, with whose family the young woman lived, and Slade received the $5,000, $2,000 of which was paid to the girl's father, the girl herself receiving as an inducement a deed from the old man for his farm of 200 acres of very valuable land.

GEN. JIM STEADMAN, Democrat, of Toledo, now in Washington, likens the political situation unto a game of "old sledge." He says: "The Democratic party just now is like an old fellow who went out West, flattering himself that he was mighty good at 'seven-up.' When he got home he told his friends that he met a young 'sucker' out on the plains, with whom he played a game at $25 a corner. 'I stood six,' said the old man, 'and the "sucker" stood five with the deal, and damme if he didn't jack himself out.'"

If the Electoral Commission had been composed of fifteen eminent Doctors of Divinity, eight of whom were ardent Republicans, and seven were ardent Democrats; if the questions involved had been thoroughly argued, and the Commission had then prayed over them for a week, does anybody doubt that, at the close of the exercises, every important question would have been decided by a vote of eight to seven? Such is political human nature.—N. Y. Sun.

MOVE ON.

The bright sunny rills keep on flowing
Along by the banks and the braes,
And not one summer blossom stops growing,
No matter how dark are the days.
The clouds, too, keep rolling and lifting,
To let the bright sun-arrows through;
Thus nature, by changing and shifting,
Keeps moving with plenty to do.

Stand still, and you miss the bright places
That wait for you farther along;
Stand still, and the blooming oasis
Will comfort you not with its song.
Move on, with the grand working army,
That labor with purpose of soul;
Move on, and the air will grow balmy,
And victory be yours at the goal.

Step back and there's small hope of winning,
For courage true fleetness must lend;
Step back at the very beginning,
And where will you be at the end?
Go forward, young sowers at dawning,
With gladness and hope to the field;
Go forward, for sweet is the morning
To labor for Autumn's rich yield.

Great worlds in their orbits are moving,
And planets unpeopled keep pace,
While, in contrast, all living and loving,
Dumb life adds its mite to the race.
Then why, in this busy creation,
That moves without rest or delay,
Oh, why, fair young souls of the nation,
Should man be the laggard to-day?

A Dancing Ghost.

For the past week or more, rumors of a haunted house have been freely circulated in the vicinity of Plymouth avenue, near Chorissa street, Rochester. Some two years since an old man of three score and ten, by the name of Gallager, died. He had been residing on Mausion street, and was rather eccentric in his habits as in dress. He invariably wore a blue coat with brass buttons, which he usually buttoned very high, thus displaying to an advantage the glittering buttons. Soon after his death his widow, it is said, disturbed by the strange noises about the house, changed her residence. Time passed on, and the present lodgers, by the name of Elmore, moved in. Two weeks since, Mr. Elmore, after being confined to the house for some time by illness, died. Previous to his death he had been much annoyed by the "phiz" of old Gallager appearing at his bedroom window, slamming the blinds, making grimaces, and other demonstrations. One night Mrs. Elmore went into the cellar to obtain some wood and was favored by a visit from Mr. Gallager in full uniform—blue coat and brass buttons. On the night of Mr. Elmore's "wake," when the corpse was being prepared for burial, strange rappings were heard, proceeding both from the floor and the ceiling. Two of the young men present ventured to go into the cellar with a candle, but on reaching the cellar door the light was extinguished, and they rushed wildly up stairs into the room, declaring they had seen old Gallager. A number of the neighbors of Mrs. Elmore have called upon their pastor, asking his assistance and advice, but were told to go home and not be foolish, that there's no ghost, and that it was wrong, as well as silly, to place any credit on what they had heard or observed. The more intelligent people in the vicinity are loth to believe any of the reports, while others who have staid all night in the house strongly assert that the house is frequently visited by the "spiritual manifestations" in the form of rappings, chairs, tables and barrels being turned over, and a few claim to have seen Gallager soon after midnight dancing a jig in which he even kicked his heels against the ceiling.—New York Mercury.

The Place Where the Sun Jumps a Day.

Chatham Island, lying off the coast of New Zealand, in the South Pacific Ocean, is peculiarly situated, as it is one of the habitable points of the globe where the day of the week changes. It is just in the line of demarkation between dates. There high twelve on Sunday, or noon, ceases, and instantly Monday meridian begins. Sunday comes into a man's house on the East side, and becomes Monday by the time it passes over the Western door. A man sits down to his noonday dinner on Sunday, and it is Monday noon before he finishes it.

There Saturday is Sunday and Sunday is Monday, and Monday becomes suddenly transferred into Tuesday. It is a good place for people who have lost much time, for by taking an early start they can always get a day ahead on Chatham Island. It took philosophers and geographers a long time to settle the puzzle of where Sunday noon ceased and Monday noon began, with a man traveling West fifteen degrees an hour, or with the sun. It is to be hoped that the next English Arctic expedition will settle the other mooted question: "Where will one stop who continues to travel in a Northwesterly direction?"

On the Southern Pacific Railroad, 340 miles south of San Francisco, is an unique piece of railroading, where the track after passing through a tunnel, winds around the mountain and crosses itself directly over the tunnel, thus gaining a height of seventy-eight feet on 3,795 feet of rail. About 100 miles further south the road runs through one of the longest tunnels in America, that of San Fernando, 6,976 feet in length.

Two Hundred Babies on Exhibition in Chicago.

"Going to see the babies?"

"Why, of course, and I am going to take Kitty, just to let her see the other babies."

That's what the fond mammas said yesterday, in the street-cars and in the streets.

Of course Kitty's mamma knew there would be no baby there quite so handsome as Kitty, but she felt a little ashamed to say she would enter her in the baby show. All these scruples vanished, however, on entering the Exposition Building and beholding the throng of other mothers, each with her own blessed baby.

Lots of cages and coops were seen, and a clamorous crowing, such as certainly no well-regulated baby ever accomplished. Surely this is not the baby show! Why, of course not; these are roosters. So we pass on to a smaller room, where the order of exercises was something like this: Enter a young mother, with a baby enveloped in much dry goods, new shoes and a veil wrapped around the baby's head. She gives a helpless look about until, spying a gentleman taking names of other angelic babies, she timidly asks:

"Is here where you take the names of the babies?"

"Yes, madam. What are the parents' names?"

"Anna Louisa Johnson."

"What is the baby's name?"

"John Henry Johnson." And the mother's face is radiant as the child's veil is removed and its beauty permitted to shine forth.

"How old is he?"

"Ten months and three days."

Oh, were they not exact in giving the ages! Some, not knowing of the restriction in regard to age, brought with them the smallest possible morsels of humanity, and dire was their grief when they found that no silver cup nor ten dollar gold piece was in store for them.

One woman, who brought a pair of chubby boys, said they were three years old last month, and on being told that none were received over three years old, said:

"Yes; but you'd not refuse such a pair of boys as these. Have you any more really as nice as these of mine?"

It will be observed that the fathers received but little credit for any of the blessed babies, he, in this case, being regarded as a silent partner, the mothers unscrupulously taking all the glory.

The babies behaved after the generality of infant cherubs, some sitting in solemn state, in embroidered dress and pink sash, without rumpling even one of the dainty curls, and others threatening to wiggle entirely out of all dry goods, and acting altgether more like a young pollywog than a specimen of the genus homo. It will not be a matter of surprise that the girls showed the least trace of original sin, while the boys were more prone to wander. The Secretary would occasionally step upon a dry goods box and, holding up a stray baby, inquire for an owner; but these little incidents caused scarce a ripple. The rooms were thronged with fond mammas, the babies who were showing and the admiring public. Were the babies pretty? Well, they didn't look like lumps of putty, as envious bachelors say all babies do, but some of them were uncommonly pretty-faced, while others were beautiful as one's dream of the angels.

There were two who attracted unusual attention on account of their size, one of them the daughter of J. Crabtree, 16 months old, a fair-haired little girl, who weighed 45 pounds, and another a year old yesterday, who weighed 40 pounds. The entries closed at 3 o'clock, and there were 182 babies. Of course, 109 were boys and 73 girls. This is looked upon by those who have considered the subject as a bad omen, for in any country the year preceding a war will be found to be more productive of boys than of girls.

No triplets were entered, but there were twelve pairs of twins. Of these, there were six pairs of girls, five pairs of boys, and one of a boy and a girl. Babies can be entered up to 12 o'clock to-day, but the attendants will have to pay the usual admission fee of 25 cents. The children will be arranged in classes and the prizes awarded this afternoon. An arbitration committee, consisting of two ladies and gentlemen for each class, will decide as to the handsomest and healthiest. There is some talk of having H. W. Beecher act as one of the judges. The babies will all have on their sweetest smiles, and it is expected that no rooster shall crow nor no baby shall squall. Phil Sheridan's baby is also expected to be present.—Chicago Inter-Ocean, Feb. 20.

We have taken wood, potatoes, corn, eggs, butter, onions, cabbages, chickens, stone, lumber, labor, sand, calico, second hand clothing, coon-skins and bug-juice on subscriptions in our time, and now a man writes us to know if we would send the paper six months for a large owl. There are few things an editor would refuse on subscription, and if we come across any fellow who is out of an owl, and is in need of one, we'll do it.—Osborn (Kan.) Farmer.

Homes of the Rothschilds.

The new mansion Baron Alphonse de Rothschild has been building in avenue Marigny, opposite the Elysee, is completed. It is one of the most splendid mansions in Paris. There is a mask of carved stone at each window; all the balconies are of bronze; all the ceilings are frescoed; all the partition-walls are of marble; all the floors are wooden mosaic. Dowager Baroness James de Rothschild has just completed her mansion between Rue Beaujon, Rue des Ecuries d' Artois and Boulevard Haussmann. Workmen are busily engaged in fitting up the late Baroness De Pontalba's mansion for Baron Gustave de Rothschild; he paid 890,000 for it; she spent $1,000,000 on it; he doesn't think it sumptuous enough for him. Baron Alphonse de Rothchild lives in Prince Talleyrand's palace, Rue St Florentin; the widow of Baron Nathaniel de Rothchild has a splendid mansion in Rue du Faubourg St. Honore. Baron Gustave de Rothchild has a marble palace in Rue Laffite—six splendid palaces inhabited by the Rothschild family in Paris alone. It is reckoned that the private residences of this family in England, France, Germany, Italy and Switzerland cost above $20,000,000.

Soon after Chief Justice Chase assumed the Guberuatorial chair in Ohio, he issued his proclamation appointing a Thanksgiving Day. To make sure of being orthodox, the Governor composed his proclamation almost entirely of passages from the Bible, which he did not designate as quotations, presuming that everyone would recognize them, and admire the fitness of the words, as well as his taste in their selection. The proclamation meeting the eye of a Democratic editor, he pounced at once upon it, and declared he had read it before—could not exactly say where—but he would take his oath that it was a downright plagiarism from beginning to end. That would have been a pretty fair joke; but the next day the Republican editor came out valiantly in defense of the Governor, pronounced the charge libelous, and challenged any man living to produce one single line of the proclamation that had appeared in print before.

He Shouldn't Have Lied.

"Are those genuine sausages?" asked he of the butcher.

"Yah," said the butcher, "dey ish gennine."

"Made of dog and cat, and all that," observed the man.

"Nein! nein! dey ish not!" indignantly replied the butcher; "I makes no dogs and cats meat in mine sausages."

"Well, then," said the man, walking off, "I don't want them; I'm after the genuine article."

The butcher was perplexed to lose the customer, and, gazing wistfully after him, reproachfully muttered:

"Yah, yah, it is somedimes better uff I toldt de truth."—Chicago Evening Journal.

A Wooden Watch.

We were shown yesterday, by Engineer Matt Franklin, a wooden watch made by Victor Doriot, of Bristol. The case is made of brier root, and the inside works, all except three of the wheels and the springs (which are metal), are of box-wood, while the face is made from a piece of the shoulder-blade of a cow, which was run over by a train and killed some time ago. It is an open faced watch with a glass crystal, and is an elegant piece of workmanship, displaying wonderful talent of the maker. It does not weigh more than an ounce. Matt says he has carried the watch a day or two, and it keeps as good time as any watch he ever carried.—Knoxville Chronicle.

A LAW of New York State runs as follows: Any inhabitant liable to highway tax who shall transplant by the side of the public highway any forest shade trees, or fruit trees of suitable size, shall be allowed by the Overseers of Highways, in abatement of his highway tax, one dollar for every four trees set out; but no row of elms shall be placed nearer than 70 feet; no row of maples or other forest trees nearer than 50 feet, except locust, which may be set 30 feet apart; and no allowance as before mentioned shall be made unless such trees shall have been set out the year previous to the demand for said abatement of tax, and are living and well protected from animals at the time of such demand.

Fleeing from Bliss.

About two weeks ago a young lady broke through the ice of a deep skating pond near Toronto, and a young man rescued her at the risk of his own life. As the half-drowned girl was recovering consciousness her agonized father arrived on the spot. Taking one of her cold, white hands in one of his own, he reached out the other for the hand of her rescuer, but the young man, realizing his danger, with one frightened glance broke for the woods and was soon lost to view. He has not been heard of since, and it is supposed that he is traveling in the United States under the false and hollow name of Smith.—Burlington Hawkeye.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

EIGHT hundred and fifty two convicts now laugdish within the walls of the State Penitentiary.

THE market reports speak of the tendency of provisions as "downward." What more natural?

WHY is a beautiful woman like a Hoe printing press? Because she makes a good impression.

A LADY wished a seat in a crowded hall. A handsome gentleman gave her a chair. "You are a jewel," she said. "Oh, no, I am a jeweler; I have just set the jewel."

THE St. Louis Republic announces that "Mr. Kindling, of Milwaukee, has 'cut sticks' for another world." It is easy to say that Kindling wood burns well, but it is hoped he will not.

"Do you ever have any 'hops' in Maine?" asked a Newport belle, who was dressing for a ball, of a country cousin from the pine State. "Oh, yes, lots; pa has forty acres of 'em in one field!"

"I CAN'T pass you to-night," said the door-keeper of a concert-room to an inveterate dead head. "Well, I don't want you to pass me," said the dead head, "you just stay where you are and I'll pass you."

A MAN fishing for trout on another man's land, the other day, completely silenced the owner, who remonstrated, with the majestic answer: "Who wants to catch your trout? I am only trying to drown this worm.

A DEMOCRAT, who has five hats and a dozen cans of oysters and a suit of clothes bet on the election, dropped dead in the street the other day, and when the doctors cut him up to see what ailed him, they found the word "Bradley" graven on his liver.

PETTENGILL says that the first "returning board" of which he has any recollection was a shingle in the hands of his father. The three—father, son, and shingle—used to hold frequent committee meetings in the back shed, but the returns came in so swiftly that a fair count was impracticable.

"BEFORE we were married," said he to a friend, "she used to say 'by-by' so sweetly when I went down the steps." "And now what does she say?" asked the friend. "Oh, just the same," exclaimed the man, "buy, buy." "Ah! I see," said the other; "she only exercises a little different 'spell' over you."

A BABY elephant has been born in Forepaugh's menagerie, now wintering at Germantown, Pa., and is the only one ever born on American soil. The mother is the performing elephant "Betsy," an enormous animal, over 11 feet high, and the new comer is only 18 inches in height, a male, and beautifully formed. The youngster is doing well.

A PARTY of vegetarians who were boarding at a water-cure establishment, while taking a walk in the fields, were attacked by a bull, which chased them furiously out of his pasture. "That's your gratitude, is it, you great, hateful thing?" exclaimed one of the ladies, panting with fright and fatigue. "After this I'll eat beef three times a day."

THE line, "Consistency's a jewel," originally appear d in Murtagh's collection of English and Scotch ballads. In the ballad of "Jolly Robyn Roughhead" are the following lines:

Tush! tush! my lassie! such thoughts resigne;
Comparisons are cruell,
Fine pictures suit in frames as fine,
Consistency's a jewel.
For thee and me coarse clothes are best;
Rude folks in homelye raiment drest,
Wife Joan and goodman Robyn.

"HOW far is it from here to Washington?" a traveler at an Albany hotel asked a dignified elderly stranger. "947,820,722,175,000 miles," was the reply, accompanied with a deep, deep sigh, and it takes about a million years to get there." Then the stranger put on his hat and walked away, and the traveler stared and asked the clerk if the old party was an escaped lunatic. "The gentleman who just went out the door?" demanded the indignant clerk. "That, sir, is Governor Tilden." And the traveler sat down and pondered and pondered until he lost his train.

THEY were playing poker, and Pomp held a full hand. His eye glistened with conscious triumph as he put up a ten-cent note and gazed at his partner expectantly. "I raise dat ten cents," remarked Pete. "I goes a quarter more," insinuated Pomp. "I stand you and raise anudder quarter," replied Pete. "I continue on the war path and flops down the last thirty cents," answered Pomp, placing six nickels on the table. "I kivers de pile and calls you," remarked Pete. "Full hand!" said Pomp, turning his cards. "What you got?" "A pair, and de game an undecided." "What's dat? Undecided? Dis yer chile takes de pile." "Not by a long chalk. Dis case will now be referred to de Returnin' Board, who will examine into de partikelars. Dar's plenty more good cards in de pack, and why didn't I get em. Dar's been intimidation and fraud, and meanwhile de Returnin' Board takes possession of de spoils."

THE North Kentucky Teachers Association was organized in Covington Saturday morning, for the counties of Boone, Kenton, Campbell, Pendleton, Grant, Owen, Gallatin, Carroll and Trimble. The officers elected for the ensuing year are as follows: President, H. J. Foster, of Boone; Vice-President, T. M. Barton, of Pendleton; Secretary and Treasurer, W. G. Lord, of Kenton; Executive Committee, Samuel Turley, of Gallatin, J. W. Hall, jr., of Kenton, H. D. Stratton, of Grant, R. H. Hodges, of Carroll, and F. P. Adams, of Kenton.

A DISPATCH from Louisville to the Cincinnati Enquirer, says: "President Grant has pardoned Claxton, New, Maigolyes, Settle, Hall and Bill Smoot, the celebrated Owen County (Kentucky) Ku-Klux, who were sentenced for conspiracy against the United States Government—the first four in May, 1875, to imprisonment in the Kentucky Penitentiary, Claxton, for two, and New, Settle and Maigolyes for three years each; and the last two, Hall and Smoot, in October, 1875—Hall for four years, and Smoot, who was the ring-leader, for five years."

THE session of the Forty-fourth Congress was concluded last Saturday at 12 o'clock, after an unparalleled session. The National Assembly never betore in its history experienced as boisterous a session as the one just past. On last Saturday, Hayes, in the presence of four or five prominent Republicans, took the oath of office, seemingly afraid to await to inauguration day, upon which occasion he again took the oath. The Inaugural Address is not an extensive one, but when considered, contains a good deal. In regard to Civil Service, Hayes says reform in this respect shall be thorough, radical, and complete; a return to the principles and practices of the founders of the Government. He says these founders never expected nor desired from public officers any partisan service. This assertion will do for some to build hopes upon. He also recommends one term of six years for the President.

LAND forfeited to the State for the non-payment of taxes thereon can be measured by the thousands of acres in Pendleton County. For years, Sheriffs have returned to the Auditor much valuable property as delinquent. Sheriff's advertisements for the sale of land for delinquent taxes, in December of each year, are a very prominent feature at the Court-house. The sales generally take place on the County Court day in January and there is but one prominent bidder present, that being the Commonwealth represented by the Sheriff. The Commonwealth by her purchasers in Pendleton has become wealthy and now wishes to receive the various amounts due, or a deed to her property. In this way, land has been returned as delinquent for twelve or fifteen years, and no effort by the State's agents has been made toward collecting this tax until within the past twelve months. The various per cents. added to this tax are enormous, in many instances upon land forfeited for three or four dollars, the taxes now amount to fifteen and twenty. Many of our best citizens live upon farms that are encumbered, they being innocent purchasers of land delinquent to the State. Taking this and the crookedness of our county affairs into consideration, we are impressed with the fact that tax matters are very much muddled in Pendleton. It is to the interest of all to have them speedily settled.—Falmouth Independent.

TWENTY years ago, February, 1857, Judge Drummond, in Utah, charged a jury that the Mormon marriage, so called, was illegal, and instructed the jury to indict all offenders. At that time Brigham Young had 68 women called his wives, Heber Kimball had 57, and all the headmen in the same proportion. How inadequately has law been executed there, these twenty years! Had the U. S. Government done its duty in that Territory, polygamy would have been exterminated ere this.—N. Y. Observer.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

ST. LOUIS, MO., March 20, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The RECORDER of last week is at hand seemingly enlarged, and without a doubt, greatly improved in matter and general appearance. It almost makes us feel proud, when we think our native county is able to support such an excellent paper. We reaffirm that the good people of that county owe it to themselves, as well as to the publisher, to support it well. It is truly a county paper, and goes in for an honest count. We see in last week's issue a record of events and incidents in almost every town and precinct in the county. We say every family, at least, in the county ought to take it, for who is there in this day and generation that would not know what is going on in his own county or home? We love to read it, as it carries us back to our childhood days, when we were full of hope, and life, to us, was but a garden of green things.

With us there is but little of interest to record, as we have had a dull and lifeless winter so far as business is concerned. We had fewer firm changes at the commencement of the year than usual, as business men generally seem to lack confidence in the future, and hardly possess energy enough to wind up and quit. Almost everyone seems to be waiting for something to turn up. We have had delightful weather for the past month, and now, as the worst of our winter, at least, has passed, and as our political troubles have seemingly reached a peaceful solution, we look for a revival in trade before many days.

Though we can not say we have had a hard winter on account of bad or disagreeable weather, yet it has, nevertheless, been a hard winter with many a poor soul. The Provident Association, an organization composed of the kind-hearted and the well-to-do of all nationalities and religions creeds, have fed and warmed about 2,750 families, the winter through. The Saint Vincent de Paul Society, a similar institution, run exclusively under the auspices of the Catholic Church, has cared for nearly an equal number. How many poor, houseless, homeless wanderers have been sheltered and fed by our city Soup Houses your correspondent does not pretend to say, but the number foots up thousands. We never see a poor laborer moving into the city, without thinking it is a pity that man and family has not some kind counselor to send him farther on, or keep him out of the city.

We have never given your readers a description of our new Chamber of Commerce Building, which is conceded the finest building of the kind in the United States, if not in the world. The main building, in length, extends from Pine Street to Chesnut, on the East, and covers three-fourths of the block in width. It is four stories high and contains 52 rooms, the Exchange Room, or hall, being 235 feet in length, 100 feet wide, and 65 feet from floor to ceiling. This was the hall in which the National Democratic Convention met last June, and will hold, standing, something near 30,000 persons. The material of which it is built, is principally Missouri stone or granite. The iron of same is also of Missouri production. The aggregate cost of same is about $1,800,000, and is considered fire and burglar proof. Competent judges say it is a more substantial building than our new Custom House, which will cost all of three times as much by the time it is completed or finished.

The present week, or the commencement of this month is an eventful season with grain dealers, as well as politicians. Prices of wheat the 1st, on yesterday, were off about 10 cents per bushel from the 1st of February. Corn about 6 cents, and rye about 5 cents, consequently those that sold short for the month of February pockets a heavy gain, and those that bought lose accordingly. We are sorry to say that our Call Board has gotten to be as much of a gambling institution as any other similar institution in the United States. Prices of grain are still downward, and is supposed that those who sold short on corn and wheat a month since for the month of March, will make a pile. We have the largest stock of wheat and corn in store ever known at this season of the year. At the close of last week the stock of grain in store was as follows, viz.: 377,509 bushels of wheat, 1,021,565 bushels of corn, 101,592 bushels of oats, 131,907 bushels of barley, 63,326 bushels of rye, and receipts this week are in excess of shipments on everything.

We quote market to-day about as follows: "Wheat, No. 2 $1 43½, No. 3 $1 40, No. 4 $1 26. Corn, No. 2 37@38c; rye, 64@65c.; oats, No. 2, 34c. Barley ranges in price from 25c. up to 90c. per bushel as per quality. This latter cereal is generally sold by sample.

My letter is now too long, and I will for the present quit. BOB A. LONG.

THE Ohio State Grange, which held its annual convention in this city last week, elected the following named officers: T. H. Ellis, Warren county, Master, re-elected; T. F. Joy, Delaware county, Overseer; J. W. Ogden, Lecturer; J. B. Goudy, Morgan County, Steward; S. G. Baldwin, Butler county, Treasurer; R. Stevenson, Secretary.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Three years ago Beeley James, a son of John James, living in Henry County, at the head of Pot Riffle branch, disappeared from his father's house, and was not heard from till last Friday, when a rumor reached Mr. James that Mr. Shuck, who is now in jail under sentence to be hung for the murder of his father-in-law, had confessed to his family that he had taken the life of this boy. Mr. James at once took up the rumor and ran it down. It seems Shuck told his brother, James Shuck, that he had killed Beeley James, and thrown his body in a sink-hole about two hundred yards from his father's house. This statement was repeated by James Shuck to his family, and through them it became known to the public. As soon as the place of murder was located a large number of citizens went to it and found a portion of the supposed remains of the boy. A large amount of brush had been thrown in the sink-hole and burned there, but an arm-bone and some other parts of a human skeleton were found. Mr. James is confident that these are the remains of his son, and he believes that Richard Shuck was his murderer. He brought the bones to town on yesterday, and had them examined by competent surgeons, who pronounced them human bones. The lad was only sixteen years of age, and had with him when he disappeared about fifteen dollars in money and a pistol. For this small gain he believes his life was taken.—Frankfort Yeoman.

ONE day last week R. C. Green made a flying trip to Union for the purpose of investigating the plan upon which C. B. Clarkson and Geo. There were three charges against each of the aforesaid druggists(?). The case was tried before Esquire Reuben Conner, of Walton. Upon the trial the defense depended somewhat upon "running" prescriptions issued by physicians, but the Judge decided that a prescription on the order of a "repeuter" is not recognized by the law as valid, and that they were no evidence that the accused kept a bona fide drug store. He adjudged them guilty of transgressing the local option law, and fined them $25 on each charge, making the sum total $150

J. J. Lillard vs. J. T. Grant and J. A. Botts; dismissed.

Felix Duffin vs. O. H. Conrad. Conrad, by his attorney, moved to dismiss for want of jurisdiction in the Quarterly Court of the appeal. This brought up the question of the validity of an act of the last Legislature entitled "An act regulating the civil jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace, Police Judges and Quarterly Courts, and the appellate jurisdiction of Circuit Courts from judgments, and to authorize the Quarterly Court to appoint Clerks." Duffin's attorneys contested the constitutionality of the act. After heavy arguments, the Court (Judge Phelps) decided the act unconstitutional, and it did not, therefore, transfer the appellate jurisdiction from his court to the Circuit Court, as claimed by Conrad's attorney. Duffin's attorneys then moved to dismiss the action, for the want of jurisdiction in the Justice's court that had originally tried the case, and this motion was sustained and the cause dismissed at Conrad's cost. Youell for Conrad; Green & Riddell for Duffin.

Miss Fuss Rogers, of Columbia, Ohio, was visiting Miss Sophia Finch last week. She came near smashing one of our young men.

Plattsburg.

It seems that about one-third of our population are moving. During the last week no less than six changes were made in the most important of which is that of our village blacksmith who goes to the mouth of Ashby Fork creek. Uncle Henry Smith will soon move into the house he purchased of Geo. White.

Mr. White's sale on last Wednesday was well attended and all articles of importance sold well. Geo. expects to go to Missouri in a few days.

Quite an enjoyable hop was had at Mr. Phillip's on last Wednesday night. It was not such huge affair as the Morgan Academy Hop, but all went as merry as a marriage bell.

Mr. John Voshell says the cats are very indignant because the dogs have been favored by a tax on their scalps. John thinks it will never do. Let's make this the next issue.

We had the pleasure, on last Friday night, of attending the Willoughby Debating Society where we found quite an attractive crowd of ladies and gentlemen. The speakers were all in attendance and the discussion quite lively. The subject for discussion was as follws: "Affirmed, that intemperance causes more distress than war." The debate was opened on the affirmative by Thomas Baker, who, in a stirring speech, showed the evils of intemperance. Four speeches on each side were made, each speaker being allowed sixteen minutes. The question being submitted to the judges they decided in favor of the affirmative. Next meeting the subject is, "Affirmed, that the negro has more right to complain against the white man than the Indian has."

DON JUAN.

Bulletsville.

Since the departure of our correspondent from Bulletsville for Texas, our community has suffered for want of publication. There are many important events transpiring here, the publication of which will throw much light on the great topics of the day. We will, therefore, try to post you in future.

There has been no notice in your columns of the close of the schools of Profs. Howe and Grigsby. The latter being quite a young man, closed his school without a whisper, but the former, assisted by Prof. Fred Youmans, a young gentleman fresh from the college walls of Cincinnati; entertained his patrons with quite an enjoyable exhibition. Every one in attendance seemed delighted with the entertainment. Prof. Grigsby, we are informed, has abandoned the profession of teaching, to engage in the more laborious, if not more honorable calling of a lawyer. Prof. Youmans is now teaching the school at the Brick, where Grigsby taught.

Our enterprising neighbor, Dr. R. H. Crisler, has added to the profession of medicine that of an agriculturist, and can be seen daily, when not professionally engaged, wending his way to the farm. At present his plantation is stocked only with a colored man, a yoke of Green River oxen, and a thinrind sow; and rumor says that the Indians on his farm are so deprodating that the man has been scalped, and the oxen and sow have run away.

But the climax of news out here is the location of Bro. John Winston in our midst. He has bought a farm from Monter Graves within hearing of Bulletsburg, and is happy. Your Petersburg correspondent can twit him no longer about Missouri, for Bro. John proudly reports: "McGregor is on his native heath again, without blood on his hands, and a conscience void of offense toward God and man."

The Grangers at Mt. Pleasant Grange are progressing finely, if one may judge of their progress by the numbers that attend their meetings. They seem to be working up the business feature of the Order lately, by the importation of sugar and molasses direct from the South. Co-operation is their watchword, and if they can accomplish any good results for agriculture, we would rejoice to see the entire farming fraternity united.

But we will not trespass further on your space.

Petersburg.

Dr. Terrill has sold his residence near town to Mr. R. Rundall. Mr. Thos. Graves has sold his property in town to Dr. Terrill. Park Berkshire has sold out his grocery business to his partner, J. H. Snyder, and his real estate to W. W. Smith. So now the spring moving begins in business-like style. Park is to build a house on his farm, join the Grangers, and go to work(?). He has an industrious look from the corners of his eyes, and, being of a musical turn, to hear him, as he sits on the fence this bright sunny week her with his eyes fixed on the country, warbling,

I want to be a Granger,

And wield the glittering hoe,

And smite the wild potato-bug

While skipping o'er the snow.

Is touching, and has a strong tendency to revive in our bosom some few of the feelings of industry that have lain there asleep so long.

Some loud groans in the cemetery, one night last week, put lightning into the heels of two young men from town, who had been taking their girls home from church. The groans were simply for amusement, and the effect was highly enjoyed by the groaner.

The two Smiths, of fishing notoriety, had the good fortune to fish up about $50 worth of heavy line one day last week. It is new, and was probably lost during the break-up of the ice last winter.

There was a sudden fall in the stock market last Friday night. Mrs. Casey's old cow fell into the open cellar at the corner of First and Broadway streets. Someone threw her a plank next morning, and she walked out.

By the way, we have been trying to hold onto an item of news all the week, but it just can't be done. The school has closed.

The meeting closed on Tuesday night of last week. There were three additions to the church.

The funeral of Mrs. J. G Gaines was preached by Rev. Wm. Winston on Tuesday to perhaps the largest audience ever seen in the church. Very many could not get inside the doors. No stronger testimonial could be given of the exalted station Mrs. Gaines held in the hearts of all her friends, than the fact that they came in such numbers to pay the last sad tribute to her memory. She was for many years a resident of this town, and her circle of faithful friends included everyone who ever knew her, for to know her was to love her.

CARROLL COUNTY—Liberty Station.

Liberty Station is a beautiful little place, situated on the Short-Line Railroad about 40 miles from Cincinnati, Ohio. It can boast of about 300 inhabitants, and has three dry goods and grocery stores, two drug stores, gun shop and undertaker shop. People get married here but never die, so the undertaker does not do a big business. There are all sorts of mechanics here and two large hotels, one kept by Mr. Carlisle, and the other by the veteran J. O. Campbell, of Boone, who is doing well here. He has connected with his hotel the noted sulphur springs of Liberty. These springs are similar to the Big Bone springs, though not so rich in salt. This is no objection to invalids, for it renders it more palatable, and therapeutically it is equally efficacious.

Honor to whom honor is due. Liberty Station can boast of the best brass band of any country place in the State. The band numbers fourteen, and their music is perfectly splendid. Mr. John O. Campbell gave the band boys a grand supper last Friday night, and the way Luther beat the big drum it was a caution to see.

The many friends of Wm. Shotwell will be sorry to learn that his estimable wife is expected to live but a few days.

Mrs. Than Green, of Petersburg, is visiting her father, Mr. Shotwell.

We met our friend, Dr. L. C. Cowen, who is spending a few days with his brother Jim.

There was preaching at the Baptist Church last Sunday. There will be preaching at Bramlette Baptist Church next Sunday.

MORE ANON.

GALLATIN COUNTY—Glencoe.

Being now at leisure, and thinking, perhaps, that some news items from this place would receive a welcome in your columns, I assume the grave responsibilities of reporter pro tem.

Our Sunday-school was reorganized on Sunday last, and promises to be a success.

The orators of Glencoe meet Friday evening to debate the question: "Affirmed, that works of fiction produce more good than evil." Much sound argument is expected.

We are much gratified to learn that the President has pardoned William Smoot. It is a universal belief that he (Smoot) has been much imposed upon by the Walker and Russell party.

Two highly dangerous fevers are prevailing to an alarming extent in this community, viz., the matrimonial and Black Hill fevers. The former is making sad havoc with our lads and lassies. Madame Rumor is circulating the report that one of Burlington's fair daughters will fall a victim to this little dreaded, yet none the less fearful, malady.

A very interesting meeting is now in progress, conducted by Revs. Beasly and Coppuge; thus far they have only received six additions.

Numerous efforts have been made to erect a church, but to no avail. The house in which we now hold religious services was formerly a bar-room. Converting King Alcohol's abode into a church speaks well for us, had it not been replaced by another, and a better one, which is the case.

The announcement that little Ruth would step into the shoes which the feet of Ulysses had changed into such a hideous shape, by his unconstitutional way of walking, fell like a thunder clapp on our quiet little village.

Almont is a rich golden sorrel, 16 hands high, and has a steady and well-balanced trotting action. The pedigree of this fine animal shows that he is akin to the fleetest trotters of the American turf, and of a family of horses that outsell any other now known.

Plows.

Call at Palmer's shop and examine the I. X. L. Plows. BURLINGTON, KY., MARCH 8.

LIGHT AND SHADOW.

In golden pomp at morn and eve
The purple mountains rise,
With banners bright of waving green
Gay flaunting to the skies;
But upward toiling, panting, slow,
Patient the fleetest step must go.

A winding pathway through the vale
Entices weary feet;
The shining waters sing of peace,
The morning breeze is sweet;
But nook or covert there is none
To shelter from the noonday sun.

The fainting traveler turns aside
To seek the woodland shade—
Beyond the thicket, stretching cool,
Invites the mossy glade.
But thorny is the tangled way,
And devious paths his steps betray.

The fleeciest cloud that graceful floats
In summer skies of light,
Within a veil of tender mist
Conceals the tempest's might;
And winds that stir with softest breath
Are freighted with the seeds of death.

The loveliest blossom that unfolds
Its beauty to the day
Must yield its treasured fragrance up,
Then droop and fade away;
And greenwood birds that sweetest sing
Are soonest gone on flitting wing.

The undertone of earth's delights
In sorrow's pensive sigh
Is mingled with the echoing breeze
Ere joy's glad accents die.
Of all the strains that saddest float
Are requiems blent with triumph's note.

Capital and Labor.

The best and sweetest friend of the laborer is economy. Save a little every day, lay it by, and it will soon become self-accumulating, by the safe and generous principle of compound interest. It is astonishing, with such a habit once formed, how soon the laborer may find himself enjoying all the pecuniary facilities which he has been in the habit of envying in the capitalist. We know that such a course involves self-denial, no indulgence in liquor, no sacrifice to superfluous fancies, no riotous living; but yet it does admit of all necessities and the intelligent cultivation of the mind. Indeed, this last purpose should never be lost sight of. If we know how to spend less than we receive, we have the philosopher's stone, says the stoic. Anything which is not absolutely needed is dear, no matter what the price may be; or, in other words, nothing is cheap which is superfluous.

Extreme measures defeat themselves. If, by any extraordinary combination, workmen should succeed in establishing five hours per day as the legal representative of a day's labor, is any intelligent person so blind as to suppose, for a single moment, that the laborer has really and pecuniarily benefited himself, though he gets as much for his five hours as he did formerly for ten hours of faithful work? The man's dollars, which he receives for circumscribed production, are worth just so much less as the amount of labor which he gives for them is diminished, and he will inevitably find their purchasing power to be in that exact ratio. Money is but the circulating medium; his labor is the real criterion of value. The loss of five hours, more or less, as the case may be, is just so much loss of real wealth in the world; and so long as the workman lives he is as much a loser as the capitalist who employs him. Of course, five hours will not produce so many shoes, hats or potatoes, consequently it will require more of those dollars to cover his feet and head and clothe him. A suit of clothes will cost him just so much more in proportion as his limited industry shall diminish the value of his dollar.

All associate interests, to be lasting, must be upon an equitable basis. The bargain that is one-sided and unreasonable can never be made to stand; all the legal documents that could be drawn upon that basis would be as naught. The laws of compensation are inevitable, and the rule of justification will come in, by and by, and assert itself. Employers and employed, master and men, are equally amenable to this great and good law of Providence. Be sure there is always a third, silent party to all of our bargains.—American Cultivator.

The Latest Swindle.

The latest swindle in the confidence line is a dodge for swindling farmers, which is now being practiced in some of the interior counties of the State. Several strangers will drive into an agricultural district. They stop at all the farm houses and make arrangements to take all the butter the farmer can furnish at fifty cents per pound. Further, it will be gathered by a fast special team, and the cash paid for it at the door. The pretense is that during the winter, the large cities will be crowded and that butter will be scarce. In this way all the farmers in the district are contracted with, and arrangements made to come for the butter on certain days and at certain points; the contract to go into effect in two weeks. A few days after the departure of the men, a drove of cows come along. They are fine-looking milch cows. The farmers, having a good living in view, think they might use a few more good cows. They try to buy them, but the drover doesn't seem anxious to sell. Finally, however, he is induced to sell two or three to each farmer, at a price considerably higher than the market value. He then departs, meets his partners, who put up the butter job, and they divide the profits.—Ex.

LETTER FROM TEXAS.

INDEPENDENCE, WASHINGTON CO., TEX.
February 22d, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

About four weeks since we arrived here, and since that time have been over considerable of the country. Seen some of the finest land, in our opinion, the sun ever shone on. The great drawback on the farmers in this country is the indifferent teams of horses and mules they have. What in Kentucky would be called a good team is not known in Texas. The horses are all of a small pattern.

At this writing we are about half done plowing for corn, and many of our neighbors are planting corn. Gardens abound with peas, beans and onions, and present a spring-time appearance.

We are highly pleased with this country, and don't hesitate in pronouncing it the country for a poor man. Here he gets everything furnished for the cultivation of a crop, and gets half of the crop when made. When he furnishes his own outfit for tending a crop on the shares, his portion is three-fourths.

If some of our friends who delight in fox chases were here, they could have all the fun they wish chasing jack-rabbits, foxes and deer. There are any quantity of small rabbits and quail here. You see we are well provided for in the game line.

The society here will compare favorably with that of any country. But a few nights since we attended a fine ball, where everything was conducted with as much style as any ever was in old Kentucky.

We would say to our friends, should any of them take a notion to come to Texas to till the soil, bring your teams and harness, for those you get here are indifferent, the latter being made of poor material.

A few days since, near here, a moderately well-improved farm of two hundred acres sold for $1,800—$1,000 of the amount cash, and the remainder on good time. Yours, J. H. MIRRICK.

A Hungry Dog.

How long may a dog subsist without either food or water is a question likely to arise after reading the following: On the third of January last a gentleman residing on Elm street lost a valuable dog of the spaniel breed. The animal was seen last by the owner's children, with whom it went out. Some days after the dog was missed the loss was advertised in the daily papers, but nothing was heard of the missing spaniel until Saturday last. In the forenoon of that day the children went into a house near by to amuse themselves. In the course of play one of them opened the door of a back room, when the missing dog was found lying in one corner of the apartment apparently dead. On a closer inspection, however, it was found that the poor animal was still alive, although reduced to little else than skin and bones. Without delay the children had their favorite—which was not able to crawl even—carried home, after which some nourishment was given it, and before many hours it had so far recovered as to be able to crawl. The disappearance of the dog is no way counted for. On the day when it was lost the children had been playing in the same empty house, and they must in leaving have accidentally shut him in, and gone and left him. From that day till Saturday nobody had been in the empty house, and there the dog had been for thirty-eight days without either food or water. To make sure that there was no source from which the animal could have had sustenance, the owner paid a visit to the house, and satisfied himself after a perfect scrutiny that there had been no food or water within reach. At the time the dog was imprisoned it was very fat, which had, no doubt, much to do with the fact of its having lived so long.—Toledo Blade.

Selecting Timber.

There are certain appearances characteristic of good wood, to what class soever it belongs. In the same species of wood, that specimen will in general be the strongest and the most durable which has grown the slowest as shown by the narrowness of the annual rings. The cellular tissue, as seen in the medullary rays (when visible), should be hard and compact. The vascular or fibrous tissue should adhere firmly together, and should show no wooliness at a freshly cut surface; nor should it clog the teeth of a saw with loose fibers. If the wood is colored, darkness of color is in general a sign of strength and durability. The freshly cut surface of the wood should be firm and shining, and should have somewhat of a translucent appearance. A dull chalky appearance is a sign of bad timber. In wood of a given species the heavy specimens in general are the stronger and more lasting. Among resinous woods, those which have the least resin in their pores, and, among non-resinous woods, those which have least sap or gum in them are in general the strongest and more lasting. Timber should be free from such blemishes as "clefts," or cracks radiating from the center; "cup shakes," or cracks which partially separate one annual layer from another; "upsets," where the fibers have been crippled by compression; "rind galls," or wounds in a layer of the wood, which have been covered and concealed by the growth of subsequent layers over them; and hollow or spungy places in the center or elsewhere, indicating the commencement of decay.—Rankine.

Moon Madness.

The popular belief that the moon's rays will cause madness in any person who sleeps exposed to them has long been felt to be absurd, and yet it has appeared to have its source in undoubted facts. Some deleterious influence is experienced by those who rashly court slumber in full moonshine, and probably there is no superstition to which the well-to-do pay more attention. Windows are often carefully covered to keep the moonbeams from entering the sleeping apartments. A gentleman living in India furnishes "Nature" with an explanation of the phenomenon which is at least plausible. He says: "It has often been observed that when the moon is full, or near its full time, there are rarely any clouds about; and if there be any clouds before the full moon rises, they are soon dissipated; and therefore a perfectly clear sky, with a bright full moon, is frequently observed. A clear sky admits of rapid radiation of heat from the surface of the earth, and any person exposed to such radiation is sure to be chilled by rapid loss of heat. There is reason to believe that, under the circumstances, paralysis of one side of the face is likely to occur from chill. This chill is more likely to occur when the sky is perfectly clear. I have often slept in the open air in India on a clear summer night, when there was no moon; and although the first part of the night may have been hot, yet toward two or three o'clock in the morning, the chill has been so great that I have often been awakened by an ache in my forehead, which I have as often counteracted by wrapping a handkechief round my head, and drawing the blanket over my face. As the chill is likely to be greatest of a clear night, and the clearest nights are likely to be those on which there is a bright moonshine, it is very possible that neurlagia, paralysis, or other similar injury, caused by sleeping in open air, has been attributed to the moon, when the proximate cause may really have been the chill, and the moon only a remote cause, acting by dissipating the clouds and haze (if it do so), and leaving a perfectly clear sky for the play of radiation into space."—"Scientific Miscellany," in the Galaxy for March.

Impure Literature.

Even on passing through the streets on their way to school, the eyes, and through them the minds of our children, are assailed by impure literature. We mean the flash newspapers and cheap novels which are offered for sale to half grown boys and girls by their venders, or thrust gratuitously into their hands as they pass, with the certainty that they will buy the succeeding numbers. Very few girls, and fewer boys, unless they have been forewarned, can resist the tempting dramatic pictures of kneeling women, with streaming hair, bravos armed to the teeth, etc. The opening chapters seem harmless enough, and the boy or girl, reared most probably in a refined and Christian home, plunges unchecked into this offal of kitchen literature. Without being actually obscene, these magazines suggest a good deal that is wrong. The views of life they present are those taken from the grogshop and gambling-hell; their very atmosphere is crime. A boy who would be simply disgusted by the open vice in publications which the law prohibits, accepts the concealed poison in these without suspicion. When we read of murderers of fourteen years old, of burglars of nine, of delicately reared girls in the first bloom of innocent youth, leaving their homes and coming to this city in the mad desire for adventure, to be rescued on the very verge of ruin, we can trace the motive cause in every case to these publications, or their dramatization on the boards of variety theaters. In even the best class of juvenile literature belonging to the present day there is too much fever and unrest. The child's brain, crammed and forced at school, is still further heated by tales of wild adventure or fantastic improbability. And if our best juvenile literature is thus open to criticism, what is to be said of the worst?

Growing Old.

It is the solemn thought connected with middle life that life's last business is begun in earnest; and it is then, midway between the cradle and the grave, that a man begins to marvel that he let the days of youth go by so self-enjoyed. It is the pensive autumn feeling; it is the sensation of half sadness that we experience when the longest day of the year is past, and every day that follows is shorter, and the light fainter, and the feebler shadows tell that nature is hastening with gigantic footsteps to her wintery grave. So does man look back upon his youth. When the first gray hairs become visible, when the unwelcome truth fastens itself upon the mind that a man is no longer going up hill, but down, and that the sun is always westering, he looks back on things behind. When we were children, we thought as children. But now there lies before us manhood, with its earnest work, and then old age, and then the grave, and then home. There is a second youth for man, better and holier than his first, if he will look on, and not look back.—F. W. Robertson.

"AMELIA," he said "what delicious weather this is! How the fervent billows of sunshine beat down through the blue abysses of yonder sky!" "And oh! it feels so good, Eugene—just as if somebody was pouring warm oil down your back."

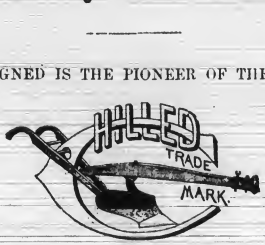
THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.
SUPPLEMENT.

BURLINGTON, KY., MARCH 8, 1877.

A REMARKABLE accident occurred at Corpus Christi, Texas, resulting in the death of an estimable Mexican lady. A gentleman shot at a cat near him with a large cartridge pistol. The ball missed the cat but struck a shell or some other hard substance and glanced almost at right angles, traversing a distance of about eight hundred feet in an air line, passed through the window, struck the woman just back of the car, passed out of her head on the other side, and was buried in a board when found. Death was almost instantaneous.



THAT two circus performers should consent to be married in the ring, and thus be used as an attraction to the show, is not remarkable; but that a clergyman could be found to take part in the exhibition is astonishing. Such a thing took place in Philadelphia, the persons being Miss Ella Stokes, a rider, and Rudolph Mette, an athlete, and the Rev. S. S. Huff, an Episcopal pastor. The bride and the groom appeared as usual in the regular entertainment and then the marriage ceremony was performed, to the great diversion of the assembly.

THE married friend of ours who is ambitious and always cautious, has just commenced a brand new diary, and while ambition prompts him to put down all his little happenings, caution holds him back. As he has been married nine years, and his wife is excitable, he always yields to caution, and instead of embodying in his dairy a visit to the masquerade when he announced a press of business at the office, he puts down. "Tried for six hours last night to find that error in the ledger, but had to give it up at 2 a. m." It is a curious case.

THE Herald has sent an expedition into Florida to discover what causes that column of smoke in the depths of the Everglades. As an eminent lawyer of Covington once remarked, "Where there is so much smoke there must be some truth," and with the pillar of smoke before them by day, the Herald party propose to contribute that truth to science. Perhaps it is the smoke of that big gun which Jules Verne says was fired off from Florida at the moon. But the Herald proposes to receive evidence aliunde Verene's veracious narrative.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Facts Worthy of Consideration.

THE UNDERSIGNED IS THE PIONEER OF THE CELEBRATED

OLIVER CHILLED PLOW

in Kentucky. He is the Exclusive Agent

for the sale of it in Boone County, and has been to much expense and labor in introducing it, against the prejudice of farmers and competition of dealers in other plows. But, knowing its merits, he has persevered until it is acknowledged a success by a large majority of our best farmers.

Dealers in other plows, who

SAID MANY ILL-NATURED THINGS

about it at first, are now trying to reap the benefit of his labor by selling the same plow in the above named territory. Is it not justice, as well as our interest, to

PATRONIZE HOME TRADE,

When we get the same article for the same money?

THE LOUISVILLE COMMERCIAL is by far the ablest political journal published in the South.—Alabama State Journal.

THE LOUISVILLE COMMERCIAL,

Published daily (except Monday) and weekly, by the Louisville Commercial Co., is regarded as the

LEADING REPUBLICAN NEWSPAPER OF THE SOUTHWEST.

IT purposes in the future to follow, with increased vigor and truthfulness, the course marked out in the past—an earnest, truthful and fair-minded support of what it believes to be good in Republicanism, and an unsparing criticism of what it conceives to be wrong, in or out of the Republican organization. But the chief purpose of THE COMMERCIAL is to furnish a really good general daily newspaper at a price within the Reach of the Masses of the People.

To this end it will bring its very best energies, backed by a material improvement in its methods, resources and equipment. Everything possible will be done to provide a

First-Class Paper at Second-Class Prices.

The Daily Commercial,

A large sheet of forty-eight columns, in neat and convenient quarto form, is furnished, postage prepaid, at the following rates:

Per year, $10. Per month, 85c.

To meet the wants of remote country subscribers we will send

Five Copies, One Year, postpaid, for $44
Ten Copies, One Year, postpaid, for $80

To secure this special rate, which makes THE COMMERCIAL the cheapest first-class daily newspaper in the country, the names and money for the complete club must be sent at one time. No paper sent by mail until paid for.

The Weekly Commercial

Is confidently recommended as equal to any similar paper in the United States. It is a neat and pretty quarto in form, having eight, six-column pages, printed on good paper, on large, plain type, and one of the most attractive papers in the world.

It is Republican in principle, but thoroughly independent, fair and frank, uncontrolled by the commands of men, cliques or party.

It has the best and brightest of short and continued stories.

Its editorial discussion is live, able, earnest and candid.

It gives all the telegraphic and general news, home and foreign, and full Congressional reports during the session.

Its miscellaneous selections are always choice and attractive.

It gives the fullest and always reliable market and financial reports from every great commercial center.

Its agricultural department is carefully edited for practical farmers.

It has a "Household" department, designed expressly for housekeepers, and always full of practical suggestions, queries for answers, valuable receipes, etc., worth the price of a year's subscription every week.

Its advertising space is closely limited, and will be still further reduced on expiration of existing contracts, so as to give the greatest allowance for reading matter.

It is furnished at the following prices:

Single Copies, One Year, postpaid, $2 00
In Clubs of Five to Ten, each copy, 1 60
In Clubs of Ten or more, each copy, 1 50

Every Republican and all Democrats

Who wish to read a fair presentation of Republican views, and to receive a good general newspaper, should take the Louisville Commercial.

AGENCY WORK.

We employ no traveling agents, but wish to have, in every neighborhood, a reliable and trusted citizen who will endeavor to secure subscribers, and who may be known in his locality as the regular agent of THE COMMERCIAL. We offer to all regular agents, and to all who will get up clubs, a discount of 20 per cent. on regular subscription prices, which may be deducted from money sent on subscription account, or their choice from our new and splendid List of Premiums. THINGS past may be repented, but not recalled.

IF Smith has a red nose, are we permitted to look upon that as a port-trait?

CICERO said, that no one dances while sober. If Cicero was right, then certainly every dance is a reel.

AN Irish lover remarks that it is a great comfort to be alone, "especially when yer sweetheart is wid ye."

A FOND mother remarked: "Yes, I want my daughter to study rhetoric, for she can't fry pan cakes without smoking all the house up.

THE farmers in Nebraska have commenced the domestication of the buffalo. In some respects the buffalo is safer for a parlor pet than the Spitz.

CANADA has a deficit of $1,900,785 in her budget this year, the first balance on the wrong side since the confederation. The falling off in revenues, owing to the world-wide financial depression, is the cause.

THE Yankees debate strange questions down East. The last was, "What is the difference between the Bridge of Sighs and the size of a bridge?" The next is to be, "The difference between a fac-simile and a sick family."

AN Irish gentleman declared to his wife he wished the children could be kept in the nursery while he was at home; "although," he considerately added, "I would not object to their noise if they would only keep quiet."

"IT is a very unclerical practice, and I must say a very uncleanly one. Tobacco. Why, sir, even a hog would not chew it!" "Father C.," responded his amused listener, "do you chew tobacco?" "I? No, sir!" he answered, gruffly, with much indignation. "Then, pray, which is most like the hog, you or I?" The old doctor's fat sides shook with laughter, as he said, "Well, I have been fairly caught this time."

THE last swindle out is a pocket distillery. A fellow named Thurber has been in Indiana, Ohio and Michigan selling the people what he calls a "condenser," but what is termed by revenue officials a "pocket-distillery." These condensers have a capacity of three, five, or eight gallons each, and can be set upon a common stove. The penalty for this kind of villiany is the same as that for any other kind of illicit distillation, so that every one had better keep hands off.

PUMPKIN PIES.

Clipped from Harper's Bazar and Dedicated to our Friend B. K. S.

I've tried the best in East and West,
I've lunched 'neath tropic sun,
I've tested all the fruits that fall,
And like them every one.
But, North or South, no human mouth,
I will the world apprise,
Ever tasted food one-half so good
As our own pumpkin pies.

Upon the vine, in rain and shine,
Through fragrant day and night,
The yellow globe in emerald robe
Drinks up the summer light.
Oh, golden sweet, the suns repeat
To mold thy luscious size,
That we may come and roll thee home,
And make our pumpkin pies.

Our lovely girls, with shining curls
Put neatly in a cap,
Cut slice on slice and peel it nice,
And stew it to a pap;
Then milk is had, and eggs they add,
And sweeten as is wise,
While others haste to spice to taste
These home-made pumpkin pies.

Oh, pure and fair, this food so rare,
Made up of all that's best!
No creature's path goes to its grave,
But only nature's zest;
For summer days, and autumn's haze,
And smiles from beauty's eyes,
Are in the dish, mixed to our wish,
That we call pumpkin pies.

No wonder, then, that loyal men,
From Florida to Maine,
Their quarter eat, the same repeat,
And pass their plate again;
That exiles fret with vain regret,
And vex the air with sighs,
When forced to stay in climes away
From their own pumpkin pies.

So to our boast I give a toast,
Embroidered all in rhyme;
May pumpkins round walk as abound
Through future autumn-time!
And may our girls, with shining curls
And tender beaming eyes,
All learn by heart the happy art
Of making pumpkin pies!

HAYES' INAUGURAL ADDRESS,

Delivered at Washington, March 5, 1877.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: We have assembled to repeat the public ceremonial begun by Washington, observed by all my predecessors, and now a time-honored custom which marks the commencement of a new term of the Presidential office. Called to the duties of this great trust, I proceed, in compliance with usages, to announce some of the leading principles on the subjects that now chiefly engage the public attention by which it is my desire to be guided in the discharge of those duties. I shall not undertake to lay down irrevocably principles or measures of administration, but rather to speak of the motives which should animate us; to suggest certain important ends to be attained, in accordance with our institutions and essential to the welfare of our country.

At the outset of the discussions which preceded the recent Presidential election, it seemed to me fitting that I should fully make known my sentiments in regard to several of the important questions which then appeared to demand the consideration of the country. Following the example, and in part adopting the language, of one of my predecessors, I wish now, when every motive for misrepresentation has passed away, to repeat what was said before the election, trusting that my countrymen will candidly weigh and understand it, and that they will feel assured that the sentiments declared in accepting the nomination for the Presidency will be the standard of my conduct in the path before me, charged as I am with the grave and difficult task of carrying them out in the administration of the government, so far as depends, under the Constitution and laws, on the Chief Executive of the nation.

THE SOUTHERN QUESTION.

Permanent pacification of the country upon such principles and by such measures as will secure the complete protection of all its citizens in the full enjoyment of all their constitutional rights is now the one subject in our public affairs which all thoughtful and patriotic citizens regard of supreme importance. Many of the calamitous effects of the tremendous revolution which has passed over the Southern States still remain; the immeasurable benefits which will sooner or later surely follow the hearty and generous acceptance of the legitimate results of that revolution have not yet been realized. Difficult and embarrassing questions meet us at the threshold of this subject. The people of these States are still impoverished, and the inestimable blessing of wise, honest and peaceful local self-government is not fully enjoyed. Whatever difference of opinion may exist as to the cause of this condition of things, the fact is clear that, in the progress of events, the time has come when such government is an imperative necessity, required by all the varied interests, public and private, of these States. But it must not be forgotten that only a local government which recognizes and maintains inviolate the rights of all is a true self-government. With respect to the two distinct races, whose peculiar relations to each other have brought upon us the deplorable complications and perplexities which exist in these States, it must be a government which decides the interest of both races can fully and equally; it must be a government which submits loyally and heartily to the Constitution and laws—the laws of the nation and the laws of the States themselves, accepting and obeying faithfully the whole Constitution as it is. Resting upon this sure and substantial foundation, the superstructure of beneficent local governments can be built up and not otherwise. In furtherance of such obedience to the letter and the spirit of the Constitution, and in behalf of all that its attainment implies, all so-called party interests lose their apparent importance, and party lines may well be permitted to fall into insignificance. The question we have to consider, the immediate welfare of these States of the Union, is the question of government or no government—of social order, and all the peaceful industries and the happiness that belong to it, or a return to barbarism. It is a question in which every citizen of the nation is deeply interested, and with respect to which we ought not to be, in a partisan sense, either Republicans or Democrats, but fellow-citizens and fellow-men, to whom the interests of a common country and of a common humanity are dear.

THE FREEDMEN.

The sweeping revolution in the entire labor system of a large portion of our country and the advance of four millions of people from a condition of servitude to that of citizenship, upon an equal footing with their former masters, could not occur without presenting problems of the gravest moment, to be dealt with by the emancipated race, by their former masters and by the General Government, the author of the act of emancipation. That it was a wise, just and providential act, fraught with good for all concerned throughout the country; that a moral obligation rests upon the National Government to employ its constitutional power and influence to establish the rights of the people it has emancipated, and protect them in the enjoyment of those rights when they are infringed or assailed, is also generally admitted. The evils which affect the Southern States can only be removed or remedied by the united and harmonious efforts of both races, actuated by motives of mutual sympathy and regard, and while in duty bound and fully determined to protect the rights of all by every constitutional means at the disposal of my administration, I am sincerely anxious to use every legitimate influence in favor of honest and efficient local government as the true resource of these States for the promotion of contentment and prosperity of their citizens. In the effort I shall make to accomplish this purpose I ask the cordial co-operation of all who cherish an interest in the welfare of the country, trusting that party ties and prejudices of race will be freely surrendered in behalf of the great purpose to be accomplished in the important work of

RESTORATION IN THE SOUTH.

It is not the political situation alone that merits attention. The material development of that section of country has been arrested by the social and political revolution through which it has passed, and now needs and deserves the considerate care of the National Government, within the just limit prescribed by the Constitution, and a wise public economy; but at the basis of all prosperity, for that as well as for every other part of the country, lies the improvement of the intellectual and moral condition of the people. Universal suffrage should rest upon universal education; to this end liberal and permanent provision should be made for the support of the free schools by the State governments, and, if need be, supplemented by legitimate aid from the national authority. Let me assure my countrymen of the Southern States that it is my earnest desire to regard and promote their truest interests—the interests of the white and of the colored people both and equally—and to put forth my best efforts in behalf of a civil policy which will forever wipe out in our political affairs the color line and the distinction between the North and the South, to the end that we may not have merely a united North or a united South, but a united country.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

I ask the attention of the public to the paramount necessity of reform in our civil service; a reform not merely as to certain abuses and practices of so-called official patronage which have come to have the sanction of usage in several departments of our Government, but a change of system of appointments itself; reform that shall be thorough, radical and complete; a return to the principles and practices of the founders of the Government. They never expected nor desired from public officers any partisan service; they meant that public officers should owe their whole service to the Government and to the people; they meant that the officer should be secure in his tenure as long as his personal character remained untarnished and the performance of his duties satisfactory. They held that appointments to office were not to be made nor expected merely as rewards for partisan services, nor merely on the nomination of members of Congress as being entitled in any respect to the control of such appointments. The fact that both political parties of the country, in declaring their principles prior to the election, gave prominent place to the subject of the reform of our civil service, recognizing and strongly urging its necessity in terms almost identical in their specific import with those I have here employed, must be accepted as conclusive argument in behalf of these measures; it must be regarded as the expression of the united voice and will of the whole country upon this subject, and both political parties are virtually pledged to give it their unreserved support.

ONE TERM FOR PRESIDENT.

The President of the United States of necessity owes his election to office to the suffrage and zealous labors of a political party, the members of which cherish with ardor, and regard as of essential importance the principles of their party organization; but he should strive to be always mindful of the fact that he serves his party best who serves his country best. In furtherance of the reform we seek, and in other important respects a change of great importance, I recommend an amendment to the Constitution prescribing a term of six years for the Presidential office, and forbidding a re-election.

THE FINANCES.

With regard to the financial condition of the country I shall not attempt an extended history of the embarrassment and prostration which we have suffered during the past three years. The depression in all the various commercial and manufacturing interests throughout the country, which began in September, 1875, still continues. It is gratifying, however, to be able to say that there are indications all around us of a coming change to prosperous times. Upon the currency question, intimately connected as it is with this topic, I may be permitted to repeat here that the statement made in my letter of acceptance, that in my judgment "the feeling of uncertainty inseparable from an irredeemable paper currency, with its fluctuations of values, is one of the greatest obstacles of a return to prosperous times. The only safe paper currency is one which rests upon a coin basis, and is at all times and promptly convertible into coin." I adhere to the views heretofore expressed by me in favor of Congressional legislation in behalf of the early resumption of specie payment, and I am satisfied, not only that this is wise, but that the interests, as well as the public sentiment, of the country demand it.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Passing from these remarks upon the condition of our own country to consider our relations with other lands, we are reminded by the international complications abroad, threatening the peace of Europe, that our traditional rule of non-interference with the affairs of foreign nations has been of great value in past times, and ought to be strictly observed. The policy inaugurated by my honored predecessor, President Grant, of submitting to arbitration grave questions in dispute between ourselves and foreign powers points to a new, and incomparably the best, instrumentality for the preservation of the peace, and will, as I believe, become a beneficent example of the course to be pursued in similar emergencies by other nations. If, unhappily, questions of difference should at any time during the period of my administration arise between the United States and any foreign government, it will certainly be my disposition and my hope to aid in their settlement in the same peaceful and honorable way, thus securing to our country the great blessings of peace and mutual good offices with all nations of the world.

THE LAST NATIONAL CONTEST.

Fellow-citizens, we have reached the close of a political contest marked by the excitement which usually attends the contests between great political parties whose members espouse and advocate with earnest faith their respective creeds. The circumstances were perhaps in no respect extraordinary, save in the closeness, and the consequent uncertainty of the result. For the first time in the history of the country it has been deemed best, in view of the peculiar circumstances of the case, that the objections and questions in dispute with reference to the counting of the electoral votes should be referred to the decision of a tribunal appointed for this purpose, and that tribunal, established by law for this sole purpose, its members, all of them, men of long established reputation for integrity and intelligence, and, with the exception of those who are also members of the Supreme Judiciary, chosen equally from both political parties, its deliberations, enlightened by the research and the arguments of able counsel, were entitled to the fullest confidence of the American people. Its decisions have been patiently waited for, and accepted as legally conclusive by the general judgment of the public. For the present, opinion will widely vary as to the wisdom of the several conclusions announced by that tribunal. This is to be anticipated. In every instance where matters of dispute are made the subject of arbitration, under the forms of law, human judgment is never unerring, and is rarely regarded as otherwise than wrong by the unsuccessful party in the contest. The fact that two great political parties have in this way settled a dispute, in regard to which good men differ as to the law no less than as to the proper course to be pursued in solving the question in controversy, is an occasion for general rejoicing. Upon one point there is entire unanimity in public sentiment—that conflicting claims to the Presidency must be amicably and peacefully adjusted, and that, when so adjusted, the general acquiescence of the nation ought surely to follow. It has been reserved for a government of the people, where the right of suffrage is universal, to give to the world the first example in the history of a great nation in the midst of a struggle of opposing parties for power, hushing its party tumults to yield the issues of the contest to adjustment according to the forms of law.

Looking for the guidance of that Divine Hand by which the destinies of nations and individuals are shaped, I call upon you, Senators, Representatives, Judges and fellow-citizens, here and everywhere, to unite with me in an earnest effort to secure to our country the blessing, not only of material prosperity, but of justice, peace and union—a union depending not upon the constraint of force, but upon the loving devotion of a free people; that all things may be so ordered and settled upon the best and surest foundations, and that piety may be established among us for all generations.

A Religious Card Player.

A private soldier by the name of Richard Lee was taken before the Magistrate at Glasgow for playing cards during divine service. The account was thus given in the English Journal:

A sergeant commanded the soldiers at the church, and when the parson had read the prayers he took the text. Those who had a Bible took it out; but this soldier had neither Bible nor Common Prayer-book, but, pulling out a pack of cards he spread them before him. He first looked at one and then the other. The sergeant saw him and said:

"Richard, put up the cards; this is no place for them."

"Never mind that," said Richard.

When the services were over, a Constable took Richard a prisoner and brought him before the Mayor.

"Well," said the Mayor, "what have you brought the soldier for?"

"For playing cards in church."

"Well, soldier, what have you to say for yourself?"

"Much, I hope, sir."

"Very good; if not, I will punish you severely."

"I have been," said the soldier, "about six weeks on the march. I have neither Bible nor prayer-book. I have nothing but a pack of cards, and I hope to satisfy your Worship of the purity of my intention."

Then, spreading the cards before the Mayor, he began with the ace.

"When I see the ace, it reminds me that there is but one God. When I see the deuce, it reminds me of Father and Son. When I see the tray, it reminds me of Father, Son and Holy Ghost. When I see the four, it reminds me of the four Evangelists that preached—Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. When I see the five, it reminds me of the five wise virgins that trimmed their lamps; there were ten, but five were wise, and five were foolish and were shut out. When I see the six, it reminds me that in six days the Lord made heaven and earth. When I see the seven, it reminds me that on the seventh day God rested from the great work which He had made and hallowed it. When I see the eight, it reminds me of the eight righteous persons that were saved when God destroyed the world, viz., Noah and his wife, his three sons and their wives. When I see the nine, it reminds me of the lepers that were cleansed by our Saviour; there were nine out of ten that never returned thanks. When I see the ten, it reminds me of the Ten Commandments, which God handed down to Moses on the tables of stone. When I see the King, it reminds me of the great King of Heaven, which is God Almighty. When I see the Queen, it reminds me of the Queen of Sheba, who visited Solomon, for she was a wise woman as he was a wise man; she brought with her fifty boys and girls, all dressed in boys' apparel, for King Solomon to tell which were the boys and which were the girls; the King sent for water for them to wash; the girls washed to the elbows and the boys to the wrists, so King Solomon told by this.

"When I count the number of cards in a pack, I find fifty-two—the number of weeks in a year. I find there are twelve picture cards in a pack, representing the number of months in a year; and on counting the tricks, I find thirteen—the number of weeks in a quarter.

"So, you see, a pack of cards serves for a Bible, almanac and Common Prayer-book."

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL,
Editor and Proprietor.

BURLINGTON, KY., MARCH 15.

SENATOR CAMERON, of Wisconsin, is quite ill of typhoid fever.

JOHN D. LEE, the Mountain Meadow murderer, is sentenced to be hung, the 23d inst.

GOVERNOR GROVER, of Oregon, has taken his seat in the Senate of the United States.

THE city of New York has a larger debt than any other city in the United States. Massachusetts has the largest State debt.

IN New York, a few days since, a five story brick building fell. The loss is estimated at $50,000. Defective girders caused the fall.

IT appears that Mr. Hayes has embarked upon a turbulent party sea. A hurricane of discontent commenced raging immediately upon his induction into office.

SHERMAN is quoted as having said that it will be the policy of the new Administration to appoint none but native born Southern men to places in the South.

THE Fort Worth (Texas) Democrat says: "County Judges and Precinct officers in all portions of the State are handing in their resignations. Too much reform does the work."

THE State Grange in New Jersey has appointed a Committee on Legislation. The duty of the Committee is to examine, press or oppose bills affecting the interest of Patrons.

THE epizootic appeared among the carhorses in Brooklyn in a very angry type a few days since. Several were slain by it and considerable excitement produced. The animals last about twenty-four hours after being attacked.

THE Lake Shore Railroad Company has agents around paying for the victims of the Ashtabula disaster. One widow received $5,100 for her husband that was killed there. There are a great many husbands who, no doubt, could be spared for a less amount.

BLAINE, being rubbed, seems determined to break with the Administration and run a machine of his own. Blaine would be highly pleased could he run the Administration after the order of his own conception of right. It's too early in the season for sunpains—something might be expected.

ALL the chairs in the Senate being too small for Senator David Davis, the one which was made expressly for Mr. Dixon H. Lewis, a Senator many years ago from Alabama, was placed at his desk. It measures in the seat thirty-three by twenty-five inches. Lewis weighed 400 pounds.

THE Providence Tool Company is filling the largest contract ever given to a private armory. It is making six hundred thousand Martin-Henry rifles for the Turkish Government. The Turks are urging the rapid fulfillment of the contract, and the Company are turning out these guns at the rate of one thousand per day. About one-half the order was filled last year.

THE United States Supreme Court has decided, in the case of Munn and Scott against the people of Illinois, that the State has a right to fix by law the maximum of charges of storage of grain in warehouses at Chicago, and other places in the State having not less than 100,000 inhabitants, in which grain is stored in bulk, and "in which the grain of different owners is mixed together, or in which grain is stored in such a manner that the identity of different lots or parcels can not be accurately preserved," as provided for by the Legislature. This was known as the Grange case.

THE following report of sales of tobacco are reported by the Western Tobacco Journal of last week:

77 hhds. and 1 box new Owen County (Ky.) District—82 at $3 20@5 90; 25 at $6@7 95; 18 at $8@9 70; 2 at $10; 1 box at $2 85.

34 hhds. and 7 boxes new West Virginia—26 at $3@5 80, 7 at $6 20@8; 7 boxes at $8@6 50.

8 hhds. new Southern Illinois at $2 40 @6 20.

THE CABINET.

The following is the Cabinet as appointed by R. B. Hayes and presented to, and confirmed by, the Senate:

William M. Evarts, of New York, Secretary of State.

John Sherman, of Ohio, Secretary of the Treasury.

George W. McCrary, of Iowa, Secretary of War.

Richard W. Thompson, of Indiana, Secretary of the Navy.

Charles Devens, of Massachusetts, Attorney-General.

David M. Key, of Tennessee, Postmaster-General.

Carl Schurz, of Missouri, Secretary of the Interior.

Evarts, chosen as Secretary of State, is an able and distinguished lawyer, who, near the end of Andrew Johnson's term of office as President of the United States, was appointed Attorney-General. Evarts defended Johnson in the impeachment trial. He has not been an exceedingly active Republican in the past.

John Sherman is considered by some the ruling spirit, and a man of considerable experience in finance, having been Chairman of the Financial Committee for a long time. His ability to fill the office of Secretary of the Treasury is claimed to be an improvement on Secor Robinson. Sherman has been taking an active part in behalf of Hayes since the 7th of November, and is thus rewarded.

Geo. W. McCrary, Secretary of War, is a lawyer by profession and has served in the House of Representatives during four sessions.

Richard W. Thompson, Secretary of the Navy, is a particular friend of Oliver P. Morton. He figured extensively in campaigns twenty years since. He has served in the Indiana Legislature and in Congress; but, excepting his appearing as chairman of the Indiana delegation in several National Conventions, he has been before the public but little of later years. He has been sleeping politically for several years, but was awakened by Morton for the purpose of taking a part in the Cabinet of Hayes, this being as near Morton could come to getting an appointment.

Charles Devens, Attorney-General, was a Whig, then a Democrat and is now registered a Republican; but so well liked by the Democrats of Massachusetts that they once came near running him for Governor. He was called to the Cabinet from his seat as Judge of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts. Devens has also filled the role of a soldier and to no discredit to himself.

David M. Key, Postmaster-General, is a Democrat, commanded a regiment in the Confederate Army, and at the death of Andrew Johnson was appointed to fill the vacancy thus produced in the United States Senate. To him the Republicans raise the most serious objections, but some are willing to accept it as a support of the change in the Southern Policy.

Carl Schurz, Secretary of the Interior, has tried both political parties, and, at last having been given a seat in the Cabinet, will henceforth be a Republican, unless he thinks there is a chance for a fat office in the Democratic household. Schurz's appointment is a left-handed compliment to Zack Chandler.

In looking over the Cabinet appointments one may ask where is Morton, Wells, Chandler and Blaine? To say the least, it looks singular that Hayes should leave these men, who appeared willing to be martyred in behalf of his cause, entirely out in the cold, and to turn a deaf ear to their counsels.

Had it not been for them, Samuel J. Tilden would have occupied the seat now occupied by Hayes. They were Hayes' most faithful of the faithful, and the first to be snubbed. What can the Republicans expect of their President, when in his very first official act he slights those whom were the leaders in the struggle which placed him in the White-House? It is not strange that Morton and Blaine should threaten to cross swords with the Administration on the first day. The fight is none of the Democrats, but they have the privilege of looking over the rope into the ring.

WE have a contemporary justaeross the river that is exceedingly negligent in attaching credits to items taken from the RECORDER. The first leaded item in his editorial column of last week is an example of that of which we speak.

ABRAHAM S. HEWITT, of New York, and Chairman of the National Democratic Executive Committee, has resigned that position, and it is now filled by Senator Barnum, of Connecticut.

WHEN William Pitt Kellogg, claiming to be Senator-elect from Louisiana, presented his claims to the Senate they were referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. When the Committee met last Saturday, his case was called, the Republican members on the Committee taking the ground that Kellogg's credentials are regular, and that he has a prima facie title to the office, and should be sworn in and permitted to take his seat, and and investigation as to which of the two rival Governments in that State is the legal one, should be deferred until Kellogg has taken his seat. The Democrats resisted these grounds strongly, and insisted that, while the credentials on which Kellogg claims his seat appear regular, they may not be so in fact, as the Committee has judicial knowledge that there are two rival Governments in Louisiana, and that an investigation is necessary to determine which of them is the legal one, and has the authority to elect a United States Senator. The probability is Kellogg's case will stand continued till the next session of Congress, which will likely be held in June, although members of both parties are working to have it deferred till September. The greatest obstacle to deferring the session till fall is the want of some provision for the support of the army.

Three Opinions Regarding the Cabinet.

The Cabinet of the Usurper is carpentered. It is a political hash. It isn't a Republican Cabinet; it isn't a Democratic Cabinet; it isn't an Independent Cabinet. Dropping the hash, and returning to the carpentering, Morton has been dovetailed into the defender of Andrew Johnson. Moving over into Scripture, Massachusetts and Tennessee have been invited to lie down together in a common humiliation. Descending to politics, Conkling has been spurned, Blaine has been ignored, and the empty sop was thrown to Cerberus, the atonement to the South for indescribable wrongs, is the Postmaster-Generalship, given to a Tennesseean wearing the garb of a Democrat. But out of the mixed, mysterious Cabinet cluster, one fact shines. Morton, the arch conspirator, the cunning contriver, the unscrupulous demagogue, the commander of the Republican was recognized.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Cabinet is announced and it is a strong and eminently respectable one. With one or two possible exceptions, no intelligent citizen will need to inquire as to any one of them, who he is and what he has done. Except Gen. Charles Devens, the Attorney-General, and Richard W. Thompson, of Indiana, they are all men who, by long service and recent prominence, are familiar to the public. * * * We have stated before our opinion that President Hayes would do less than justice if he put a representative Confederate Democrat of the South in his Cabinet and neglected to put also a representative of Southern Union men and Republicans. We adhere to that opinion. We are not disposed to object to Mr. Key, though we are a little incredulous about the results to flow from his appointment, notwithstanding it has been so well received in Tennessee; but Mr. Key counts only one, and out of seven Cabinet places the South should have more than one. * * * If Bristow had been put in it, more people would have understood just what it meant, and the Administration would have had no more quarrel on its hands than it has drawn on itself by the present appointments. There were doubtless good reasons for taking this simple way of declaring an unmistakable policy, and the Cabinet, as arranged, has a clear enough significance when its composition is thoroughly examined.—Louisville Commercial.

In the Cabinet which Mr. Hayes nominated to the Senate, John Sherman of Ohio is the ruling spirit, and the most experienced politician is Richard W. Thompson, of Indiana. * * * Mr. Evarts we all know. With all his ability and reputation as a lawyer, and with his great desire for public office, he has never succeeded in obtaining an elective post. * * * It is well that Mr. Schurz is nominated for Secretary of the Interior. Against this nomination the leaders of the Republican party have made a determined opposition, some of them threatening to reject it in the Senate. Mr. Hayes, however, has held out against their menaces, and will be highly complimented on this manifestation of firmness. * * * Mr. Key, of Tennessee, nominated for Postmaster-General, is a man of moderate ability and and limited influence. His appointment is an illustration of the proposed new policy toward the South. Let Mr. Hayes have credit for thus rising above his party. * * * Gen. Devens, of Massachusetts, was originally a Webster Whig, then a Democrat, and then a Republican. Of late years he has been so much a favorite with the Democrats of that State that they came near running him for Governor. * * * He is not a great lawyer. The most cordial support and admiration which this new Cabinet is likely to receive will not be bestowed by earnest and energetic Republicans, either in Congress or out. The men without whom Hayes never could have been President, will be sure to regard it with undisguised dissatisfaction.—N. Y. Sun.

By the expiration of his term, the Senate has lost one of its best members, ex-Governor Stephenson, of Kentucky, who for six years has reflected honor upon the Democratic party and his State. It is greatly to be regretted that his counsel and influence are likely now to be permanently withdrawn from the public service. Kentucky could do nothing more acceptable to the country than to disallow ex-Senator Stephenson's claim that his long services in behalf of his party entitle him to a season of retirement. His weight of personal character, earnestness and good judgment made him a power in the Senate, and it is only too clear that the country, as well as the party, will have most urgent need of precisely such qualities as his in the near future.—New York World.

MY TERM OF OFFICE AS SHERIFF of the county has expired, but there still remains a large amount of the revenue for me to collect; and, to expedite the collection of the taxes, I request all who have not yet paid to come forward and do so at once. Announcements.

We are authorized to announce GRANVILLE V. ROUSE as a candidate for the office of Representative in the Legislature for the ensuing term.

We are authorized to announce Dr. S. S. SCOTT as a candidate for State Senator, subject, however, to the action of the Democratic party.

MARCH is as it always was.

SATURDAY is St. Patrick's Day.

THE weather has been very duckish.

The weather for some time has been well adapted to milling.

PLANT potatoes and some other garden "truck" this month.

THE tongue of the fox-hound was heard in the land Monday.

FRIDAY night the social hop in the Morgan Academy is to be.

THIS is the season of the year when material for navigation abounds.

OAT-SOWING has hung fire. The weather has been too dump for a flash in the pan.

THE sales of Boone County tobacco, during the last week have advanced slightly.

DR. HALL preached in the Presbyterian church here Sunday morning and evening.

BOOTS and shoes for winter wear below cost at C. Kleymeier's, 20 Pike street, Covington, Ky.

THE lion part of March is with us; the lamb part is expected to be along in about twenty days.

THIS week we give an adverse pen picture of Texas. It was drawn in that ancient city, San Antonio.

"PEACE and plenty abound"—a piece of bad manuscript and plenty of room in the waste basket.

THE weather for the past ten days has not been very propitious for little "chicks," and many there now be in the land.

SINCE last fall, the Examining Courts have sent in for investigation by the grand jury, three or four cases of considerable magnitude.

WE understand that Mr. Wake has sublet the contract for grading about three miles of the pike. The portion thus let out is next to Burlington.

WE hear of a new organ being purchased in the vicinity of town. Music hath many charms, but the performer "munuyer." What say you, Jeff, et al.?

NEXT week we will publish a very interesting lecture, which was read before the Petersburg Grange by one of its worthy and intelligent lady members.

WE are informed that Mr. John Stephens, of Bulletsville, has postponed indefinitely his visit to the city of Washington to attend the inauguration of Mr. Tilden.

THE first choir of frogs made their debut in this section Thursday night. They surely are adventurers, and will likely peep through icy skylights before the winter days are gone.

DIRT was broken on the Burlington and Bellevue pike last Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. The work was commenced near Miss Julia Dinsmore's. About thirty men wield the spade and shovel at present.

THE Lawrenceburg (Ind.) Register comes to us this week containing both the valedictory of Ed F. Sibley, the former editor, and the salutatory of the Register Printing Company, which now has charge of the paper.

THE Burlington (Iowa) Daily Gazette of the 5th inst., says:

And now comes W. H. Hayden, Esq., with his face covered with smiles and his heart filled with joy, and says it's a girl. Standard weight.

WE would suggest that the new Deputy Sheriff provide himself with sheet-iron leggings, the better to protect himself against the assaults of dogs. He should bear in mind that the canine race no longer bears any good feelings for the tax-gatherer.

WE noticed several delegates in town last week, having their credentials prepared for Criminal Court. There are several others in the county that have, for some time, been making themselves scarce about places where the Sheriff might gaze upon them.

IN the Quarterly Court, Wednesday of last week, Wm. H. Harrison, who last fall was sent to the Asylum at Anchorage, appeared, and, upon an examination before a jury, was given possession of his property, which, at the time of his being adjudged a lunatic, was put in the hands of a committee.

SHOULD it be a rainy day, the next time the grand jury inspects the public buildings, it will have unmistakable evidence of a first-class leak somewhere in the roof of the jail. The occupants of the upper story are, when it rains, compelled to keep a basin under the drip to prevent the floor being flooded.

THE Literary Society, Wednesday evening of last week, manifested a still greater falling off in the attendance, but probably the cause can be attributed to the "demoralized" state of the elements. Several of the parties booked as participants in the exercises came up among the missing, and confusion of the exercises was the result. The question discussed was, "Affirmed, That the sexes should be educated in separate schools." Some of the disputants became terrorized, and let their parts go by default. The question, after being severely hammered by three of the faithful, was decided in favor of the affirmative.

THE information we have warrants us in saying the literary society which meets at the residence of Mr. Wm. M. Conner, near Florence X-Roads, is in every respect a success. The good people of that neighborhood take great interest in the meetings, and interesting and lively discussions are indulged in at every meeting.

THE Criminal Court commences next Monday morning, with eighty-eight cases on the docket. Some seven or eight of them are of considerable importance. Among the latter are the Commonwealth against W. H. Terrell, Commonwealth against Eph Holland and several others who officiated in different ways at the Gess-Allen prize fight.

THIS week we received a well-written communication from Walton, signed "Old Reliable," there being no other "sig." That our word may be reliable, the communication was "chucked" in the waste basket. We want the names of our contributors, and without them the manuscript is invariably rejected. This is about the 100th time we have given this notice.

OUR subscribers who get their papers at Aylor's Store have, for the last two weeks, received them late in the week. This delay was unavoidable, on account of there being no communication with that neighborhood. It is seldom that a day passes without someone coming in from thereabouts, but during the last two weeks their visits have been few, and opportunities to send the mail down correspondingly scarce.

THE damp weather set the tobacco moving. Early Monday morning a train of wagons laden with the weed passed here, en route for the city. It does appear that there is a sufficient amount of tobacco raised in this vicinity to justify some enterprising man engaging in the tobacco business at this point. Rents are small, and the territory in which to operate is sufficiently large and convenient to make the business, if attended to, profitable.

OUR venerable friend, F. Smith, who has been sojourning in the Old Dominion, during the winter, is apparently having an enjoyable time attending the weddings of his youthful acquaintances. He wrote to his grandson, Buddie, last month of the marriage of a male friend, aged 75, to a maid of 55. He says: "Could you have seen her during the ceremony, her modest and bashful demeanor, and her angelic expression, with smiling love bestowed on the poor old man, you would have judged her sweet sixteen." This month he writes of a friend aged 79, who married a widow of 35, but survived his marriage only ten days. The first husband of this widow lived but seven days after their marriage.

Personal Mention.

LAST Saturday we received a call from Mr. Chas. Maxwell, one of Covington's best printers.

MISS MATTIE BROWN, who has been visiting relatives at Glencve, Gallatin County, has returned.

C. W. SAXTON has sold his interest in the wagon-shop in Union, and is again among us. To Charles we extend a welcoming hand.

LAST week Everett Walton returned from his visit to the West. While there he traveled through the States of Illinois, Missouri and Iowa. He is favorably impressed with the country, and especially with the feminine portion of the population. He expresses a desire to grow up with that section of the Union.

TUESDAY morning Mr. F. P. Walton and family took their leave of the town, and moved their earthly effects to a farm about six miles distant, on the Petersburg pike. Our citizens are sorry to lose as worthy persons as Frank and his estimable lady, but what is Burlington's loss is a gain to the neighborhood where they now reside.

KANSAS LETTER.

CLAY CENTER, KANSAS, March 9, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Now that the nation has settled down once more into the quiet consciousness of a leader whom she can trust, and business has assumed a more solid phase, assuring you that "every thing is lovely, &c.," we take the present opportunity to commune once more with thy congenial spirit.

And first let me speak a few words for Kansas (you have heard from Texas). Although she (Kansas) is now, and for some years has been, depressed somewhat by stress of grasshoppers, etc., yet she has the resources—the soil, the territory and the energetic people—to place her, ere many decades, in the top rank of the stars that deck our glorious constellation, and will, beyond a doubt, continue to shine equal to the brightest of her glittering sisters. And she has a people that are worthy of their home—bold, open-hearted, honest, energetic, persevering and faithfully devoted to the doctrines embodied in the trite old maxim that they have heard from their youth, "Liberty and Union now and forever—one and inseparable." And as long as the Union lasts (which, from present prospects, is beyond the computation of mortal mind, for how can mortal count infinity), Kansas will be her center, in more senses than one. And if Texas goes to flying off the handle to scratch for herself again, Kansas will help to restrain and persuade the unruly sister, lest she become a repetition of lost Pleiad.

Notwithstanding the prospect of a fine grasshopper crop this spring, the farmers are making extensive preparations for planting. Many that we know intend cultivating one hundred acres in corn, and some besides that seventy-five acres in barley.

Negotiations have commenced to procure for Clay Center a northern railroad outlet. The most available objective point seems to be Beatrice, Nebraska, and strong efforts will be made here, there and along the line to have the two places connected by a road. Prospects for it are good.

Boone County seems determined to assert and vindicate her character as one of the reddest lumps of the Dark and Bloody Ground. But, while we venerate the valorous deeds of our ancestors, who, by pouring out Indian blood, gave our native State that baleful name, we can not but deplore the tendency of our modern chivalry to ape those brave ones by spilling such other's blood. So far as we know, there has not been a murder in Clay County for more than five years, and very few criminal prosecutions of any kind.

C. C. C.

LETTER FROM TEXAS.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, March 7, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

It has been near six weeks since I left Burlington for a trip to the Lone Star State, where we have been told everything necessary for man's prosperity and happiness is to be found in abundance. I have been in the State now some three weeks, and have discovered in that short time that all that has been written about Texas and its loveliness is not to be taken as Gospel truth.

As for climate, the weather has been as bad and disagreeable here for the last three weeks as could be expected any where. But the citizens tell us we have come at a very bad time, as this is their worst season. We have had from two to three Northers a week since we have been here. They last from twenty-four to forty-eight hours. Then the wind will shift and get warm for one day, and the next will be as warm as our weather in June in Kentucky. Then look out for another Norther, for it is sure to come, and come quickly, too.

I suppose, from all accounts, this has been a very severe winter here, for we see evidences of it wherever we turn. The land is literally strewn with the carcasses of dead animals. In fact, one is hardly ever out of sight of dead horses, cattle or sheep while traveling over the country, and can count them by the dozen, while the poverty of the living ladies beggars description. They are now dying by the thousand for the want of food. There is, in this part of Texas, nothing to feed them on, and the young grass that is just coming up seems to be detrimental to them, and, instead of strengthening, has a tendency to weaken and reduce them. The citizens tell me the drought of last fall and the hard winter is the cause of all this destruction of stock. Well, I suppose that is a solution of the trouble, and will account for all the other privations of the land.

The dogs are the only fat animals in the country, and I can assure you their name is legion. Uncle Ed Fowler would have to have several deputies to list them if Boone County had half as many as there are in this place.

It has been said that "God sends us our provisions and the devil our cooks." I think the latter has been more liberal with his supplies to this country than the former. The beef and mutton is all so poor it is impossible to eat it. The butter is all pot-ented, and outranks a Lieutenant-General in the United States army. The milk is condensed milk, and reduced with warm water homeopathically. Vegetables are as scarce as good meat (beef). In fact, corn bread, bacon and coffee is the average daily diet, and any person who can't take it with a relish three times a day is considered too fastidious for Texas.

There seems to be plenty of land here, for most everyone you meet has land to sell, and you can buy it from 25c. per acre up to fabulous prices. It is no trouble to start in the ranching business if you only have a little ready money. You can always find someone who has the very thing you want, and can just fit you out, or knows where he can get it for you. Everybody wants to sell, "but it is not because the business don't pay," "oh, no!" They just happen to want to go at something else that suits them better.

I find Texas has been very much overrated as a stock and agricultural country, and many a poor man has been induced to come here to reap nothing but disappointment and discontent. I think I see how it has all been done. This country is a wonderful place for "dead heads." You meet them every where you go. They are passed over all thoroughfares free of charge, and entertained at hotels in better style than the man who pays his way in dollars and cents. They are always connected in some way with a newspaper, or publishing a paper or an almanac in the interest of Texas, and write highly-colored articles about certain parts of the State, make favorable mention of railroads, hotels, etc., and at the same time he gives certain business firms and land agents a puff, for which he gets an occasional contribution to pay incidental expenses. Thus he lives easy and well, and never gives a thought to the credulous poor he may make miserable for life by his misrepresentations.

I don't pretend to say Texas is not a good place for a poor man as he has its advantages as well as disadvantages; but many come here that would not if they had a correct idea of the country. In this part of the State farming is very uncertain without irrigation, and to get land that can be irrigated with but little expense is hard to do, owing to the scarcity of water. The same trouble prevails in grazing. It is not hard to get the land, but permanent water is scarce and hard to get.

A young man with a few hundred dollars can come here and buy sheep, and take them out beyond any settlement, and find plenty of grass and water, and, if he will stay with his herd, and is not disturbed by Indians, he will in a few years be a rich man. But then he must forego all pleasure of society, which a man of family would not want to do, and to trust to hired labor would be a waste of money. To do anything with sheep you must have a very large range, at least three acres to the sheep is the amount necessary, from the best information I can get.

From what I have written, I need not tell you I am not going to remain. Will be in Kentucky before hot weather, and will not be in this part more than a few days more. Please hold my RECORDER till further orders.

Mr. E. H. Ashley and brother, of Boone, are living in this city. Would like to give you a description of this place, but space and time forbid. I am, most respectfully, yours,

M. H. RAYMOND.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Rabbit Hash.

Hog cholera is prevailing to some extent in the neighborhood. Mr. Z. T. Kelley has lost some very fine hogs in the last week.

The Tilden men in this vicinity are all wearing mourning, while the Hayes men are all jubilant, and some of them are several inches taller, especially Dave Burnett; he is eight inches higher by actual measurement.

Geo. Youell is talking of leaving us and going West to grow up with the country. "Golly!" how many feet higher do you expect to grow, George?

Miss Sallie Snyder's school has closed, and we are sorry to lose so estimable a young lady from our society. She has made an excellent teacher and has been a great benefit to society. We would be glad could she be prevailed on to take a summer school at the same place. Miss Alice's school is just half out, and we are glad that it is no nearer, for we could not think of losing two such nice young ladies at one time. Hope the patrons will employ them for an indefinite term, or that some nice young men will persuade them to make Rabbit Hash their permanent abode.

Henry Kessinger is building him a new house on Lick Creek. Young ladies, be careful now, or some of you will lose a chance, as he will want a housekeeper, and you can't all get him.

Brother Bristow's meeting liked to have played out on account of the heavy rains last week.

The Grangers have got the right man in the right place, and that is Mr. Solon Stephens as their Clerk. They could not have a more accommodating gentleman in their store than Mr. Stephens.

Personal—Dr. L. C. Cowen has returned from a week's sojourn in Carroll County, visiting his brother.....Mr. Robinson, our huckster, has left us and moved to Indiana..... We have a second Joe Bradley in our town. The d—l take Joe No. 2.....Hade Wilson arrived home from New Orleans last Monday, per steamer Golden City. "Susie is happy".....John P. Craig was elected Grange Director in the place of Solon Stephens..... Everybody are placing their pocket-books under "blew glass."

SIMILITER.

Bulletsville.

A hurried visit to the ville to-day convinced us of the wisdom of Hayes Southern policy. Dave Beall, the gallant ex-Confederate is still Postmaster, notwithstanding the vindictive opposition of the extreme Republicans.

The announcement of the decision of the Electoral Commission well nigh suspended business here for a time. Our "village blacksmithe" closed doors immediately, believing that a financial crash would speedily ensue; the senior member of the firm of Beall & Gordon vowed he would have a new twelve-dollar suit, and made three unsuccessful trips to the city therefor; Masters hurried out for a hollow poplar for his future dwelling, while Manning scoured the country over in search of meat. But they are quiet now. The appointment of Key to the office of Postmaster-General, and his acceptance thereof, has restored confidence in the incoming Administration, and ere long we shall hear the cheerful ring of the anvil as in days gone; Beall will be footloose no more; Masters will saw his hollow tree into a neat cottage frame, and Manning's face will smile with gratitude for a bountiful supply of pork.

The young professor of the Brick, whose genial countenance makes us glad, pays his regular tri-weekly visits to our ville. Pottike, his mail is cumbrous, but methinks a certain female grieves him more than all else besides. He needs a "newness added." Dost thou understand?

Our new Professor, Squire Oscar Gaines, has opened school at Mt. Pleasant with fine prospects for a liberal patronage. Tread lightly, Worthy, and guard well thy thoughts, for "as the twig is bent the tree's inclined," and many eyes are upon thee and many hearts wish thee well.

We regret to say that two of our most highly esteemed fellow-citizens, Joseph C. Gaines and John Riley, are confined to their rooms by sickness. As spring approaches, and nature, refreshed from her winter's sleep, buds forth in beauty, we hope to see the two afflicted neighbors, purer by the winter's suffering, come forth to greet the birds of spring, in the enjoyment of restored health and a renewed vitality.

Petersburg.

The gentle zephyrs from the North that came so closely upon the heels of last Thursday's rain, effectually put a quietus on the mowing business until this week, when it started off with renewed zeal.

Miss Maggie McWethy, who has been sick so long, died last Thursday night. She was buried on Saturday at 2 o'clock. The funeral ceremonies were under the direction of the order of Sons of Temperance, of which she was a worthy and industrious member. Rev. W. S. Kecas preached a most excellent funeral discourse, and followed in the procession with the corpse to the cemetery. The sympathies of the entire community are with the family in their sad bereavement.

Mr. M. S. Davis the renowned grain contractor at the distillery, has been and moved again. His door-plate is now nailed to the principal entrance to the spacious two-story brick on Front street, between Main and Market, that has been an ornament to this portion of our little city for some time past. The recent depression in the value of bonds and gold has been a considerable source of annoyance to him, and when that is added to the fact that the supply of corn in the country is about exhausted, we can easily see that his mind is greatly exercised.

Miss Nannie Berkshire is teaching in the school-house here, and Miss Hattie Kirtley at the house near Captain Terrill's. The reel of correction has fallen into gentle hands, and the boys are happy.

The Courier-Journal and Live Stock Journal (or Record) are both advertising a swindle in the way of prizes to the subscribers to their papers. The prizes are said to be sets of plated forks or spoons, and worth $4 per set of six. A gentleman in this neighborhood, who was a subscriber for one of the above papers, thoroughly investigated the matter, and the whole affair is undoubtedly a swindle. It is true the spoons or forks will come as ordered, but are not worth the 60 or 75 cents the subscriber sends for them, except as old brass, of which they are purely composed, and are dipped in a strong acid solution, which gives the outside a silvery appearance that will not last through a week of service. It is to be hoped that the many subscribers to those papers will read this and save their money. The prizes are said to come from a plating company in Cincinnati, but it can not be found.

BURLINGTON, KY., MARCH 15.

THE SECRET.

Last night when the rosy twilight
On meadow and streamlet fell,
She came to my arms, my darling,
With a strange sweet tale to tell;
And nestling away in the shadows,
Lest the envious stars might see
How brighter by far were the blushing eyes
Than they ever might hope to be,

And lightly smoothing my braided hair
In her soft, caressing way,
Said, "Alice, my darling sister,
I have something strange to say:
You are double dear to-night, Alice.
The reason I can not tell,
But I am sure that never before
Have I loved you one-half as well."

Then the sobs she had smothered so bravely,
In joyful tears ran wild
And I kissed her blushing cheeks as she lay
In my arms like a happy child.
With her wet face hid in my bosom
The wonderful story came,
He had told her a dear, sweet secret,
And asked her to bear his name.

I knew that we were poor, while he
Had wealth and an honored name,
I knew of his manly worth and truth,
His genius and rising fame;
Then I laid my head on her shining curls,
And felt with a glow of pride
The holy love of her warm, pure heart,
Fit dower for a monarch's bride!

Waste and Want.

If proverbs and preachments, examples and warnings could cure the wastefulness of the world, everybody would have been thrifty long ago. But that the waste still goes on in spite of all these is no reason for giving up the attempt to check the evil. The real cause for so much of the poverty that seems almost inevitable—for hard times which so frequently come without apparently reason—and for sudden lapses from plenty to want, is often directly traceable to wastefulness.

The proverb "to throw out with a teaspoon more than can be gathered in a bushel," is too often illustrated in household management. A little break in the children's clothes is suffered to enlarge until a new suit is made necessary. A defect in some household utensil until it is past mending. Good broken bits from the table go into the waste basket instead of into soup puddings. On the farm fertilizers and fodder are wasted; good seed is fed out and an inferior stuff planted. In the city the gas is permitted to blaze at full head; the servants do not have efficient oversight; the coal is burned as though the householder owned a mine; marketing is done without inquiry or comparison of prices and articles. These and a hundred other ways of wasting, explain a large portion of the poverty and "hard times" better than all the laws of political economy or social science.

Some of the most liberal supporters of colleges and churches, and public benefactors or charities, have been noted for their close economy even in such small matters as burnt match ends and old papers. They wasted nothing upon principle, and so gathered to spend. It is easy to be mean and make life a drudgery and mockery by a miserly saving merely to accumulate; but the American danger is not on that side. The enforced economies of the past few years will add to the permanent wealth and prosperity of the nation if they shall show the people of our lavishly productive and wonderfully favored land the folly and loss of wastefulness.

A Man Who Never Saw a Woman.

A Chinese, who had been disappointed in marriage, and had grievously suffered thro h woman in many other ways, retired with his infant son to the peaks of a mountain range in Kw ichou; to a spot quite inaccessible to the little-footed Chinese women.

He trained his boy to worship the gods, and stand in awe and abhorrence of the devils; but he never mentioned women to him, always descending the mountains alone to buy food.

At length, however, the infirmities of age compelled him to take the young man with him to carry the heavy bag of rice.

As they were leaving the market town together, the son suddenly stopped short, and, pointing to three approaching objects, cried:

"Father, what are those things? Look, look! what are they?"

The father instantly answered with a peremptory answer:

"Turn away your head; they are devils I tell ye!"

The son, in some alarm, turned away, seeing the evil things were gazing at him with surprise from behind their fans.

He walked to the mountain in silence, ate no supper, and from that day lost his appetite, and was afflicted with melancholy.

For some time his puzzled and anxious father could get no satisfactory answer to his inquiries; but at length the young man burst out, crying with inexplicable pain:

"Oh, father, that tallest devil—that tallest devil, father!"

It is a good practice to wash the trunk and main branches of fruit trees with lime wash. If the white color is not agreeable, a little soot can be put in to neutralize the glare. The wash destroys the eggs of insects and the germs of fungi, and keeps the bark free to swell as the cells grow. Where the white scale abounds on the bark, the branches may be painted with linseed oil. It is a sure cure, and really seems to make the tree more healthy and vigorous than it would be without the paint.

Why Aunt Sallie Never was Married.

"Now, Aunt Sallie, do please tell us why you never got married. You remember you said once that when you were a girl you were engaged to a minister, and you promised to tell us about it some time. Now, Aunt, please tell us."

"Well, you see, when I was about seventeen years old, I was living in Utica, in the State of New York. Though I say it myself, I was quite a good looking girl then, and had several beaux. The one that took my fancy, was a young minister, a very promising young man, and remarkably pious and steady. He thought a great deal of me, and I kind of took a fancy to him, and things went on until we were engaged. One evening he came to me and put his arms around me, and kind of hugged me, when I got kind of frustrated. It was a long time ago, and I don't know but what I may have hugged back a little. I was like any other girl, and pretty soon I pretended to be mad about it, and pushed him away, though I wasn't mad a bit. You must know the house where I lived was on the back streets of the town. There were glass doors in the parlor, which opened into the street. These doors were drawn to. I stepped back a little from him, and when he came up close I pushed him back again. I pushed him harder than I intended to, and don't you think, girls, the poor fellow lost his balance and fell through one of the doors into the street."

"Oh, Aunty! Was he killed?"

"No. He fell head first, and as he was going, I caught hold of him by the legs of his trowsers. I held on for a minute, and tried to pull him back; but his suspenders gave way and the poor fellow fell clear out of his pantaloons into a parcel of ladies and gentlemen along the street."

"Oh, Aunty!"

"There, that's right: squall and giggle as much as you want to. Girls that can't hear a little thing like that without tearing around the room and he-being in that manner, don't know enough to come in when it rains. A nice time the man that marries you will have, won't he? Catch me telling you anything again."

"But, Aunt Sallie, what became of him? Did you ever see him again?"

"No; the moment he touched the ground he got up and left that place in a terrible hurry. I tell you it was a sight to be remembered. How that man did run. He went out West, and I believe he is preaching out in Illinois. But he never married. He was very modest, and I suppose he was so badly frightened that time, that he never dared trust himself near a woman again. That, girls, is the reason why I never married. I felt very bad about it for a long time, for he was a real good man, and I've often thought to myself that we should have been very happy if his suspenders had not given away."

Do All the Women Carry Pistols.

She drew her pistol and attempted to shoot. I held both her arms firmly for a time, until my wife, seeing the struggle from a window in the house, jumped into her buggy, which was standing near the door—and drove rapidly to where we were.

I let go her hand and jumped into the buggy, when she fired a pistol shot that passed behind the seat and lodged near the residence of E. W. Keys, whose little boy narrowly escaped being hurt.

In the excitement the driving lines got caught in the single-tree, so that the horse made a complete circle around where this woman was standing with pistol in hand. When within a few feet of me she attempted to fire the second time, but the pistol did not go off.

We drove to the house and she followed, but my son taking in the situation stopped her at the gate. She put her pistol in his face, but as he happened to have a revolver with him she concluded not to shoot.

I drove the horse in the stable, and my wife went through the house and opened the front door, where her pistol got entangled in the sleeve of her dress and went off merely by accident. This is the only shot that was fired at the house.—Rocky Mountain Herald.

A WEST HILL man got up in a vague state of mind, the other morning, and feeling around in the dark for his socks got hold of his wife's stockings. When he pulled them on and stretched them up, he felt so completely dressed that he didn't think of putting on anything else, but went mooning around until he found a lamp, and fell to the floor in a fit of terror at the sight of his legs. When they restored him to consciousness they couldn't make him believe that the house hadn't "been burglarized by a circus clown or an escaped convict, because," he said, "I saw him the minute I struck the match, just as plainly as I see you now. Nobody's safe in these awful times."

A TEXAS newspaper informs its readers what kind of people they want in that State. They have twice too many bootors, and nine times too many lawyers. In fact, they propose to "swap off" lawyers at the rate of forty lawyers for one Northern farmer. They would like a few more good preachers, and a many lesspoor ones. But the great want is farmers; "five million good farmers" will receive a welcome within the borders of Texas. But they want "early-rising, sober, good managing men."

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

CERTAINLY the world moves. A darkey clergyman edits a column of colored "society gossip" in an Indinapolis paper.

"My brother," said a clergyman, "do you feel charitably inclined this winter?" "Yes," said the brother, "if it doesn't cost anything."

THE showman, Dan Rice is unlucky in his old age. Bankrupt in Pennsylvania last year, he has now been sold out again by a Kentucky Sheriff.

THE passengers on a Kentucky railroad train became so interested in an eloping couple that, when the father of the girl came aboard at a station to take her home, they forcibly ejected him.

AN Atlantic girl sat on her lover's hat and kept him three hours over time.—EX. The next time that young man goes to see his girl he should hang his hat on a nail instead of holding it on his lap.

WHEN a young man encircles his partner's waist for a dance, he will do wisely to keep his fingers still. Nothing aggravates a young lady more than to imagine you are trying to count the whale-bones in her dress.

"JOHN, you are drunk, you know you are, and it's 3 o'clock in the morning." "No, my dear. Ish leven o'clock only; look for yourself." "But that clock is stopped." "No mah'r can't go behind the reche(i)turus."

Two acquaintances meeting on a wet day, one greeting the other with: "Beautiful rain this! Fetching things out of the ground." Second friend (disconsolately): "Hope not, sir; hope not. Got two wives there, sir!"

JUDGE JEFFRIES, of notorious memory, pointing to a man with his cane, who was about to be tried, said, "There is a great rogue at the end of my cane." The man to whom he pointed, looking at him, said, "Which end, my lord?"

A COUNTRY dealer sent to Indianapolis for a copy of a little book called, "Happy Husbands." The work not being procurable, the country dealer received a note, stating that there were no "Happy Husbands" in Indianapolis.

HERE is a business like epitaph: "Here lies Jane Smith, wife of Thos. Smith, marble cutter. This monument was erected by her husband as a tribute to her memory and a specimen of his work. Monuments of the same style, $250."

AMONG the replies to an advertisement of a music committee for "a candidate as organist, music teacher," etc., was the following: "Gentlemen: I notice your advertisement for a music teacher and organist, either lady or gentleman. Having been both for several years, I offer you my services."

AT a school exhibition which came off a short time since, one of the little boys, who had a grudge against his pedagogue, on account of a recent flogging, is said to have delivered this pointed oration:

"Oh, Lord of love
Look from above
On us poor little scholars;
We've had a fool
To teach our school,
And paid him fifty dollars."

It struck the distinguished instructor who had struck the youthful poet-orator, like a forty-ton chunk of thunder from a cloudless sky; and just more'n brought down the house.

A SHARP Yankee went into a country store down East, and thus accosted the proprietor: "'Squire, do you trade?" "Considerable," was the reply. "I mean, do you dicker?" "Some; what ye got ter dicker?" "A egg." "What ye want for an egg?" "Guess I'd like a darnin' needle." The required needle was dickered for the egg, and the Yankee was going away, when he turned and said, "'Squire, do you treat?" "Well, I don't mind if I do," replied the good-natured store-keeper. They repaired to an adjacent tavern, and the usual bourbon was produced. "Hold on," cried the Yankee, "my chist's weak, and I never take whisky without a egg in." The generous shopkeeper handed him the dickered egg, but without asking him for his needle again. The Yankee broke the shell on the edge of the glass, when he exclaimed, "Geewhillikins! this egg's got two yelks! Guess you'd better give me another darnin' needle."

WHEN Charles Reade's dramatization of Tennyson's Dora was being played in a small Australian town, where the choice of actors was not great, "Mary Morrison," on making her exit to bring on her little "Willie" of four years was shocked to find a lubberly boy of at least fourteen who must go on, as no other was to be had. The "Farmer Allen" of the play was no doubt equally shocked to see "Mary" coming on the stage with a boy nearly as big as herself. What was worse, the audience began to titter. But "Farmer Allen" was equal to the emergency, and instead of asking, "How old are you, my little boy?" said, "How old are you, my strapping fellow?" probably hoping that the boy would have the good sense to give an age consistent with his size. The boy, however, with painful fidelity to the text, and in a sepulchral voice that made the answer all the more preposterous, said, "Four to five, grandpapa." "Forty-five!" exclaimed the "Farmer" cheerfully, "you look it, my boy, you look it." There was a laugh for a moment, but the play was saved from shipwreck.

A TURNED-DOWN PAGE.

There's a turned-down page, as some writers say,
In every human life—
A hidden story of happier days
Of peace amid the strife.

A folded leaf that the world knows not,
A love dream rudely crushed;
The sight of a face that is not forgot,
Altho' the voice be hushed.

The far distant sounds of a harp's soft strings,
An echo on the air—
The hidden page may be full of such things,
Of things that once were fair.

There is a hidden page in each life, and mine
A story might unfold;
But the end was sad of the dreams I've nine,
It better rests untold.

HER OWN LIVING.

Tall and slight, with blue, wistful eyes, lips ripe and red as woodberry, and complexion all carmine and white, like a damask rose in the sunshine, Ermina Hall's was a face that an artist would have fell down and worshiped. But it is as philosophers tell us; there is compensation in all things. The pock-marked girl who sat across the aisle from her in church was a millionaire's daughter, and this young girl with the angel face was on the look-out for an eligible position as governess. For Ermina Hall was penniless, and it was necessary for her to earn her livelihood in some way or other, and the trade of a governess was at last decided.

"Keep a day school," suggested old Mr. Prince, who had been wont to dine every Sunday with Judge Hall during that eminent bankrupt's lifetime, and to consume a quantity of lobster salad, champagne and boned turkey which was simply appalling, upon these festive occasions.

"Nobody would come to me," said poor Ermina, with tears in her eyes. She had supposed, inexperienced child that she was, that Mr. Prince would have been ready with a twenty-five dollar bill in this, her necessity.

"Needlework," suggested Mr. Clay, who had mysteriously made money out of the very speculation that had beggared the dead man.

"Never learned to sew," faltered Ermina. "I never could earn a cent that way."

"Humph," grunted Mr. Clay. "The education of women at the present day is outrageously defective. It should all be reformed."

"Do you suppose," meekly hazarded Ermina, "that I could obtain any copying from your office? Mr. Lemuel Lefern used to say I wrote an elegant hand. Here is a specimen."

"Up strokes thin, down strokes black, long tails to the g's and y's—Italian school, eh? Pshaw! your writing may do for a perfumed note or a young lady's album, but no lawyer would look twice at it. But I dare say you will scratch along somehow."

"How?" murmured Ermina, resolutely repressing the tears that were rising to her eyes.

"How? Why, there are ways enough. Nobody needs to starve in this country. I dare say if you keep on the lookout, something will turn up."

And that was all the satisfaction Ermina Hall got. She next went to her rich cousin Mrs. Bellairs Belton.

"I am sorry you came this morning, Ermina," said the lady, coldly. "I am busy with my accounts."

"I won't detain you an instant," said Ermina, with a sinking heart. I—I—need something to do very much."

Mrs. Bellairs Belton shut her lips together as if her lips were a new patent portemonnaie, and penciled down her figures without looking up.

"And I thought," went on Ermina, her heart failing her more and more, "I could perhaps teach your little children. I would work for a very little, and—"

"Quite out of the question," said Mrs. Bellairs Belton. "I have just engaged a Swiss bonne, who will give them the regular accent."

And Ermina turned away, feeling almost desperate. Lunch was in progress—she could perceive the fragrance of the chocolate, and see the dining-room girl setting the table, yet Mrs. Bellairs Belton never asked her to stay and have breakfast with them.

"Oh, how strange and cruel the world is!" thought Ermina, with a choking sensation in her throat. "I had so many friends when poor papa was alive, and now I have not one except Major Miles, but I will not go to him. He was always criticising and carping even in the days of our prosperity; now he would be simply intolerable."

And so poor Ermina Hall crept into a cheap restaurant to appease the gnawing pangs of hunger. For she had lodged and boarded herself, in order to screw the greatest amount of livelihood out of the least possible amount of ready cash, and she had eaten but little all day.

An oyster stew and a cup of tea! It seemed like boundless extravagance to the poor girl; but she was very faint and hungry, and felt the sore necessity for food. She was early yet; there few customers at the neat little white-draped tables, an I the proprietor was leaning against the counter, talking to a woman who seemed to be some relative.

"They've struck, every one of 'em," said he. "The ungrateful fellows, after I had paid 'em regular waiters' wages all the autumn when no one else did! And now, if I shut up shop, I won't have one of 'em back again. I'll employ women, hanged if I don't!"

"I don't see why you shouldn't," said his interlocutor. "They'll come for less and work harder. Women always do."

"So I've heard," said the restaurant man. "And I'll advertise tomorrow for a lot of girls to wait here."

Ermina rose and went timidly to the red-faced, good-natured-looking man.

"Sir," said she, "you spoke of employing girls as waiters. I need work. I will come and work faithfully. Will you employ me?"

The restaurant-keeper looked bewildered.

"You are a lady, miss," stuttered he.

"I know that," said Ermina, as if she were making some damaging admission, "but ladies must live and I am very poor."

So the next day she came in a frilled white apron and French print dress, and began her new duties in the Eagle eating saloon.

"At least," she told herself, "I am earning my own livelihood. And when I am busy I don't have time to think."

Mr. Bellairs Belton came in one day for a glass of ale and a plate of oysters.

"Bless my soul!" gasped he, as Ermina Hall, quick and neat, looking as if she had been born and bred at the trade, served him. "this is never you."

"Why not?" said Ermina, laughing in spite of herself.

"My wife's cousin in a cheap restaurant!" he exclaimed. "Good heavens! what is the world coming to?"

"It's not so disagreeable business as you may think it," said Ermina. "And I must live."

"Disgraceful! perfectly disgraceful!" said Mr. Bellairs Belton, as he bolted out leaving his oysters untasted.

Mr. Prince came in for a cup of coffee—champagne and truffles were altogether out of the question when he had to settle the bill out of his own pocket—and he started and grew very red when he saw Ermina. But he looked straight into his cup of coffee, and pretended not to know her. And Mr. Clay started at her as if she was some rare curiosity on exhibition, when he gave his order one day for a bowl of mock-turtle soup.

"So it's you is it?" said he.

"Yes, sir, it is I," said Ermina.

"I think you might have gone into some more creditable business," said he.

"Any business is creditable which honestly supports a girl," retorted Ermina, "and if you can suggest any improvement, I am ready to listen to you."

Our timid little lassie had grown independent, you see.

Mr. Clay muttered something about "distorted ideas," and burned his tongue with his hot soup, while the young banker's clerk, who sat opposite, laughed in his sleeve.

"That's the prettiest girl I ever saw," thought Rudolph Penfield. "If I could afford to get married, and she were willing—two rather essential ifs, by the way—I would make her my wife. Idon't think that I am positively disagreeable to her, for gentle and modest as she is, I can see the color rise to her cheeks when I come in; and I believe she would be a jewel of great price to shine on the breast of the lucky man who wins her."

Three weeks after, young Penfield had waxed more positive on the subject.

"I must have her," said he. "Little as the half of my salary is, it must be more than she can earn here. And if my uncle looks favorable on the matter of my marriage, he'll be pretty sure to do something handsome for us. I'll bring him here to see her. That will melt him."

And the next day Rudolph Penfield ordered cold roast lamb for two—himself and a portly old gentleman with grizzled hair and beard, and keen blue eyes like a clear January sky.

"Halloo!" said the old gentleman, "is Hall's daughter?"

"It's Major Miles," thought Ermina.

"Come here, my dear," said the Major, "you are a girl of pluck. I like you. So does my nephew here. A girl who isn't afraid to work is the girl for my money."

And when, a few months later, Rudolph Penfield and Ermina Hall were married, the Major took them home to his brown-stone mansion on Madison avenue.

"Rudolph must keep on working just the same," said the major. "I can't afford to support him in idleness. But I want Ermina in the house with me. She's pretty, and I like to look at her; she's smart and I like to talk to her."

The Bellairs Beltons left their cards when they heard that the young couple had been adopted by the wealthy Major Miles; but Ermina never returned the call.

"I have worked out the problem of my destiny without any help from them," she said quietly.

And she never did.

POLITICAL POINTS.

THE Southern politicians are holding themselves in a position to be benefited by Hayes. There's a good deal of human nature in that.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

CANDIDATES for the vacancy on the Supreme Bench blossom in every corner of our fair land. A place worth $10,000 a year, and for life, is calculated to stimulate the development of great judicial minds.—Cincinnati Gazette.

IF Hayes is strictly in favor of local self-government in the South, he ought to support Packard's Legislature. There is no Legislature in the world which confines its government so exclusively to itself, and none near so strictly local.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

PERHAPS if Mr. Wheeler was subjected to a long, severe and very thorough course of blue glass treatment, you might make a great man of him. As it is, however, he does not keep on hand a very large or well-assorted stock of intellectual wares.—N. Y. Sun.

PACKARD declares that he received 621 more votes than the lowest Hayes elector in Louisiana. Well, what of it? He might have received 5,000 more than the Hayes electors, and still not have been elected. Packard seems to think that because Hayes was "elected" President he was "elected" Governor. Was such impudent logic ever heard of before?—St. Louis Republican.

WE believe that the President did less than justice to the South, and to the Republicans of that section, when he made up his Cabinet without appointing as a member of it some representative Southern Republican. We believe he will do the country and the South injustice if he does not appoint to the place on the Supreme Bench, vacated by Judge Davis, a Southern man. There is now on the bench no judge from any of the fifteen States known politically as "the South." The opportunity is afforded now of correcting this inequality, and a commencement ought to be made, and we hope it won't be neglected.—Louisville Commercial.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL KEY says that it is his intention, in the administration of his office, to do exactly what President Hayes will require him to do in the matter of appointments, and that he will so manage the affairs of his department as that every act shall be guided by respect for a broad national policy, in accordance with the policy of the President. He also intends making a tour through the South, and will make these statements to the Southern people, with a view of creating an era of good feeling, and thus endeavor to re-establish a better understanding and more friendly relations between the two sections. He speaks quite enthusiastically and hopefully upon those points, and intends to use every effort in his power to bring about these desired results.—Washington Letter.

AMONG those who had interviews with Governor Hayes was Colonel Mosby. Colonel Mosby called merely to pay his respects. During the war Governor Hayes was at one period engaged in the campaigns in the Valley of Virginia, and he and Colonel Mosby exchanged some jocular remarks on the alternate games of hide and seek in which their respective commands had indulged. In conversing on the political situation, Governor Hayes remarked that the question presented to the country was whether it was to continue in a semi-state of war, or to have peace, and said he intended to go in for a vigorous prosecution of peace. Colonel Mosby said to him that in his belief his policy would be heartily responded to by the Southern people; that the ice was beginning to crack, a big thaw was coming, and in the course of a few weeks, under his beneficent policy, the "Solid South" would dissolve and break up. Governor Hayes, with much animation and feeling replied, "I hope so."—Cor. Baltimore Sun.

CONCERNING the organizat on of the next House, Clerk Adams says that, allowing the Republican all New Hampshire, all South Carolina and all Louisiana except what is conceded by the Republicans, and all the contested seats, the Democrats would still have a majority of three. He does not, however, intimate that the Republicans will be given the benefit of all doubts and claims by any manner of means. The Republicans are working zealously to get control of the organization of the next House, but have a forlorn hope. Senator Chaffee was in the Clerk's office to-day urging Belford's claims. Clerk Adams returned to him the same answer as to all—that he had not yet considered any of the contested cases or begun the work of making up a list of members of the next House. Prominent Southern members repudiate the idea that there is any danger of any of the Southern Democrats selling out the organization of the next House to the Republicans. They demand simply that the next Speaker shall be favorably disposed to their interests.—Washington Letter to Cincinnati Enquirer.

Crop reports from all parts of the interior of the State of California show but little change from the prospects two weeks ago. All over the State north of San Francisco bay grain is in excellent condition, and an abundant harvest almost certain. In Contra Costa County, and the northern portion of the San Joaquin valley, the prospects are good, except on the west side and on San Joaquin River, but the loss there will be compensated by the increased area of reclaimed lands put under cultivation for the first time. The southern part of the San Joaquin Valley died out and there will be no crops raised except on irrigated lands. In the Santa Clara valley and in country around Monterey bay grain is in good condition except in the important district of Salinas Valley, where a want of rain is greatly felt, though partial crop, may be harvested with good spring rains. In the Los Angels Valley there is no hope for a crop, except on irrigated lands. It is somewhat better in Santa Barbara, the low lands showing a fair prospect, but the higher ground is very dry. In San Diego chances favor a yield, with the usual spring rains.

AT Lancaster, on the 17th, G. C. Kennedy broke from the guard who was taking him to jail under an order of court to answere the charge of murdering his brother. STANLEY MATHEWS thinks it better that Packard abandon his claim to the Governorship of Louisiana, but Packard can't see it. He claims that he received more votes than the lowest Hayes' elector.

Newspaper Decisions.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post-office—whether directed to his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If any person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount—whether taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the Post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

ST. LOUIS, MO., March 17th, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The RECORDER, of day before yesterday, came to hand yesterday at 3 p. m., the next day after it was published, which we call rather quick work. We remember well when a neighbor of your county contemplated a visit this far West, it was the usual custom for him to give a dinner, call in all the neighbors, treat them to same, and then bid them good-bye for fear he would never see them again. Times, however, have somewhat changed since then; as the custom now is to eat supper in St. Louis, and breakfast in Cincinnati or Louisville, or vice versa.

We have had disagreeable weather for the entire week, yesterday and today a week a go being pretty near as cold weather as we had any time during the winter. But to-day the sun is out in all his glory, and it would seem as if the lambs' share of the month is approaching.

This, we suppose you are aware, is St. Patrick's day, and thousands of our Irish citizens are out with their banners and mottos in honor of Ireland's Patron Saint. The day being propitious the parade is truly grand, and may be set down as a credit to the Patrons thereof. The occasion is made doubly interesting by the arrival yesterday of the Hon. O'Connor Power, the distinguished Irish Orator, and member of the British Parliament, who is to address the Shamrock Society this evening.

Our stock of corn is considerably diminished this week, by the shipment of about 300,000 bushels by one firm to Liverpool and London. The large shipment goes from here to New Orleans by the Mississippi Valley Barge Line and from there by ocean steamers, the Barge Line giving through bills of landing, which enables shippers to realize at once. There is quite a corn blockade at Kansas City, there being fully half a million bushels there awaiting tonnage to some point or other. It is said that every elevator and warehouse in and about the city is full, and hundreds of cars standing on the tracks waiting for some place to unload. It is supposed that some 200,000 to 300,000 bushels of it will be brought to this market, the coming week, by barges. Prices of grain remain about the same as last reported.

We had rather an important decision this week, affecting Call Board operators, viz.: About one year ago Patrick Fletcher, a pork packer and an extensive Call Board operator, failed and went into bankruptcy. His Call Board creditors for shorts filed their claims along with the rest, and on Monday last Register Eaton declared them illegal, and refused to allow one cent of Call Board dues. This same gentleman, some four years ago, was estimated generally as worth from $300,000 to $500,000. To-day he is said to owe something near $100,000 more than he can pay. Call Board operations did it.

From all we can learn, the growing wheat crop west of us is as promising as could be desired. In Kansas it is said to be unusually promising, and, should the good people of that State be spared the grasshopper scourge and the drought, they will, most likely, have an abundant harvest, as they have a great acreage sown this year than ever before.

Up to noon to-day the clerks of the various elevators and warehouses have not sent in their weekly reports of stocks of grain in store, but the following may be set down as about correct, viz.: 950,000 bush. corn, 350,000 bush. wheat, 55,000 bush. rye, and 125,000 bush. barley. Yours truly,

BOB A. LONG.

A few days since, in company with my mother and daughter, I visited Paulding County, Ohio. When we left home the weather was moderately cool, and upon arriving at Richmond, Ind., we found some snow. The quantity increased as we traveled, and by the time we arrived at Antwerp it was of a respectable depth. On the 15th of this month, when we started home, the snow at that place was 8 inches deep. When we got home we found no snow on the ground. It seemed like we had gone to sleep in winter and woke in summer. In Ohio, where I was visiting, our county is known as the Bloody County—place where many murders are committed, and the guilty parties go unpunished—a place where mobs take men out of jail and hang them. This made me feel more like telling where I was going rather than where I was from. I hope at this term of court the juries and the officers will do their duty, and redeem the reputation of the county that it may no longer be a disgrace to the State.

The long looked for rains have come, and the gentle Grangers have been very active handling tobacco. Several crops were taken to the city, but on reaching the market, lo! the disappointment, prices ranging all the way from two and a half to seven dollars per cwt. Many tenants who were compelled to dispose of their crops will hardly make their bread. There seems to be more indignation against the tobacco buyers than against the seven to eight Commission that was going to count in Sam J.

Mrs. Dorcas Snelling has moved away from town, lately; but a few nights before moving she gave the lads and lassies one of her favorite hops for which she knows so well how to manage. The Gentle Granger with his strong arm and far-seeing talent might at the present make a corner by putting up the price of tobacco. They argue the motto to sell for more and buy for less. Our City Farmer, who is a determined Granger sold his crop for less money than anyone who has been to the market. But hark! we are encouraged; listen, some one is just passing singing that old favorite tune:

I wish I were a Granger,
And could see it as they can;
I'd wear a spade tail coat,
And with the Grangers stand.

Petersburg.

The early passenger train going West on the O. and M. road, last Friday morning, was thrown from the track and wrecked at Nebo, just opposite here. The cause of the accident was a broken switch-bar, allowing the switch to open without changing the signals on the switch-post. The firemen and engineer were slightly hurt; no other casualties. The engine was thrown down a bank about fifteen feet into the back-water from the river, and the tender held fast to the baggage-car, which, with the only passenger coach attached to the train, remained on the edge of the bank, considerably deranged. A wrecking train soon arrived, and in about two hours the track was cleared and the trains passing as if nothing had happened. Later in the day, as the employes of the road were erecting a heavy derrick to turn the wrecked locomotive upon its wheels, the derrick fell and caught a man under it, who was taken to Lawrenceburg, as soon as he was released, in a terribly mutilated condition. He was unconscious, and the probability is that he will not recover. He was once a resident of this place, but lived in Aurora at the time of the accident.

The Democracy of this section, in "korkus" assembled, with Porter in the chair, in a whereas and a resolve, have concluded that, as the present incumbent discharges his official duties so courteously and so well, that as all that is done "is done decently and in order," that the public taste is admirably suited therein, and lastly, in a wonderful measure owing to the somber complexion of the giver of official gifts in this "Western Country," we will not request, petition, sigh for or hanker after any substitute for our present Postmaster, but recommend that he be continued in office for four years more, or during good behavior.

Uncle Jack came to town last week. He was looking for a purchaser for his farm so recently bought in the neighborhood of Bullsville. He says that these fool newspaper correspondents are mistaken if they think he cares for or reads any of the foolishness they write about him. However this is not what weighs so heavily on our mind about him as the fact that unless he gets settled soon, it will be too late for him to plant a crop; and to have him on our list of loafers in the regular column would be terrible and past endurance.

The industrious Granger fever is spreading, and the last man in town to be suspected of such a thing has a bad case of it. Mr. Alfred Rucker has really bought a farm almost in the center of the town. He is now busy building a fence around it, previous to plowing and planting, and adds a strong reviving influence to that of Mr. Park Berkshire, already mentioned. Mr. Rucker bought the farm mentioned from his brother, and it contains something like three-quarters of an acre. Judge M. V. Cave is Superintendent-in-general, and that, you know, makes business lively.

The general damp, rainy wetness of last Friday kept a squad of the light fantastic toe class of our young folks from making a raid on the hop at the Academy in Burlington that evening. Well, we know by experience what we are talking about, and you can all congratulate yourselves. By the way, that young book-keeper has a new hat. Look out for him when he comes among you.

COMMUNICATIONS from Liberty Station, Glencoe and Walton are too late for this week—will appear in next issue.

A PUGILIST IN ROCK.

Joe Goss, the Prize Fighter, Tried—A Two-and-a-Half-Minute Verdict—Fined $250—In Jail Boarding Out the Fine.

Joe Goss, one of the principals in the Goss-Allen prize fight, which took place near Walton, in this county, on the 7th of September, 1876, was, about ten days since, arrested in the city of New York after calling on Joe Coburn, a brother pugilist, who was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in the penitentiary for shooting two policemen with intent to kill. Goss was arrested for the violation of Kentucky laws prohibiting prize fighting. The Governor of this State issued a requisition for him, and Detective Blyth, of Louisville, went to New York, where he found Goss, whom he brought to Kentucky, and last Thursday morning delivered him to the Jailor of this county.

Goss was soon informed that the offense for which he was indicted is but a misdemeanor, and that he could demand a trial at once, which he did. Judge Phelps was notified of the fact, and on last Friday morning held a special session of the Quarterly Court for that purpose. A jury was impaneled and trial commenced. The indictment, charging the accused with fighting for a prize of $2,000, was read, and a plea of guilty entered by the defendant. Goss's attorney (Geo. G Hughes) then made a short speech, requesting the jury to be as lenient as possible; that the prisoner was a stranger in the country; had been here but a short time before the fight, and was told that there was no law in this State prohibiting prize fighting; that he had retired from the ring in England because it was against the law of that country, and that he had no money, and wanted to return to England as soon as possible. The County Attorney (R. C. Green) was not inclined to, and did not, prosecute severely. The case being given the jury, they retired, and in about one minute and a half returned a verdict of guilty, and fixed the fine at $250, the least amount possible. Everybody sympathizes with Goss, and, had it been possible, no doubt he would have been acquitted.

After Goss was remanded to jail, we called upon him for the purpose of a brief interview, and found him willing and ready to answer any question propounded in regard to his career as a pugilist.

He is not, as many seem to think, a second Samson. He is but 5 feet 8½ inches high with his boots off, and weighs 212 pounds. His body is large while his lower limbs are small; his shoulders are broad and his chest large. He has small and uncommonly well-shaped hands for a man, and they do not, when clenched, present a very formidable appearance. His head is rather large and bald, and he wears his hair short; has a round, full face, rather small, dark eyes set back in his head, heavy black mustache, and a very large neck. When in company he conducts himself in the most gentlemanly style, while there is plainly depicted in his countenance the lurkings of his trouble.

He was born in Northampton, England, and was 40 years old on the 6th of last November. Before he went into the ring, his occupation was that of a shoemaker. He first appeared in the ring about seventeen years ago, and had fourteen fights in England; one was a draw with Tom Allen, and was beaten by Jem Mace twice out of three fights. About ten years ago he quit fighting in England because it was against the law. He says he was the last man matched for the championship of that country. In speaking of coming to America, he says:

"Jem Mace was at me for two years to come to America. I would not come for fear that the laws of the country prohibited prize fighting, as they did in England. I was keeping an inn at Wolverampton when I consented to come. Mace having assured me there was no law here against fighting. I was here one month giving sparing exhibitions with Mace, during which time the fight with Allen was arranged. I went into training, Mace promising to second me, but during my three months' training I saw nothing of him. I expected to see him the day the fight was had, but he was not present. He had some of my money, and about ten weeks ago he went to Australia. I don't want to ever see him again, he has acted so badly by me. He deceived me, and I blame him for all my trouble. I think he will go from Australia to England."

In speaking of the fight in this State, he said:

"The fight between me and Allen was for $2,500 a side. When the train left the depot the morning we fought, I knew no more where we were going than a baby. The first I knew that we were violating the law was when the militia appeared in Kenton County and made us move. When we got in the train to leave, I did not know where we were going. We fought three rounds in Kenton before we moved to the last ring."

When asked what he thought of Allen as a pugilist, he said:

"Tom Allen is a bit cleverer in a fight than I am. He is a large man, four years younger, weighs twenty pounds more, and is two inches taller, but I think I am his equal in make, and more than his equal in hitting powers. I had reduced 35 pounds in my training, and was not used to the climate, while Allen was used to the climate, and was not reduced as I was. I think I would have gained our last fight had Allen not struck foul. I was not punished as badly as I was when I fought him before and the fight was a draw. In the last fight he struck two fouls; the first I thought was accidental and did not claim; the last I thought was a deliberate blow, and I claimed it. The foul I claimed was a bit just below the eye while I was on my knees. I have been cheated out of my money, and I have no one to blame but Jem Mace, who I think has treated me shamefully."

He says that the officers who arrested him in New York treated him like gentlemen, and that he could have put the Kentucky detective to a good deal of trouble and the State to additional cost by taking advantage of the failure on the part of the man taken there to identify him. He was put in a crowd of nine men, and the man that was to identify him picked out the wrong man; but, knowing it was trouble and cost for nothing, he acknowledged to the officer that he was the man he wanted. Had he not been arrested, he and his wife, whom he left in New York, would have been on their way to England, to which place he is anxious to return. He is in considerable trouble about his wife, whose heart, he says, is nearly broken by the trouble into which he was decoyed by Mace. The only hope he has of being relieved is that his friends in New York will come to his assistance.

When talking about Jem Mace, Goss becomes considerably agitated, and looks volumes. He declares that he has made his appearance in the ring for the last time; that his aim is to be a peaceful and law-abiding man.

Criminal Court.

Quite a crowd was in town Monday to witness the opening of the spring term of the Criminal Court. All the boys who had entered into bonds for their appearance in court that day were on hand at an early hour, and kept within earshot of the Judge's stand during the entire day.

The Judge arrived about 11 a. m., but did not open court till 1 o'clock, shortly after which time Colonel Monfort, Commonwealth's Attorney, put in his appearance.

Upon the organization of the grand jury, the Judge proceed to deliver the elaborate instructions for which he has, among other proceedings in his court, acquired considerable notoriety. During the instructing of the jury the Court-house was crowded with persons, who, in breathless silence, caught every word as uttered by the Court.

The following named persons compose the grand jury:

Hon. J. A. Gaines, foreman.
J. W. Gaines,	Jas. H. Lawell,
E. M. Gaines,	H. Hoffman,
Templeton Gaines,	Milton Wilhoit,
Alonzo Gaines,	Ben Stephens,
Noah Sebree,	Lewis Conner,
W. L. Rouse,	W. T. Gorman,
Henry Crisler,	Noah Clore.

Ira Percival filed in court an affidavit, in which he objected to any grand jury impaneled by Judge McManama investigating the charge for which he was committed to jail. He also objects to Judge Mc.'s presiding in any proceeding against him upon said charge, and states that he does at believe said Judge will afford him a fair and impartial hearing and determination of any proceedings in relation to said charge.

The following persons, who were indicted for witnessing the Goss-Allen mill near Walton, came into court and acknowledged judgment, and were each fined $10: Edward Casey, David Lock, Ed Cleary, Finnely Madeira, L. C. Learn.

Court then adjourned.

TUESDAY.

There was a small crowd in town.

The grand jury was called in, when J. A. Gaines and Noah Clore were excused, they being civil officers. J. B. Frazier and Jo Rich were summoned in their places. The jury was again sworn and charged, and Ben Stephens appointed foreman. The jury then retired to their rooms to commence their investigations.

Judge O'Hara moved that the Clerk hold an election for a special Judge to preside in the proceedings in the Percival case. The motion was objected to by the Commonwealth's Attorney, and the Court took time.

Commonwealth vs. Ross Tupman. Not found. Sheriff of Kenton County fined $20 for not executing bench warrant; alias bench warrant ordered.

Same vs. Wash Roberts. Continued. Alias bench warrants to Boone and Gallatin.

The petit juries were then impaneled. Jury No. 1 is composed of the following persons:

J. Tanner,	Joel Conner,
R. A. Brady,	Owen Conner,
Wm. Rouse,	Legrand Gaines,
John Smith,	T. B. Rouse,
Joe Graves,	Jas. Conner,
J. P. Utz,	L. W. Riley.

JURY NO. 2.

Hamp Adams,	Lewis Weaver,
W. C. Rouse,	Joe Wenver,
Owen Gaines,	J. W. Kennedy,
John W. Berkshire,	L. P. Arnold,
N. S. Walton,	Nick Talbott,
Ben R. Gaines,	Cy Bruce.

The call of the docket then commenced.

The first case was the Commonwealth vs. Puck Beach. Continued and alias bench warrant to Grant; Sheriff of Grant fined $10 for making a false return.

Same vs. John Drunsen. Filed away with leave to the Clerk to redocket.

Same vs. Robert Holder (col'd). Alias and continued.

Same vs. John Rogers. Bail bond forfeited.

Same vs. Henry Picher and Thos. Fullilove. Rule on Sheriff of Grant County.

Same vs. Little, &c. Alias and continued.

Same vs. Thornton Frazier. Same order.

Same vs. Davis & Beall. Motion filed for a new trial. Motion overruled.

Same vs. Jup Stockwell. The attorney for the defense wanted the trial continued on the grounds that the defendant was not able to be present. Commonwealth introduced a witness and proved Stockwell was seen on the road this morning; that he walked half a mile. The case was tried. Stockwell was fined $25 and ten days' imprisonment.

About 2 p. m. the grand jury returned an indicted against Ben B. Roberts for stealing a horse from Mrs. Elizabeth Rogers. All the regular jurors present were put in the box, and the panel filled with bystanders. The case was tried, and a verdict of not guilty returned.

The motion made in the forenoon in the Percival case, and upon which the Court took time, was overruled. An election for a special Judge to try the case was held, and P. U. Major was chosen. The indictment charges Percival with the willful murdor of Dr. R. H. Brashier. The defendant filed a motion for a change of venue, and the case was continued till Saturday.

Court adjourned till 9 a. m. Wednesday.

THE Assessor is dispatching his official duties rapidly. The list of dogs is panning out handsomely.

A Hotel as It Is a Hotel.

We have just ascertained why friend L. H. Dills is looking so well since his return. It is solely attributable to the change of diet. The following are some of the dainties he feasted upon while in the Crescent City:

Among the different Soups were Cork and Whalebone.

Fish—Blind Herring; Cross-eyed Herring. Cold Dishes—Raw Ice; Fried Ice; Hot Ice; Roast Chickens 48 years old; Scared Crow, a la Hoof Sauce; Turkey, stuffed with Rubber Shoes; Goat, stuffed with Cotton; Swan, stuffed with Red Flannel.

Tongues—Old Maid's Lip; Mother-in-Law Tongue; Son-in-Law Sass.

Entries—Umbrellas, Rainwater Sauce; Stewed Cats' Frogs' Ears, a la Coal Oil Sauce; Buzzards' Eyebrows, Larded; Tree Toads, fried and stuffed with White Mice; Horse Blankets, Fricasseed; Boiled Flies, Corn Cob Salad; Humming Birds, stuffed with Old Shoes; Fried Buffalo Robes.

Vegetables—Tight Boot Corns, Soft Corns and Corn Cob.

Pastry—Leather Pies; Sawdust Pies; Flaxseed Pudding; Shingle Nail Pudding.

Dessert—Floating Raft and Door Jam.

Fruits, Nuts, &c.—Peeled Onions; Osage Oranges; Snow Balls; Hog's Foot Gum Drops, etc., etc.

Liquids—Hot Water, Salt Water, Cold Water, Ice Water, Hair Oil and Hard Water.

These are a few only of the many dishes that make up the bill of fare. These dainties are recommended to our many dyspeptic friends, but likely they are more palatable when taken in a Southern atmosphere. We are satisfied that friend Dills gained many pounds while South, and we can assign no other reason than high diet.

Some of the advantages of the hotel where the above bill of fare is served are, each guest can have a front room up one flight of stairs. Every room is furnished with all the modern conveniences. Meals every minute if desired. Every guest has the best seat in the dining room and the best waiter in the house. The office clerks are very accommodating—can lead in prayer, play poker, shake for the drinks at any hour, amuse the children, repeat the Beecher trial from memory, and can room forty people in the best room in the house when the hotel is full. Dogs are allowed in any room in the house. The hotel will be moved anywhere to accommodate guests. Isn't it a wonder Mr. Dills did not have it moved to Burlington? Well, he is now at home, and it is the opinion of everybody he had better be kept here, or the county will loose him.

THE atmosphere, last Friday evening, held too much water in solution for the hop to be given that evening by the String Band of this place. The dance was adjourned over till the evening of the 6th of next month. The committee requests us to say all those holding invitations to the one appointed for 16th inst., are requested to attend.

MR. JOHN T. MATSON has ingeniously constructed a platform upon which to walk into the State Legislature. He is against the road law, the dog law, stock law, and any appropriation of money for the improvement of any of the State water courses, and in favor of docking tobacco as he has done heretofore. Who's for Matson?

"AFFIRMED. That discovery extinguished the Indians' right to the occupation of the soil," was discussed in the "literary," last week. The committee to which the question was referred was unanimously for the affirmative. Mr. Indian might as well strike his tent and journey on.

THE prisoners in the jail say, "less water of a rainy day and more light at all times would be appreciated." Can't the County Court furnish that building with life preservers? If they don't, it may become necessary for Roberts to cut a hole in the building to let the water out.

GREENSBURG is the name of a new village that is now taking shape between here and Bellevue. One day last week a man was seen going that way with a hammer and ten cents worth of nails in his hands. Inland improvements, eh!

THE Owen News says Boone County is entitled to the Senator from this district this time. You are correct, friend, and the man you designate to represent the same is one worthy of the position.

LAST Monday the demand for a view of Joe Goss was so great that it became necessary for the Jailer to have him appear on the landing of the stairs in front of the jail.

THE report comes to us that, a few days since, Mr. W. O. F. Harter and Miss Estelle Winston, of Union, became matrimonial determined and eloped.

JUDGE Mc. says Mr. Love, Sheriff of Kenton County, must start off right in regard to processes from the Boone Criminal Court.

THE tobacco raisers of the Woolper neighborhood delived a considerable quantity of the weed, last week.

THERE have not been many "barl's o' maple sweetness" put upon the market here this spring.

BOOTS and shoes for winter wear below cost at C. Kleymeier's, 20 Pike street, Covington, Ky.

PROF. TICE said nothing about snow, rain, sleet and thunder and lightening on the 16th inst.

REV. B. F. BRISTOW will preach in Union on the second Sunday in April at 3 p. m.

REV. L. JOHNSON will preach in Union on the first Sunday in April at 11 p. m.

THE County Grange met at the residence of Wm. M. Conner last Friday.

LET'S call it a Gaines jury instead of a grand jury.

The roads, for a few days last week, were knobby.

DR. J. M. GRANT is now regularly domiciled.

BUTTER is scarce at 25c. per pound.

Personal Mention.

R. S. STRADER, of Lexington, has been attending court.

P. U. MAJOR, Judge O'Hara and Jno. Fisk are attending Criminal Court.

WE are sorry to learn that Esq. James N. Early, of Petersburg, is in a critical condition.

MR. SAMUELS, Assessor of Madison County, was in town Monday, seeking an interview with the grand jury.

WE were glad to meet our friend Thomas Grant, at one time a citizen of Bellevue, but for several years a resident of the West, in town Tuesday.

THE handsome face of Joseph Wagstaff, Esq., of Florence, was radiating its bewitching smiles upon our streets several days this week.

THE Cynthiana Democrat, of last week says:

"Mr. Cave Clore, of Boone County, arrived in this city last Thursday on a visit to his daughter, Mrs. Nettie Renaker."

MR. GEO. R. WHITE, last week, returned to Missouri, to which place he, this week, moved with a view of making it his future home. George leaves quite an extensive circle of friends in "old Kentuck," who wish him success in his new home. The RECORDER, of course, is to be George's weekly visitor from his old home.

SATURDAY, Sunday and Monday it didn't look much like springtime had come "Gentle Annie."

BORN—To Mr. James Beedle and wife, on the 11th inst., a daughter—11½ pounds net.

SOME one wants to know if Joe Goss is left-handed? Ask Charlie Riddell.

SEVERAL of the boys, this week, expect the compliments of Miss Demeanor.

MONDAY the grip and smile of the candidate were abroad in the crowd.

THE fruit "is gone where the woodbine twineth."

Tributes of Respect.

Resolutions passed by Boone Division No. 115, Sons of Temperance, Petersburg, Ky., March 9th, 1877, on the death of Miss Maggie McWethy:

WHEREAS, Miss Maggie McWethy, a member of the Sons of Temperance, has, by the will of the Great Patriarch above, been removed from our midst by the hand of death, Resolved, That the Order has lost a true and ardent worker, the family circle an affectionate daughter and sister, and society a pure, bright member.

MARTHA GRANT.

MAGGIE MCWETHY was born in 1857, and died on March 8th, 1877. She joined the Methodist Church at Petersburg at an early age, where she held membership at the time of her death.

Sister Maggie was a faithful, consistent and zealous Christian, and a most devoted Methodist, while in the common relations of life she was unsurpassed for her friendship as an associate, her devotion as a sister. In her death the Church, the community, the family have all lost a worthy and exemplary member, while heaven has been enriched by her addition to the society of the just made perfect.

For many days her health had been perceptibly yielding to the insidious encroachments of disease, yet at the time of her death the near approach of the grim monster was not anticipated, when suddenly she fell asleep in death as quietly as the evening shade becomes invisible upon the green carpeted landscape.

Her funeral was preached in the presence of a large concourse of her brethren and sisters and friends, when her mortal remains were laid quietly to rest in the churchyard. May the lord comfort the bereaved, and enable them to "sorrow not as those who have no hope.

Thou are gone from us, dear Maggie, there is dust upon thy brow,
And coldness in thy kindly heart, which ne'er was cold till now;
But sweet and undisturbed thy rest beneath the sacred stone,
Where plows hands thy couch have spread, and thou art left alone.

Thou art gone before us Maggie, yet we have no tears to shed,
For we know that thou art numbered with the blessed, holy dead;
And in that continuing city, to which we all yet hope to come,
Hash found, through faith in Christ our Lord, a blessing and a home.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

BURLINGTON, KY., MARCH 22.

I GIVE THEE ALL, MY DEAREST.

I give thee all, my dearest!
All that I have on earth;
'Tis better far than riches,
Than fortune's pride of birth.
For riches, love, may fly us,
And pride but cause a smart;
Then take the gift I offer—
A pure and loving heart!

The world may look on coldly—
Well, let it look and frown;
The sun that rose enclouded
Has gone in lustre down!
Then say you truly love me,
And never from me part,
And take the gift I offer—
A true and loving heart!

The lords of earth may revel
In wealth and idle ease;
And thousands worship Mammon,
Upon their bending knees;
But we, though poor and needy,
Will bear each other's smarts,
And go through life together,
With true and trusting hearts!

Hog Cholera.

We do not pretend that the cholera when once firmly seated can be cured, but unhesitatingly affirm that if prompt measures are taken, when the disease first appears in the herd, a large majority of the hogs may be saved. We say hogs, knowing that young pigs, when taken sick from any cause, can only be saved by a miracle.

As soon as the disease shows itself in the herd, attention to the following particulars is imperative:

1. Remove the sick animals from the pen to comfortable quarters, and provide the herd with fresh bedding and ample protection from the weather.

2. Avoid feeding corn in any form. Feed the sick animals milk exclusively or milk mixed with a little middlings, and the entire herd with shorts, middlings, ground oats or rye. If the food can be cooked so much the better.

3. Let the entire herd have ready access to pure water, and keep constantly in the yard a pile of charcoal and ashes.

4. Keep in mind constantly this general truth: the hog is a cleanly brute which enjoys and pays for clean quarters, and especially his nature, no less than man's, demands a proper supply of nitrogenous food.

Only a week ago we heard a careful farmer and a well-known Berkshire breeder assert that, after much experience, he had no longer any dread of hog cholera, for he could cure it with new milk.—Prof. Sheldon.

Ears of Swine.

A breeder, writing in the Iowa Producer, says: "It seems to me that there is enough in this subject to engage the attention of those employed in the improvement of swine in this country. One objection made to the Berkshires is that they are too nervous. This is true of some individuals of the Berkshire family, but does not hold good as a universal rule. It has been, and probably now is, practiced by some to breed for small, upright ears. That a small, upright ear is a mark of beauty, I will admit; but, after close observation for a number of years, I am satisfied that this style of ear is indicative of a nervous, restless disposition—a thing not desirable in any animal, especially in a hog. It is necessary that a hog be docile, and of a quiet disposition, whose natural inclination is to take on fat. On the other hand, breeders may run to extremes on the side of large ears. I think this has been done by breeders of Poland-China swine. There is no sensible reason for a hog's ears hanging down over his eyes so as to obscure his vision. Such hogs often labor under continual fear because they are nearly blinded by their enormous ears. Now, it seems to me that these extremities should be avoided. Let the Poland-China breeders breed for a medium ear, and the Berkshire breeders be less anxious for small, upright ears, and I think both breeds will be improved in this regard."

A PROSECUTION has been commenced at Eufaula, Alabama, for a murder committed twenty-five years ago. It appears that six negroes who were at work in the woods cutting timber, murdered a man named Dixon, and reported that his death was caused by a broken limb of a falling tree. He was found with the limb across his head, which was crushed, and a coroner's jury accepted the statement, and returned a verdict accordingly. An old negro woman, about six months ago, made a statement that the negroes murdered Dixon, caused the district attorney to investigate the case and arrest two of the negroes, when one turned State's evidence, and disclosed all the facts of the murder. An indictment was found last December, and four of the negroes will be tried for the crime. Two are dead.

WILL Mr. Hayes go on in the liberal non-partisan policy he has declared, or will he falter and turn back? The policy he proposes embraces two parts—non-interference in the South, and independence of Congressional influence in his civil appointments. Each involves a reversal of the policy of his Republican predecessor; the execution of either is beset with difficulties, and there is already springing up in Mr. Hayes' own party disappointed men to thwart and harass him at every step of his progress.—St. Louis Republican.

THE survival of the fittest—A live milliner.

A Grange Essay.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The following essay, read before our Grange several weeks since by one of our lady members, was, by the unanimous voice of the Grange, directed to be sent to the RECORDER for publication. THOS. F. GRANT,
Secretary Petersburg Grange No. 1,280.

MY GRANGER BRETHREN AND SISTERS: As you have, in a moment of most inconsiderate haste, especially appointed and consecrated me a committee of one to bore you with a manuscript auger at this meeting, I take it to be the most charitable thing I can do to put you on your guard, and now most solemnly warn you that the infliction now to follow is of your own suggestion, and that, in all your thought of regret at its dryest advice and most trying delivery, you alone are the culprits. So, if I should by any accident chance to rise to a train of thought that could interest you for a single moment, do me the favor to appear so all the time, and not wake up in the midst of the development of some thought over which I may have spent hours of study, and, misunderstanding the idea, annihilate your reader with confusion.

The vagueness of the suggestion by which I was placed in the position I now occupy, when entirely divested of the elaboration with which it was so charmingly presented to us, had left me, I found to my consternation and dismay, with an essay to compose without a subject to begin upon, save that it was to be something about a home. I was utterly bewildered. That word home I caught at with a gasp of inspiration and a faith that has not deserted me in the composition, and I hope will not in the delivery, of this sapient combination of dried old figures of speech.

Home is something that I feel most at home in; it is something that poets have sung about, that the wealthy and dissipated have misused and deserted, and that the poorest Granger may be satisfied with. Thus, by an easy and natural stage, I get back to myself (that inspiring subject), and will at once proceed to say what I anticipated in the outset would take much less ink and Webster's dictionary to express. As an instance that variety is the spice of life, and embroidery being a woman's idea of variety, I found myself so dissatisfied with my single-syllabled subject that I cast about in the miscellaneous stores of my mind for something to trim it with. As a final result of all this study and thought on so serious a subject, I conclude to announce the name of the subject upon which I have composed this farrango to be

HOME ATTRACTIONS.

And now we are in for it indeed. Home is an association of ideas, tastes, realities of things to have and to enjoy; an abiding place that finds our necessary, and often luxurious, wants supplied; a school of training; in short, everything by which we are anything or accomplish anything in the years three-score and ten. The attractions of home are what the indwellers make them, and are as varied and numerous as there are possessors of homes on all the broad surface of the earth. Home attractions are the product of necessity, taste and ingenuity. Economy and an attractive home go hand in hand as often as affluence and home enjoyment; so the poverty stricken need not so utterly despair as that their homes may not be peacefully pleasant and enjoyable, instead of being simply the place where the appetites of hunger and thirst are to be gratified. The man or woman whose appreciation of a home is measured by this standard scarcely deserves one.

But I am not expected (at least, if I am, those so expecting will be disappointed) to devote much of this essay to a criticism of the ladies' part and lot in the adornment of home. The gentlemen called for this essay, and the gentlemen shall have it.

I know the lady membership will smile in sympathy upon my effort to consider the popular type of home gentleman as we know him among us. It is something like this: He holds his home in his thoughts as his actions exactly and faithfully indicate. Always admitting that he has a good wife—a fact that none of us will doubt or they deny—they regard their homes as a place to be furnished with the necessaries, and perhaps luxuries, of life; as a nice place to attend in case of the arrival of the hour for meals; as the best place on earth to get a button sewed on, a shirt washed, the garden hoed, the fruit and vegetables gathered, or to make a fine speech upon the carrying in of coal, wood or water, and generally upon all various subjects so trying to a housekeeper, of which they know so little and say so much. Then, when the Sheriff comes down upon his majesty, how convenient the old garret is. He can just throw his hat under the bed, his dignity to the winds, and, with a monkey's agility, he seeks a retreat from the woes of the Sheriff world among the cobwebs that drape the rafters, while the partner of his joys stands trembling'y before the storm of questioning, and thereby gives her lord his liberty once more.

Well, no woman on earth could go on at any great length on this branch of the subject; so, to gratify my love of the various, I will turn to a consideration of the good type, who unfortunately for us, like the good Indians, usually die young. He comes in tired; looks anxiously at the clock; meal time; supper is an hour late; patiently, without even a sigh of disappointment, he doffs his boots, dons his slippers, glides gently into his favorite arm chair to read; door opens; "John, there is no coal;" well, he brings it, and in the secure privacy of the dark coal-shed he confidently assures a large lump of coal that he does live a terrible life. Next the baby cries; then the water is out, and he goes after that. After tea company comes in—a garrulous old neighbor, who talks proudly of the superiority of his wife over all others. Then it is that that husband shines in his greatest brilliancy, and you feel prondest of him. To see him trip lightly and confidently by, quite as a matter of course, into the conversation and monopolize it, the first time the old neighbor stops for breath, and then hear him expatiate upon the excellence of his wife, children and home, as compared with any others—why, it almost breaks your heart for the dear fellow, and you almost feel like sending him after another bucket of water. Just to think that he can be, and is, so faithful and honest.

The out-door attractions of a home are, by their nature, substantial in their structure, and for their creation the wife depends almost entirely on the husband. As, for instance, one brother was seized and carried away with his mania for a green-house at our last meeting, and, from his warm advocacy of the article, one would infer that all he needed for the consummation of his plans at once was a time and opportunity. Well, when that brother is ready to build his green-house, he will not fail for the want of able counsel, if he will call for it in the right direction. Really, there seems to be an awakening from a lethargy on the part of our enthusiastic brother of the green-house project, for he was equally zealous for a diagram illustrating the tasteful and convenient arrangement of a home and its surroundings. As I am not only inexpert in the art of drawing, but a total failure, I am therefore compelled to turn this branch of the business to the more skillful hands of my more accomplished sisters in the Order, and will go back to the point of digression from the main topic.

The social attractions of a home are by far the most important, and upon their development and maintenance the success of the adventure depends. The married man, who, in his days of courtship would risk his foolish head to pluck a flower from some overhanging cliff because his lady-love has expressed a wish for it, and now, that he has wooed and won her, will stand quietly by and see her split the stove-wood, milk the cow, &c., ad libitum, shows plainly enough that in the one part or the other of this drama of life he has not been faithful. Not that he should continue foolish or over-zealous, but that he should not forget that he has promised better things than that. To these social attractions, then, should all turn who will be securely happy. Upon them depends everything that makes a partnership life a pleasant, or even a tolerable, one, and so surely as they are ignored or lost sight of, so surely does the attractiveness of a home give way before the fancied enjoyment of some other. The street corner, the little grocery, the grog-shop lead the once caged victim a life of lasting degradation, and the wife one of bitter and unavailing regret. The alternative is sometimes such an absorption by business cares of all other thoughts that a life of careless indifference and toleration ensues.

In summing up, we conclude that home attractions consist more in the cultivation and development of those higher principles by which affection is built to an attitude of security, than in showy and handsome houses. True it is that these are sometimes homes of enjoyment, but they follow the adoption of the former as naturally as the growth of flowers follows on the footsteps of spring.

AT a meeting of the Chinese Committee which sat at San Francisco, the Rev. Otis Gibson, who lived ten years in China, was asked: "What is the relation of man and woman in China?" "They have an idea that man is the head of the house." "Is the woman anything more than a slave to the man?" "I guess it is about the same in China as it is here. I once had a Chinaman speak to me on the subject. He was an intelligent man and an officer of the Government, who had sent three or four of his sons to America to be educated. He said: 'Many Chinamen laugh at you and the English people because women rule in your country; but women rule in China, too. Women rule the world. The Chinese women rule, the same as in your country, only we have the name of ruling them; but we don't.'"

Gen. Pierce's War Horse.

The black horse that Gen. E. W. Pierce, Freetown, rode on the battle fields in Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky and East Tennessee, in the late war, died at the home of its owner in Assonet village on Washington's Birthday, and the next day was buried in a pine box in the General's family lot in the cemetery, its winding sheet being an American flag.—Buffalo Express.

GENTLEMEN at Washington, has it never occurred to you that the Republican party has just too narrowly escaped one of the worst threshings a political party ever got, to justify it in getting up any distracting fights in the family circle? "Let us have peace."—Burlington Hawkeye.

CAST IN THY MITE.

BY E. R. BURRINGTON.

He who gives little from his store,
If little be his means,
Treads on as far the heaven-ward shore
As he who gives ten times the more—
If ten times more his gains.
He may be useful here who would,
And walk within a zone of light;
There is a treasury of good;
Cast in thy mite!

Then may'st not have one piece of gold
To bless the poor man's palm;
But angels will with joy behold
If thou but words which can be told
His troubled heart to calm;
For kind words are as honied streams,
And he, the walker of the sea,
Who gives them to his brother, seems
A messenger from God.

If thou dost see the fatherless,
And watch the widow's tear;
Dry up the fountains of distress,
Be thou the father quick to bless,
The husband ever near;
Though down they slide Misfortune's slope,
They live not in a starless night;
They have a treasury of hope—
Cast in thy mite!

Noses.

It can scarcely be realized how much or how little of our avoirdupois devoted to our olfactories governs the expression of the countenance or materially changes it. How far the nose is indicative of character, it is impossible to state, but there are women, yelept busy bodies, who carry an unmistakable interrogation point to blow over other peoples' temporal affairs.

There may, also, be witnessed a disposition to elevate themselves high in air—upon the part of slightly retrousie and piquant ornament of pretty faces—caused by the proximity of vulgar parvenues offending like a noisome odor. Then there are obstinate noses, prim and punctilious noses—pious and sanctimonious. Possibly saucy noses of pretty girls can most be endured.

Noses there are with thin curving nostrils, said to be animated by blue blood, quivering in choler, like the warhorse; also an evidence of aristocracy is the true aquiline. Now we come to the pug, pitiable target for mischievous and venomous childhood, of which there are so many patterns it is impossible to embody the traits accompanying them; nor is it fair to observe that this style of nose has suffered more than others from contact with red pepper on coat and pinafore sleeves, judiciously applied by anxious mothers in the hope of correcting a pernicious habit, exclusively a specialty of incipient youth.

A broad flat pug, rather squarely set, rarely belongs to other than a genial being. As one of this type probably may be classed that of the immortal, benevolent and long-suffering S. Pickwick, Esq. Another, a nondescript pug with wandering thick nostrils, denotes a decided sluggish temperament. One of another ilk, seldom possessed by men, comparatively straight and not uncomely, until it unhappily terminates in a little vicious bull; ever ominous as a precursor of coming conflicts. More precise than a weather-vane is this nose, an exponent of the mental thermometer of its impetuous owner; and when Vesuvius breaks forth in all its searing acrimony, behold the ball is wrought to a fever heat, and ignites the electricity flashing from anger's eyes.

Perhaps Socrates was occasionally treated with these ebullitions, which may, in part, account for his genuine craving to sample the Hemlock.

There are, however, calm noses, placid noses, never perturbed with trifles—blissfully oblivious of snubs—long noses, if you will. Their exact shape can not easily be defined. They are generally carried over wide and firm jaws—noses about which are subtle influences of intellectual power.

It is not cheering to all individuals wearing a diminutive nose to hear that member criticized as insignificant.

Neither is it an established axiom that without any nose at all, one may not be blessed with brains; yet it affords a modicum of comfort to one bored who has successfully baffled the different grades of persecution, to know that humanity may be afflicted or adorned with an uncommonly prominent nose, and still remain several degrees remote from an idiot—as she left ily sports a veritable fac-simile of a "Marie Stuart," which in itself has at least the merit of rarity.—Mildred Richter.

THE practice was formerly in vogue of piling hides one upon the other in pits, with a layer of finely ground bark between each hide, water being added on the pit becoming full—a process which was repeated until the thorough tanning of the hide. This, as is well known, made good, tough leather, but the time taken in the process was often two years. At the present time separate tanks or pits are used, in which the strong liquors required are brewed, and the clear solution presented to the skin. The former system would give liquors which nominally registered from three to twenty-five degrees by the hydrometer. The present plan often gives liquors from twelve to seventy degrees. Hence, the process of tanning heavy butts is now shortened to eight or twelve months.

Teaching Children the News of the Day.

Miss Mitchell, teacher of First Grammar Grade in the Washington school, Pittsburg, Penn., has introduced a new and brilliant feature in her school exercises. It consists of a discussion of the news of the day between the pupils and teacher, the first half hour of the morning being devoted to that exercise. "The Bulletin," is drawn on the blackboard in large German text letters, and immediately below, in newspaper style, are headlines similar to those employed by daily papers in giving the points of the most important news, and then each head-line is taken up by the school, and a general interchange of views takes place between the teacher and pupils. The Bulletin is the daily paper of that room, and an editor is elected by the school every month, whose duty it is to examine the Pittsburg papers every morning, and to write down on the blackboard, before school hours, the points for discussion, to give a head-line resume of the news of the day, as it were, and if the editor exhibits capacity for the work intrusted to him, he is often re-elected to his high position. At the time of the visit of the representative of the New York Weekly, Fred Wallace was editor, and it was ascertained that he gave entire satisfaction. Of course the discussion does not take in news of every description, but only of the most interesting character. It includes the Proceedings of Congress, Foreign News, Editorial Topics, Local News, &c., &c. This exercise is regarded as part of their school work, and is entered into by every pupil with the greatest possible interest, and many of them whose parents can afford it, purchase a paper every morning and study its entire contents, just as they do their grammar, their geography and arithmetic. By means of the Bulletin every scholar learns the important news of the day and is enabled to understand the various great questions which agitate the public mind. The value of an exercise of this kind is beyond description, and it is hoped that it will soon become an established custom in every public school in this country.

Miss Mitchell is a young teacher of great capacity, and as the pioneer in this branch of education deserves special honor and commendation.—N. Y. Weekly.

A Submarine Volcano.

The Honolulu Gazette, of February 28, contains an account of a remarkable submarine volcano outbreak in Kealakeakana Bay, near the entrance to the harbor. The natives report that the eruption occurred at 3 o'clock on the morning of the 24th, appearing like innumerable red, blue and green lights. In the afternoon several boats visited the eruption, cruising over the most active part where the water was in a state of peculiar activity, boiling and appearing as if passing over the Rapids, or very much like the water at Hell Gate, at New York. Blocks of lava two feet square came up from below, frequently striking and jarring the boats. As the lava was quite soft no harm was done. Nearly all the pieces on reaching the surface were red-hot, emitted steam and gas strongly sulphurous. A rumbling noise was heard like that of rocks in a freshet, caused no doubt by the eruption of lava from a submarine crater, which is supposed to be the crack or line of rupture extending at least a mile from shore. Another rupture, doubtless a continuation of the submarine fissure, was traced inland from the shore nearly three miles, varying in width from a few inches to three feet. In some places water was seen pouring down into the abyss below. A severe shock of earthquake was felt by those living at Kaowalea and Kell during the night of the eruption, which must have preceded the outbreak. It was quite severe, but no damage is reported.

Age of the Earth.

Sir W. Thompson has concluded from different lines of argument, that the age of the earth, as a body cool enough for habitation, can not be greater than one hundred million years. Prof. Taft, however, in his work on the "Recent Advance in Physical Science," comes to a somewhat different conclusion, and puts the limit of the world's age at ten million years. When doctors disagree, who shall decide? As for other worlds than ours, some of them are said to be so far away that the light has not even yet reached our planet. A writer in the "Quarterly Review" says that "the telescope has rendered visible stars so amazingly remote that light leaping over a hundred and eighty-six thousand miles in a single second would take five hundred thousand years to travel from them to the earth." Astronomers and geologists have a way of tossing millions of years about as if they were grains on the sand of time. It makes the few score allotted to man appear amazingly insignificant.

SCENE in Texas. Hotel table. "Good morning, stranger; it looks like rain." Stranger—"I think not." A shot was heard, and the stranger is rolled out of the back door. Moral—Texas is a fine grazing country.

Remus's Church Experiences.

"You don't come down to church no mo', Brudder Remus. Dere's bin a might' int'restin' meetin' gwine on lately."

Do Not Face the Light When at Work.

Statistics kept by oculists employed in infirmaries for eye disease have shown that the habit of some persons in facing a window from which the light falls directly on the eyes as well as on the work injures their eyes in the end. The best way is to work with a side light, or, if the work needs strong illumination, so that it is necessary to have the working table before the window, the lower portion of the latter should be covered with a screen, so as to have a top light alone, which does not shine on the eyes when the head is slightly bent over and downward toward the work.

In the schools in Germany this matter has already been attended to, and the rule adopted to have all the seats and tables so arranged that the pupils never face the windows, but only have the side lights from the left; and as a light simultaneously thrown from two sides gives an interference of shadows, it has been strictly forbidden to build school rooms with windows on both sides, such illumination having also proved injurious to the eyes of the pupils.

We may add to this the advice not to place the lamp in front of you in the evening, but a little on one side, and never to neglect the use of a shade, so as to prevent the strong light from shining in the eyes. This is especially to be considered at the present time, when kerosene lamps, with their intensely luminous flames, become more and more common.—Medical Journal.

LITTLE Sandy, the bootblack, was skipping down Griswold Street yesterday, when a policeman asked him if anything was up. "Guess Jim Blaine is up there in an insurance office," replied Sandy. "Jim Blaine! Why, he isn't in town." "Well it's a fellow who is throwing his arms around, hopping up and down, and yelling out, 'I won't be quiet! I can't be put down! I hanker for blood! You lie—you lie!' You'd better go up there for they are fixing to put a head on him whether he's Jim Blaine or not."—Detroit Free Press.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

NOT a sign of greatness—His X mark.

SUNDAY marriages are illegal in Michigan.

A BILL is pending in the Nevada Legislature declaring it unlawful for the Chinese to transport the bones of their dead from the burying grounds.

THE first bank in the United States was the Bank of North America, organized January 7, 1772, at Philadelphia, and it is still transacting an extensive business in the Quaker City.

YOUNG SEARS, of Boston, the "richest young man in America," has a Western rival. The newspaper story is that Charles S. Albert, of Richmond, Ind., just out of college, has fallen heir to $7,000,000. A German bachelor uncle left it.

A WISCONSIN hen, a few days ago, laid an egg with the letter "C" on it; but not even Josh Billings can spell War with a "C." The egg, according to our notion, was intended for the Centennial, but the hen had been bulldozed, and consequently late in getting in her returns.

"I AM convinced that the world is daily growing better," remarked the reverend gentleman to a brother clergyman; "my congregation is constantly increasing." "Yes," interrupted the brother, who happened to be a penitentiary chaplain, "and so is mine." And there the discussion on the early arrival of the millennium dropped.

IN the investigation, by the Massachusetts Legislature, into the iniquities of the Spitz dog, "one witness testified that in his belief the bite of the Spitz dog is less dangerous than that of a man or a horse, and another said he had often been bitten by these animals without serious results, whereas he was once bitten by a woman and had a very bad hand for a long time!"

THE census has been taken, and 182,988 is found to be the increase in the population of Paris during the past five years. The total number of inhabitants is 2,403,148. This time the question of religion was dropped. It was found absolutely useless as to correct information, and in the present state of parties it would be invidious. Atheism is said to be greatly on the increase in France.

THE Republic of Mexico covers an area of 760,000 square miles, and is divided into twenty-three States, having a population of about 8,000,000. All barriers have been removed to Protestant effort by the Government, and the country is open, so far as the authorities are concerned, to Evangelistic labor; but there are other great obstacles to a hearty reception of the truth, such as Romanism, gross immoralities, revolutions and persecution.

THERE is a story about Miss Broughton, author of "Joan," which, whether it be true or not, might so easily have been true that it is worth telling. It is that she had her first novel clandestinely published, and handed it to her father (a dissenting minister, we believe), asking him casually what he thought of it; and that, after looking it over, he prohibited her from reading such books, on the ground that she was not old enough to be uninfluenced by their morbid character.

THE ladies were balloting for a President of the Society for Carrying the Gospel to Lands Benighted. There were one, two, three, four, five ballots and yet no choice. A sarcastic gentleman, who sat an observer of the proceedings, allowed to one of the fair voters, when the tenth ballot had resulted in an election, that if that was the way the women conducted matters, they were altogether too lengthy about it, and if allowed to vote with men in the affairs of State they would never get through with it. "Well," said she, "it has taken us a good while to do this business, but," with the blandest smile, "when we women get through voting we know who our President is." And then he went home and asked his wife for the snow-shovel.

STEEL freight cars are now suggested, as they are far less in weight than those constructed of wood, thus saving wear and tear of the tracks. It is claimed that a steel car can be made weighing no more than seven tons, which will carry twice that weight of freight. The construction of these vehicles is also said to be stronger and more durable than the wooden cars. Already many iron cars are in use, and freight cars of sheet-iron have also been made, the belief being strongly entertained that this new style of freight car can be constructed and introduced. Its cheapness in the long run, however, must be made apparent, this being the element which, after all, will decide whether cars are to be made of wood, iron or steel. At present wood is much the cheaper and more easily-worked material, and it will continue to be used until iron or steel can underbid it, either in actual first cost or else in the demonstration of a much greater durability that will compensate for the increased original expense.

We are authorized to announce Capt. L. C. Norman as a candidate for State Senator, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Granville V. Rouse as a candidate for the office of Representative in the Legislature for the ensuing term.

We are authorized to announce Jas. L. Henderson as a candidate for the Legislature.

Senator Beck denies that he voted for the confirmation of Fred Douglass.

Bill Arp, the humorist, has gone to that undiscovered country from whose born no traveler returns.

A distinguished barrister of Cincinnati is charged with grand larceny. Chas. H. Blackburn is the man.

The State Senate of New York has passed a bill authorizing the election of women to the office of school trustee.

Colonel D. Howard Smith will please accept our thanks for a copy of the Auditor's report for the year 1876.

The Democrat City Convention in Cincinnati, last Saturday, nominated Geo. W. C. Johnson as a candidate for re-election to the office of Mayor.

Last Friday, a book-keeper of the Brooklyn Bank, in New York, wasarrested—charged with stealing $160,000 belonging to the bank. In the valise he was carrying when arrested, was found $120,000, leaving but $40,000 unaccounted for.

Last Friday, Judge Ballard, at Louisville, passed sentence on twenty-nine prisoners. Twenty-seven of that number are of the classknown as moonshiners. Marion Woosley, Sheriff of Ehuonson County, was among the moonshiners sentenced.

Candidates for United States Senator from this State are being spoken of. Among them are Gen. John S. Williams, of Mount Sterling; Judge Lindsay, of the Court of Appeals; Caldwell, of Louisville, and Machen. Some say the present Governor is also a candidate but he says not.

In New York, Governor Robinson, last week, came to a dead lock with the Republican majority in the State Senate. He was not dividing the patronage to suit the Republicans and they refused to confirm his appointments for State officers. This is not a new thing in that State. Mr. Seward and Mr. Tilden both had some experience with dead locks brought about for the same reasons.

The Auditor's Report for 1876 shows up the condition of our county in the following figures: In 1876 there were listed for taxation 159,334 acres of land, being an increase of 9,120 acres since 1875. The average value of land in 1876 was $27 40 per acre, being a decrease of $1 89 in the valuation per acre since 1875. The total amount of tax was $23,993 32, being a decrease of $3,394 59 since 1875, but in '75 the rate of taxation was 43 cents on the $100 worth of property, while in '76 it was 40 cents.

John D. Lee, the Mountain Meadow murderer, was executed last Friday at 11 a. m. He was taken out upon the scene of the massacre at Mountain Meadows, seated upon his coffin, where he was shot in accordance with his sentence. Five balls penetrated his heart. Before he was shot he made a speech in which he bitterly denounced Brigham Young, and declared himself a scapegoat for the sins of others, and claimed to the last that he was not guilty of the bloodshed. Lee prepared a lengthy statement concerning the horrible massacre, and represents himself as having opposed it in counsel and doing what he could to influence his brethren to allow the emigrants to pass unmolested to California. He thought his autobiography, if published will open the eyes of the world to monstrous deeds of the leaders of the Mormons, and will give particulars of some of the most blood curdling crimes that have been committed in Utah, and which may bring many from their high places in the church to face justice upon the gallows.

Chamberlain, of South Carolina, has undoubtedly commenced weakening, and will be easily gotten off the Administration's hands.

It will be an imposing scene to look at Hayes, Chamberlain and Hampton setting around the Presidential mahogany, settling the South Carolinia squabble.

The Missouri Legislature proposes to put the punishment in capital cases in the hands of the jury with power to fix the penalty of imprisonment for fifty years or death.

The Nicholls Government, in Louisiana, is claimed to be in complete operation. The tax collectors are at work throughout the State receiving current and back taxes. All the business done in courts is done in those recognizing the Nicholls Government.

Nicholls issues a proclamation calling upon the people in Louisiana to pay their taxes, and Packard issues one forbidding them obeying Nicholls. How much longer are things to remain thus? is an interrogatory, an answer to which would be well picasing to the people of that much abused section.

The Lawrenceburg Register, of last week, says: "Lawrenceburg loses one hundred thousand dollars of trade from Boone County, Ky., by not building three miles of pike." We were going to ask the Register to fall a "snake," but see it has no time fixed as a limit. Why didn't you add the amount Boone County loses for the same reason?

Next Monday will be a good time for our Senatorial candidates to cross swords in Burlington. The probabilities are, there will be quite a number of citizens here from all parts of the county, who will be pleased to hear from the gentlemen asking their support. The candidates for the Legislature should also come prepared to mount the rostrum and give the people their views of the matters that now perplex the voters of the county.

Strong efforts are being made in Lawrenceburg, Ind., to have a stove foundry located there. The committee appointed to wait upon the manufacturing company now operating the foundry above Cincinnati, and ascertain the consideration necessary to induce the company moving to Lawrenceburg, thinks the matter one of great moment to the city, and favor the town's taking immediate steps toward the encouragement of the enterprise.

Last Monday in the afternoon, Eph Holland was arrested in Cincinnati on a requisition from this State. He was taken to Covington, where there is an indictment against him for participating in the Goss-Allen prize-fight. He gave bond in the sum of $1,000 for his appearance in the Criminal Court in that city on the first Monday in June, and then hastened back to Cincinnati. The bench warrant from Boone, and against Holland for the same offence, had not reached Covington or he might have had business in this part of the State.

Louisiana is threatened to be punished with a Committee proposing to investigate the political troubles, and report as to the proper person to hold the reins of Government in that Commonwealth. Mr. Hayes don't want to take upon himself the responsibility of saying to either one or the other of the contesting Governments in Louisiana, you shall surely not reign, but wants to put that responsibility on the shoulders of a Commission proposed to be organized and ordered to march upon that State. Wm. A. Wheeler was offered a position on the Commission but he declines going. Wm. went south on that business once before, and reported things badly managed in election affairs.

The called session of the Forty-fifth Congress will meet next June. The Administration hung fire for some time before it could determine whether to have an extra session. The army appropriations brought about the called session. The late Congress was divided on the subject of army appropriations, the House wanting to reduce the numbers of the army and pass a bill prohibiting the use of the soldiers in supporting either of the Governments in South Carolina or Louisiana. In these two moves the Senate would not concur and the bill failed, and it, therefore, became necessary for Congress to again assemble to consider the appropriations for the support of the army. The next Session will doubtless be marked with heated and laborious discussions on this question.

—The Georgetown Times says, mad dogs are about. Three were killed last week, on Eagle in the vicinity of Mr. Thomas C. Vallandingham's—one on Friday and two on Sunday. It would be well enough for persons to keep on their guard.

—In Cynthiana, last week, a man assisting the Marshal to arrest a drunken negro, accidentally shot and wounded a school girl. The populace was so indignant over the careless shooting that they came near lynching the man who did the shooting.

—At Claysville, one night last week, a man fired upon a person attempting to rob his meat-house. Next morning when he went to the meat-house he found a man crushed to death, he having been caught by the house when his partner, who had been fired upon, dropped the lever they had used to raise the building and fled.

We have received a letter from R. H. Shuck, who is now in jail under sentence of death, in which he asserts his innocence, and promises to give the names of the guilty parties, if taken before a court. He says there is a gang of six men, all living near together, who are the real murderers. He asks the sympathy of the people.—Frankfort Yeoman.

Madison Wells and his family are urging war claims before the Southern Claims Commission which amount to nearly seven hundred thousand dollars. It is a fraudulent bill, but Hayes ought to see that he is paid. for if Madison Wells had not been a dishonest fellow, mercenary and conscienceless, Mr. Hayes would never have been seated in the White-House. Hayes really owes him the money.—N. Y. Sun.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Walton.

Nothing of importance has occurred in our little town for some time. Mr. Stamler's house is still in process of erection. It will, when finished, be quite an ornament to the village.

Mr. Matson is doing quite a thriving business at his tobacco warehouse. Indeed, there seems to be no end to the tobacco coming in.

The farm of the late John Rogers has been divided. Mr. Park Holton, from near Waraw, has purchased the house and intends removing to it.

Mrs. Louisa Bruce, we learn, will build an addition to her house, situated near the old school-house.

This cold weather has thrown quite a damper on the spirits of the farmers, some of whom had made very good progress with their plowing.

The Allen-Goss fight has again revived us a topic of coversation. Quite an interest is manifested in what is supposed will be the grand finale.

Mr. J. N. Stewart started, on Saturday, for a visit to his home at Boyd's Station. He wishes to commence a graded school here but at fall, but is not meeting with very great success. Everyone seems prejudiced in favor of sending to the public school, notwithstanding the disadvantages for advanced scholars, there always being such a number of children in attendance. Nemo.

Bulletsville.

Our failure last week to note events from the ville was occasioned by a business engagement, not from a lack of interest in the workings of the community.

We have strangely neglected hitherto to notice the arrival in Bullsville of Henry Rice, from Clay County, Mo., who has come to live among our people, and embark in agriculture. He is working vigorously to clear the land for the plow, but from our observation and most reliable information, we are inclined to the opinion that the young ladies of the neighborhood are as attractive to him as to the young Professor of the Brick, and share largely his agricultural reflections.

Miss Sallie Watts has returned from a protracted visit to Lexington, looking, if possible, more charming than when she left us. She is reported as being very enthusiastic in her praises of the Blue Grass Region.

Bullsville continues to improve. Joshua Masters is erecting a neat frame cottage. This is a good location for men of limited means to secure a home for their families. It is vera ally better than to risk renting from year to year.

We learn that our neighbor, M. T. Graves, has sold to Harvey Hicks about 120 fat sheep, to be delivered April 20, at 5c. per pound.

Our community is mourning for the loss by death of one of our most worthy citizens. I speak of John Riley, who died on Friday last, and was buried on Sunday at Bullesburg by the Patrons of Husbandry, who, notwithstanding the great inclemency of the day, attended in uniform to pay the last tribute of respect for their deceased brother.

Florence.

Friday night, some burglars broke into the smith shop at Wagstaff & Cantler's carriage factory, took a lot of tools, went to T. L. Swetnam's store, forced open the store door, and burglarized the safe by smashing the combination lock with a sledge hammer and punches. In the safe was $25 or $30 in money, which the thieves took, leaving a set of silver spoons worth about $40. This proves conclusively that Ben Butler did not do the stealing. Only the day before the robbery Mr. Swetnum took from his safe $600 or $700 and sent it to town, so the thieves got only the proceeds of a dull day's sales. No clue to thieves.

Sam Carpenter came down the street the other morning with his face wreathed with smiles, and set 'em up for the boys. Cause why? It's a boy—9 pounds.

Jessie Corwin's nose got on a bust last week, and grew to such dimensions it resembled a Dutch baby's foot. Jessie subjected it to the beneficial effects of blue glass, and after three days' application the nasal appendage assumed the appearance of a cucumber going to seed, and contains more colors than the rainbow.

Oscar Huey, jr., was in town last week advertising the claims of one James Henderson to the office of Representative. He says Jim is high toned (6 feet 9), and he intends to stick to Jim's back till his belly is kicked off.

Mrs. Sep Foster, whom we a few weeks since reported dead, is still living. Our report was founded on what we thought a reliable source, but later reports from Florida say she is alive and her health improving.

Personal—Mrs. Emily Carpenter is dangerously ill of pneumonia.....Judge Myers is suffering from a wound received by stepping on an iron prong on a toy table.....Mrs. Bell Buckner and her son, John, have returned from a four months' visit to Oldham County .....James Howe and family have moved to the Mt. Zion neighborhood.....Capt. Snyder has moved into the Howe mansion. Uno.

Plattsburg.

The farmers are rather despondent at present. In February more work had been done than every before in that month. Some of our very active ones nearly finished plowing during the good weather. But March is a stunner. Not a real dry day since the first. Large quantities of tobacco set yet remain to be sown, and unless we have fair weather soon, planting will be later than for many years past.

There seems to be considerable sickness at present in this division, which reminds us that Plattsburg would be a very good place for an active physician. It being about midway between Petersburg and Burlington, a portion of the practice of both places would be retained here.

In the last two weeks a majority of all the tobacco raised in this neighborhood has been taken to market. John Jarrel and Dick Wilson were the last to go on the brooks. John received six and two dollars for his crop, and Dick, seven and one-half and three for his. Mr. Noah Sebree, who is Matson's agent at this place, has bought several crops and still continues to buy.

We have a transient resident in town who says he has walked eight hundred miles this winter, and froze one of his feet so as to impede his traveling nearly one-third. He says he is bound for California without any expense. If this pedestrian soundly recovers he should at once be employed by the general Government to walk around the North Pole, and proceed to lecture on the Arctic Regions.

Died.—On Thursday, March 22d, Mrs. Catharine Sturgeon, after a severe illness of several weeks. Don Juan.

Petersburg.

Owing to the fact that last week was the beginning week of the spring term of our great Criminal Court, which drew, as it invariably does, the most of our adventurous citizens to the Recorder city, the customary amount of aimlessness which goes in the make-up of news items from this city was committed on the thoroughfare between the two points, and, therefore, out of the range of your correspondent's vision.

One of our male friends, who is of the analytical cheuist turn of mind, made the discovery that if you mix onion juice with the ten cent bust ed (about equal parts) that is retailed in Burlington, its properties in the jungle-foot direction are greatly enhanced.

As a couple of our Criminal Courtiers were returning home one evening last week, in a buggy, their horse put his foot carelessly where there was a hole without any bottom to it. The horse performed the celebrated trained elephant trick and stood on his head; the occupants of the buggy, realigning the usual observations of gravity rigidity, came out promptly over the dash, bringing it along with them, and sending a beautifully polished plug hat sailing down the hill. The verdict of the jury was not guilty, and we feel relieved.

Judge A. B. Parker in his special term of court of Oyer and Terminer, held last Saturday, disposed of an important case between C. D. Pratt and a man who had done some work for him, upon which they had failed to agree. We were delighted to see the face of our old fellow-citizen, J. D. Willis, as it glowed with health and enthusiasm, while speaking in well-known tones of thunderous eloquence in defense of the claims of Mr. Pratt. Mr. W. is a retired lawyer, of such long retirement that the disposition to wake the echoes of the past was too tempting to be resisted; and by a species of magnetism, he contrived to infect the mind of the lawyer on the other side (a Mr. Green, from Aurora) with a like enthusiasm. So now the court room (an old grocery) looks like a wreck, needs a new roof, glass in all the windows, and a complete outfit of crockery, cigars and tobacco. The verdict is "Cleaned out."

The first installment of jurors from Gallatin County in the Myers-Terrill case passed through here last Sunday night. The weather "which it was lovely" had a lively effect on the natives, and they made it interesting for the natives in town and along the road they journeyed about midnight, as they took up their line of march on foot through the mud to Burlington. To the excited eyes and ears of those who saw them, the crowd ranged in numbers anywhere from one hundred to a thousand, and in personal appearance and manners more nearly resembled a well-trained band of Ku-Klux than discreet housekeepers.

The Odd-Fellows are to have a grand picnic and steamboat excursion next Friday evening, to be participated in by all the neighboring lodges. The steamboat excursion is by the Minnie, chartered by the Fraternity for the occasion, and will start at Aurora, stop here and at Lawrenceburg, where the entertainment general will be given. Hon. W. S. Keene will deliver one of his popular lectures to the public on the general merits of the order. The public is invited. The boat leaves Aurora at 6 p. m., Petersburg at 6:30 p. m., and returning leaves Lawrenceburg at 10:30 p. m.

CARROLL COUNTY—Liberty Station.

This town having been described in the columns of your paper dated March 1, 1877, by some party unknown to me, I will not reiterate the statement, it being unnecessary to do so, but will proceed to enlighten your readers by giving them the important facts which have come under my limited observation.

The wife of Mr. Wm. Shotwell, of this place, nee Miss Oliver, died at the residence of her husband on the 6th of February, with consumption.

The Blue Lick Cornet Band, of this place, desire me to return their heartfelt thanks and gratitude to "Gen. A. J." for the good work he uttered in their behalf, after his return from the hop at the Eagle Valley House on the 22d of February.

Dr. Nicholas C. Brown, who married Miss Kate McClure, of this county, returned on the eve of the 15th inst., after an extended wedding tour through Virginia. They alighted at Mr. Campbell's hotel where they seemed much pleased to find a hop in progress.

There was a cotillion party at the Eagle Valley House last Thursday evening. Mr. Campbell, the proprietor, exerted himself to promote the happiness and enjoyment of the guests. Mr. Campbell, during his short sojourn here, has acquired many friends. I have become personally acquainted with him and his son, but have not yet been so fortunate as to acquire the acquaintance of his daughters, whom I notice, in society, have acquired many fervent friends.

Au revoir. Magnanimous.

GALLATIN COUNTY—Glencoe.

We were much gratified to receive the Recorder and highly pleased after turning perused it. We are acquainted with no county paper that is more deserving of patronage and success than the Recorder.

Corn can be had at $1 50 delivered. Stock hogs are scarce at 5½c. Howard & Coats sold to Bart Boaz one hundred head of fat hogs at 6c.

Farmers generally are done sowing oats; also, their tobacco seed.

Recently we have had some very serious burning accidents in this vicinity. Some weeks since Miss Nannie Dudgeon, an amiable young lady, was burned severely. She lingered ten days, suffering intense pain, when death relieved her of her sufferings. Shortly after this, a four-year-old daughter of Mrs. Jennie Graves, while in a room alone, fell into the fire and was fearfully burned before assistance came which was attracted by her screams. Death, it is feared, will result. Some of the readers of the Recorder will remember having read, in a communication from this place some time since, of the elopement of the wife of Benjamin Hopkins with one Philip Lowery. The lady's anticipation of domestic felicity with husband No. 2 was not realized. She soon perceived that it was best for her to retrace her steps, and one evening, as the shadows of night were gathering 'round, she, at the doorstep of husband No. 1, with a heart overflowing with repentance, fears and misgivings, humbly petitioned for admission; and, strange to say, he gladly received her into his family circle again. Last Thursday he disposed of his farming utensils, stock, &c., by means of a public sale. He intends to move to Texas, where we hope that pleasant associations and the salubrious climate will teach his lady how to appreciate his true, sterling worth.

Lost, strayed or stolen—Six young gents of prepossessing appearance, and greatly mourned after in this neighborhood. Any person giving any information concerning these gents will be liberally rewarded by applying at our office. Said gents may be known by their being in the last stages of the Black Hills fever. Malcolm.

SATURDAY.

Commonwealth vs. Ira Percival; motion to allow bail and withdraw application for a change of venue; proof in the case was heard, and the case continued till Monday morning.

The grand jury made the following report and was discharged:

To the Honorable Judge of the Boone County Criminal Court:

Your grand jury respectfully submit the following report, to wit: We have endeavored to investigate all cases that have come before us by examining a large number of witnesses, and have found forty-two indictments. We have also examined the public buildings, and find them in reasonable good repair, except the jail, which we find in bad condition, on account of the roof leaking very badly.

BEN STEPHENS, Foreman.

Court then adjourned till 9:30 a. m. Monday.

MONDAY.

The jurors summoned by the Sheriff under the order on Gallatin County commenced sailing in Sunday night about 12 o'clock, and when the Burlingtonians arose Monday morning they were surprised to see the street corners thronged with strangers. By noon Monday 86 out of the 102 men summoned in Gallatin County were in Burlington ready for duty. When the court convened that morning, the argument on the question of bail in the Percival trial was commenced before Judge Major, Judge McManama occupying the entire time of the forenoon session. When court met in the afternoon, the attorneys in the Percival trial agreed to postpone further argument therein till night, that the organizing of a jury in the Terrell case might be completed. The juries that were on duty last week were exhausted before commencing on the venire from Gallatin, there being one Boone County man accepted—Mr. R. A. Brady—who for several years previous to this spring has resided in Carroll County. Forty-seven men were examined before the jury was completed. The following are the names of the gentlemen:

R. A. Brady, J. W. Story, Taylor Spencer, S. Carver, Geo. Smith, Jas. Buchanan, S. I. Goins, J. V. Dean, Henry Crouch, J. E. Carlton, L. P. Jackson, Garret Furnish.

The jury being completed, the Judge gave the jurors a lengthy instruction as to how they should conduct themselves during the hearing of the testimony and the progress of the trial. Deputy Sheriff E. E. Foster was then sworn and given charge of the jury, with orders to return them into court Tuesday at 9 a. m. All other jurors were discharged.

After supper the argument in the Percival case was resumed by Gov. Carlisle, who made a very able and lengthy speech in support of the motion for bail. Quite a large crowd, composed partly of ladies, listened to the speech. At the conclusion of the argument, Judge Major stated he knew of no decision of the Court of Appeals that involved the same points that the case under advisement did, and that he should take the authorities quoted to his room and make his decision, which would be delivered in the morning.

The court then adjourned.

TUESDAY

Morning, when court opened, there were few in the court room, the crowd being composed principally of witnesses and attorneys in the Terrell case. The jury came in and took their places, when the Judge administered the oath. The examination of witnesses was then commenced, and progressed smoothly till the prosecution offered as evidence the dying declarations of Mr. Myers. The defense objected to their being introduced, and thereupon the Judge ordered the jury to retire from the room, that the attorneys might argue their objection. After the arguments had been made pro and con, the Judge, giving a long train of reasons, ruled them out for the present. Monfort, Fisk and Winston appeared on behalf of the Commonwealth, and Carlisle, Hounshell and Platt for the defense.

The entire day was consumed in hearing testimony. The arguments will likely commence Friday.

Judge Major was still hanging fire on the Percival case when our report closed.

ABOUT 3:30 p. m. Monday, a baroueche, drawn by two black steeds, came dashing into town, and in a few moments a rumor was rife that Hymen was on the wing, and a couple from Covington had selected Burlington as a choice spot for committing matrimony, and that they were a portion of the contents of the aforesaid vehicle. It was but a few moments before County Clerk Dills was called upon for a confidential confab. Of course he consented, as all good clerks should do, and, in company with Mr. Wm. Dulaney and Mr. George A. Brinkman, of Covington, held a secret session in the back room of the County Clerk's office. After making out the documents to insure the Clerk's safety, so far as going behind the returns are concerned, a license was issued authorizing the marriage of Wm. R. Dulaney and Miss Eugenie R. Lawson. This being done, no time was lost in calling on Elder H. J. Foster, who tied the matrimonial knot at his residence, in the presence of Mr. George A. Brinkman and Miss Allie C. Wood, who accompanied them from town. The bridal party remained in town but a short time before they took their leave in the most approved style.

WE owe friend Jno. T. Matson an apology for presenting his platform, last week, in such a wrecked condition. We now have it verbatim et literatim. He is for both the dog law and the stock law, and in favor of sufficient additional legislation to make the local option law effectual—is opposed to the Kentucky River improvement as well as to the taxing of one individual for the benefit of another; and for the benefit of the Grangers, he is in favor of docking tobacco as he has heretofore done; but will not become a candidate for the Legislature unless there is a spontaneous uprising of the people.

Personal Mention.

OUR friend O. W. Huey is apparently an enthusiastic Henderson man.

HON. THOS. L. JONES and Mayor Berry, of Newport, were among the visitors in town Tuesday.

THE United States Marshal for this district, W. S. O'Neal, has been attending the Terrill trial.

J. F. BLYTHE, the popular landlord of the Boone House, is considerably careened with rheumatism.

DR MC H. RAYMOND is among us again. He hove in at Burlington Wednesday morning a-tride his steed.

THE rapidity with which our list of subscribers has been increased for two months is strong proof that the citizens of the county are appreciating our efforts to furnish a good local paper. Last week, owing to the rapid increase of our circulation, we were compelled to send half sheets to a portion of our exchanges, and the same thing may occur this week.

THE farmers along the river who cultivate potatoes are now knifing them for planting. Attacking a mountain of potatoes and handling them one at a time, cutting each potato in three pieces, is no small job; yet this is what those who raise thirty or forty acres of that crop do.

THE town of Florence, or at least a portion of it, was burglarized Saturday night. The burglars got valuables to the amount of $30 from Mr. T. L. Swetnam. This is a thing that seems to occur every time the moon leaves the county for a few nights.

ON the jury in the Terrell case, the oldest man is 48 years old; the youngest 26. The sum total of their ages is 496 years, being an average of 41¼. Of the Gallatin County men, six served on the regular panel in the Circuit Court of that county last week.

THE goods and chattels of Mr. James M. Riddell were shipped per road-wagons to Williamstown last Wednesday. To lose a mechanic, who has been following his trade so long here, does not speak well for the town.

THE Ticket of last Tuesday says:

"Covington is to have a Baby Show at Odd Fellows Hall on the 13th and 14th of April. The prizes are to be useful and elegant, and the great care that is being exercised in the arrangement will undoubtedly be a success."

LETTER FROM TEXAS.

INDEPENDENCE, March 18th, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Farming progresses rapidly, and many are done planting corn, and some are getting ready to plant cotton. We have thirty acres of corn planted, and about forty yet to plant. The weather is warm and pleasant here, and the grasshoppers are numerous. They have slightly injured the gardens.

They are the most accommodating people here I ever saw. Every two weeks our landlord comes along and takes our sack of corn to mill while we go fishing.

A cattle merchant named Kennedy, was knocked down and robbed of $23,000 cash, in Dallas, last week.

Extensive preparations are being made for the Grand Carnival at Dallas, on the 4th of April next.

The Carroll Millsat Dallas, were consumed by fire on Thursday night.

In Gonzales County, last week, a negro 18 years of age attempted to commit a rape upon the person of Mrs. Chas. Ber. Failing, he murdered his victim with an ax in the presence of her three little children. The brute was immediately arrested by the neighbors and hung. CLAY MUNCK.

THE HEART AND THE TONGUE.

BY CHARLES SWAIN.

"'Tis a singular thing," said the Tongue,
"That you must each accent delay;
I think if I utter no wrong,
You need not remark what I say;
If all things must come from the Heart,
Pray how is the Tongue to succeed?
If people must speak by the chart,
They must speak very little indeed!"

When the Heart its chief minister heard
Thus its rule and its counsel disclaim,
It throbbed without breathing a word,
And burned with a feeling like shame.
Then a spirit arose that, though mute,
Thrill'd with language so truthful and plain
That the Tongue could no longer dispute,
But knew that rebellion was vain.

"Far better," it sighed, "not to speak,
Far better inactive the Tongue
Than to call forth a blush on the cheek,
Or the weak and the friendless to wrong!
The words which the feelings suggest,
Which affection and friendship impart,
These come to the Tongue from the breast,
And that breast is the throne of the Heart."

Then aside where assistance is kind;
Protect—and thy mission be blest;
Leave deceit and delusion behind;
And defend, to the last, the oppress'd.
Guard thy honor as though 'twere a dower
That the angels bestowed on thy youth;
And oh! matchless and great as thy power,
Be matchless thy kindness and truth.

Faith, Hope and Charity.

As we stand before the picture of this beautiful group, we admire and are led to examine minutely the features of each goddess, for we see that they speak to us of a living reality which is more or less implanted in each of God's creatures. These are the elements of character which are given us, upon which we may build our life here and fit us for the great hereafter. As we use or abuse this trust given us, so we may expect to reap, and why should we expect more?

We see Faith leaning upon the breast of Charity, believing in the invisible, upon things her eye hath never seen, her vision penetrating into the dark future which is sacred and complete. She knoweth although darkness reigns, joy cometh in the morning; that there is to every cloud a silver lining; that there is a glorious reward for all the doers of righteousness, and the patient laborer in the great harvest field of life.

Hope stands "as an anchor safe and steadfast," with one foot a step forward, her eyes beaming forth a meaning her tongue could not express. She builds rare foundations, pauses not for difficulties, but expecting ever to overcome, sees a bright goal in the far distance, and presses on eager to reach it, and when one difficulty is surmounted hastens forward to find something new. Her activity never tires; but, should we lose her, our own life would be a desolate road—a desert without even an oasis to cheer the weary traveler.

Now we speak of the last, but not the least, of these beautiful goddesses. We see "Charity, which thinketh no evil," stand with her arms encircling the other two, as if with her great love she would cover up every defect that the boldness of one or the rashness of the other might cause; thus "purifying all things," "conquering all things" through the medium of her one great mission. Would that all the human family might more and more be impressed with the beauty of this love, which gives everyone that accepts it, as it were, a wand which may, if wielded, be used to preserve unity, to suppress tyranny and to put away jealousies.

Thus the enigma of our lives is solved; through obedience to Faith our labor is dignified; the light of Hope shining on our pathway strengthens us to bear every hardship; the open hand of blessed Charity rewardeth all our toils and strengthens our friendship, from early years even down to old age.

This is the platform upon which we are built as a Grange. These are the lessons we are ever learning. If we fail to see their truth, beauty and excellence, it is not because the foundation is imperfect, but because the mists have not cleared away, and the vision fails to behold the beauty and joy in store for those who "walk by Faith and not by sight."—Mrs. E. H. Eddy before Ohio State Grange.

How the Indians Climb Trees.

In South America even the weakest woman may be not uncommonly be seen plucking the fruit at the tree tops. If the bark is smooth and slippery, so that they can not go up by climbing, they use other means. They make a hoop of wild vines, and putting their feet inside they use it as a support in climbing. The negro of the west coast of Africa makes a larger hoop around the tree, and gets inside it, and jerks it up the tree with his hands, a little at a time, drawing his legs up after it. The Tabitian boys tie their feet together, four or five inches apart, with a piece of palm bark, and with the aid of this fetter go up the cocoa palms to gather nuts. The native women of Australia climb the gum trees after opossums; where the bark is rough they chop holes with a hatchet, then one throws about the tree a rope twice as long as will go around it, put her hatchet on her cropped head, and, placing her feet against the tree and grasping the rope with her hands, she hitches it up by jerks, and pulls herself up the enormous trunk almost as fast as a man will climb a ladder.

A Short Supply of Sugar.

Among the commercial and economical phenomena which have marked the year just passed, we may note a signal falling off in the production of sugar, attended by a somewhat serious disturbance in the market for that article. A glance at a few pertinent figures will show the precise extent and bearing of this retrograde movement on the part of an important staple.

The total product of sugar throughout the world ten years ago did not much exceed two million tons, but by 1875 it had increased more than fifty per cent., being then computed at not less than 3,168,000. From this point to the yield of 1876 occurs an abrupt shrinkage of more than half a million tons, and, what is singular, the deficiency was not confined to a single quarter, but seems to have been equally apportioned among the sugar-producing countries. The extension of the Cuban insurrection to the plantations in the center of the island could account for diminished returns from those varieties of the staple extracted from the cane. A similar decline, however, was remarked in those parts of Europe which are accustomed to rely mainly on the beet root for their supplies. Thus, to cite the exact data, cane sugar, which a year before touched its maximum contribution of 1,310,000 tons, was credited in 1876 with only 950,000, while beet sugar fell off in the same short period from 1,850,000 to 1,660,000 tons.

Notwithstanding the rapid development which beet root culture has acquired during the last few years, the consumption of sugar has more than kept pace, and the deficit just signalized in the crops of 1876 can not be easily supported. The present demand for the commod ty on the part of Europe, the United States and the British colonies, is estimated at more than three million tons; and it is interesting to observe what proportions of this aggregate are assigned to different countries. The annual consumption of sugar, for instance, in Great Britain attains the astonishing figure of fifty-six pounds a head. Next comes the American citizen, who exacts not less than forty-eight pounds, and then the prosperous Belgian, who takes twenty. France, Germany, Denmark and Holland severally require on an average sixteen pounds for each inhabitant. On the other hand, it is worth noting that the heavily taxed Russian moujik and the impoverished Spaniard can afford but six pounds apiece, the Greek but four pounds, and his Turkish neighbor only two. There would seem to be a certain amount of plausibility in the assertion of some economists that the well-being of a given people may be accurately measured by its use of this commodity.

Up to the end of October, the reduction in the yield of cane sugar was the only disturbing influence in the market; but the contracted product of the beet crop weighed heavily on the last two months of the year. On the 31st of October the stock of sugar on hand in Europe and the United States was smaller than it had been for ten years, aggregating only 270,000 tons, against 400,000 at the same season of 1875. The situation is now much aggravated, since, instead of being augmented, according to rule, between November and December by the surplus of beet sugar over immediate demand, the stock in reserve must undergo a fresh depletion, equivalent to the deficit in European production. It would seem, therefore, to be inevitable that the consumer's resources should be excessively straightened during the next few months. This prospect is especially unwelcome to England and the United States, which contribute most largely to the demand; and it explains the considerable rise in price which the staple has lately experienced. One gainful result, however, may be looked for from the inadequate yield of the past year. The deficiency of sugar must stimulate the cultivation of the beet root in countries where it has secured a footing, and may lead to its introduction elsewhere. There is no doubt, for instance, that our Middle States are no less happily adapted than Germany or Russia to this most profitable industry.—N. Y. Sun.

Beck and Blaine.

Of the nine new members of the Senate, seven are Old-line Whigs. Beck, of Kentucky, and Blaine, when young men, went, the former from New York and the latter from Pennsylvania, to the same town in Kentucky. A friendship grew up there which was continued in Congress many years afterward, and now the two are in the Senate. All of Beck's characteristics are entirely different from those possessed by Blaine, yet a personal friendship of the warmest kind has always existed between them. Beck berates Blaine in a good-natured manner, and the latter complains to the former of his conservatism. They walked arm-in-arm to the Vice-President's desk to be sworn this session. Blaine had hardly raised his head from bowing to the Vice-President before he turned to Beck and said, "Now, G—d— you, I want you to behave yourself." Blaine sincerely loves a row, and is never so happy as when having a sharp repartee in the presence of crowded galleries. After the scene of last Tuesday and Wednesday two weeks ago, he asked a friend if "he didn't think it was a jolly time they had."—Washington Special St. Louis Republican.

THE Prince Imperial, of France, is coming to America.

POLITICAL POINTS.

HAYES must not grow weary in well-doing. He will have to do a great many nice things before the people of the country will consent to forget the manner of his election.—Henderson News.

THERE were a good many Douglas Democrats in the North in 1860, and it seems that there are several Southern Fred Douglass Democrats in the United States Senate.—Louisville Commercial.

SENATOR BEN HILL, of Georgia, voted the same as Senator Jim Blaine, of Maine, for the confirmation of Fred Douglass as Marshal of the Supreme Court. Who would have thought it a year ago?—Chicago Tribune.

IT is apparently the theory of the Cabinet that there should be a distinction made between South Carolina and Louisiana in the application of that "Southern policy." Of course there should be. Chamberlain is willing to sell and Packard isn't.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

SPEAKER RANDALL feels confident that he has more than enough Democrats pledged to him to secure his nomination in the Democratic caucus on the first ballot, and he ridicules the idea of the possibility of any coalition which could elect a Republican Speaker.—Washington Letter.

ONCE the color line in Southern politics is broken through, the problems of Southern government will settle themselves, for the colored vote will be recognized on both sides as a power to be won over by the same methods as any other vote, and to be as strictly protected in the exercise of its rights.—New York Times.

IT is even said that Tyner's appointment, with the right of controlling the Postoffice patronage north of the Ohio River, was the price of Morton's reluctant adhesion to the Hayes policy. If this be true, or if there be only a portion of truth in it, what becomes of the civil service reform that Mr. Schurz so extravagantly promised last summer?—St. Louis Republican.

WHAT has become of Grant? In a few years he will sink entirely out of sight, and even those who bent the pregnant hinges of the knee that thrift should follow their fawning upon him, and those who were glad to pick the crumbs that fell from his table, will not feel poor enough to do him reverence. This is the penalty that follows an abuse of official trust and authority.—Georgetown Times.

IT is idle for mere partisans to attempt to renew the trouble, for the public satisfaction is general, and the new departure is a completed fact. The conflict of 1876 has resulted in a settlement as thorough as if it had been deliberately prepared and enacted by both houses of Congress. The South could not possibly have gained as much from Tilden's election as it has from Hayes'.—Philadelphia Item.

IT doesn't seem to have taken Mr. Thompson long to find out that Secor Robeson is a corrupt man. No successor of his in the Navy Department, who took the pains to investigate Robeson's methods and doings, could fail to reach that conclusion. Mr. Thompson has wisely revoked Robeson's orders and turned out a lot of useless clerks. He seems to be managing the department in a business-like way. He will find plenty of work in cleaning out that Augean stable.—N. Y. Sun.

WHILE the Democrats have a fixed contempt for the man, and the means by which he attained his position, yet the unlawful President meets with no opposition from them on any measure of policy which he proposes. He is antagonized only by his own party. The Democrats in Congress will sustain him in every effort to restore the country and do justice to the people. It is a noticeable fact that no meetings have been held in any Northern city to indorse his succession.—Frankfort Yeoman.

AFTER being inaugurated as Fraudulent President, Hayes told Grant that if there were any special friends of his in office whom he might desire to have retained, and of whose names he would make a memorandum, they should not be disturbed. The list furnished is said to be long and embarrassing, but Grant holds his successor to the offer, and expects a fulfillment of the bond. Hence the Cramers, and that crew of loafers and adventurers who were pensioned on the Treasury by Grant, are likely to continue on the rolls during four years of usurpation, and all for the sake of civil service reform, as preached by Hayes, Evarts and Schurz.—New York Sun.

IT is a novel circumstance that, although the Democrats are generally conceded to have "on the face of the returns" a majority in the Lower House of the Forty-fifth Congress, which would ordinarily give them the organization beyond question, a movement is on foot to take advantage of the expected break in party lines by putting forward a Conservative Republican candidate for the Speakership. The Hon. Charles Foster, the Representative of the district in Ohio in which the home of President Hayes is situated, is already named in this connection, and it is considered by no means improbable that the next House should be under the control of an Administration coalition. A dozen changes among Democratic Congressmen from the South would be enough to secure the result.—Chicago Tribune.

THE OLD PRINTING OFFICE.

BY PARMENAS MIX.

What! Twelve o'clock? How time does fly
When'er I sit and fondly muse
On the happy days when Brown and I
Set type upon the Weekly News.
Ah me! How plainly I recall
That dingy, typographic den—
The charcoal profiles on the wall
Of faces I'll ne'er see again;
The bust of Franklin 'bove the door,
The battered hand-press, old and grim,
I see Brown pull the lever o'er—
Once more I roll the forms for him.

The click of Colby's old bourgeois
Comes faintly to me o'er the years—
It speaks to me with plaintive voice
That nearly brings a flood of tears.
For oh! I never can forget
The awful thoughts that came to me
While floundering in the hopeless net
Of Colby's dread chirography.
If all the ills I wished him then
Had struck him in a singe lump,
He'd have dropped his brain-distracting pen
And gone to Tophet on a jump.

Once more in thought I stand behind
The old hand-press and roll for Brown;
Again we'er horrified to find
An item printed upside down;
Again old Colby leaves his seat,
Exclaiming wildly, "Stop the press!"
And on the freshly printed sheet
Exhibits in inverted ess."
Once more the local poet raves,
And threatens both our "worthless lives,"
Because he'd written "burly knaves,"
And we have made it "Barlow knives."

Poor man—he hungered for renown
And hoped to win it through the News.
But cruel critics in the town
Kept him repairing boots and shoes.
And now within the churchyard's shade,
Beneath a stone of humble size,
Deep planted by the sexton's spade,
A mute, inglorious Milton lies.
Let all aspiring bards take heed
To this, his epitaph, to wit:
"Here lies a poet, gone to seed—
He left behind—a cobbler's knit."

Heighn! If wishes could replace
The well remembered scenes of yore,
I'd soon be standing at the case,
And nimbly sticking type once more;
For years have brought with them the sting
That vexes those who think and think,
And scratch their weary heads and sling
The unremunerative ink.

A Bad Fire.

"Jones, have you heard of the fire that burned up the man's louse and lot?"

"No, Smith, where was it?"

"Here in the city."

"What a misfortune to him! Was it a good house?"

"Yes, a nice house and lot—a good home for any family."

"What a pity! How did the fire take?"

"The man played with fire and thoughtlessly set it himself."

"How silly! Did you say the lot was burned too?"

"Yes, lot and all; all gone, slick and clean."

"That is singular. It must have been a terrible hot fire—and then I don't see how it could have burned the lot."

"No, it was not a very hot fire. Indeed, it was so small a fire that it attracted but little attention and did not alarm anybody."

"But how could such a little fire burn up a house and lot? You haven't told me."

"It burned a long time—more than twenty years. And though it consumed very slowly, yet it wore away more than one hundred and fifty dollars worth every year, till it was gone."

"I can't understand you yet. Tell me where the fire was kindled, and all about it."

"Well, then, it was kindled in the end of a cigar. The cigar cost him, he told me himself, twelve and a half dollars a month, or one hundred and fifty dollars a year, and that in twenty-one years would amount to $3,150, besides all the interest. Now the money was worth at least ten per cent., and at that rate would double once in about seven years. So that the whole sum would be more than $20,000. That would buy a fine house and lot in Chicago or St. Louis. It would pay for a large farm in the country. Don't you pity the family of the man who has slowly burned up their home?"

"Whew! I guess you mean me, for I have smoked more than twenty years. But it don't cost me so much as that, and I haven't any house of my own. Have always rented—thought I was too poor to own a house. And all because I have been burning it up? What a fool I have been."

The boys had better not set a fire which costs so much, and which, though so easily put out, is yet so likely, if once kindled, to keep burning all their lives.

Counterfeit Coin.

With the return of specie payments the old risk of being cheated by dangerous counterfeit coins comes back. It has been ascertained in the Wall street assay office that complaints are frequent, especially among bankers, of the repeated appearing of bogus silver coins. Mr. J. F. Tandy, expert of the Sub-Treasury, says that the most dangerous pieces of this spurious money are half dollars made from an alloy of lead, tin and antimony. They are light, weighing only 142 grains, instead of 192.9, which the true metal weighs. Another imitation of silver has been discovered in the form of type metal, electro-plated, first with copper and then with silver; the weight is correct, but the color is bad.

Mark Twain on a Watch.

A jeweler in New Haven, Conn., has a remarkable watch made by a foreign watchmaker, which Mark Twain describes as follows:

I have examined the wonderful watch made by M. Matile, and indeed it comes nearer to being a human being than any piece of mechanism I ever saw before. In fact, it knows considerable more than the average voter. It knows the movements of the moon and keeps exact record of them; it tells the day of the month and the month of the year, and will do this perpetually; it tells the hour of the day and the minutes and the seconds, and even splits the seconds into fifths and marks the division by "stop" hands; having two stop hands, it can take accurate care of two race horses that start, not together, but one after the other; it is a repeater, wherein the voter is suggested again, and musical chimes the hour, the quarter, the half, the three-quarters, and almost the minutes that have passed of an uncompleted quarter hour, so that a blind man can tell the time of day by it to the exact minute. Such is the extraordinary watch. It ciphers to admiration; I should think one could add another wheel and make it read and write; still another and make it talk; and I think one might take out several of the wheels that are already in it and it would still be a more intelligent citizen than some that help to govern the country. On the whole, I think it is entitled to vote, that is if its sex is the right kind.

Cast On a Barren Island.

About five weeks ago there was washed ashore on the coast of one of the Orkney Islands a bottle containing an appeal from starving castaways who had been wrecked on St. Kilda, the most inaccessible of the Hebridean Islets. Mr. Sands, a Scottish artist, had landed on the lonely island in a small boat, and on January 16th an Austrian vessel was wrecked off the cliffs and nine survivors were washed ashore. The islanders had scarcely enough provisions for themselves, but they generously shared what they had with the ten castaways. Starvation stared them all in the face. Mr. Sands wrote the message containing this information, and lashing the bottle to a life-buoy, and rigging a small sail, cast it adrift. The little craft drifted to the Orkneys, and was picked up by the islanders. The gunboat Jackal was dispatched to the island with a store of provisions, and arrived not a day too soon, for the islanders and their guests were starving. The artist and sailors were landed at Grecnock about March the 1st, after a dangerour voyage.

DISSATISFIED husbands or wives, tempted to invest in a Utah divorce, may take warning from the experience of Dr. John L. Armington, of Minnesota. He requested a Chicago divorce lawyer to obtain for him a divorce "without publicity, good in every State." A decree of divorce, granted by a Probate Court of Utah, was soon in Armington's possession, but Mrs. Armington, who had received no notice of the proceeding, objected to being deprived of her rights in this summary way, by a court in a Territory in which neither she nor her husband had ever resided, and when Dr. Armington took a second wife, he was promptly arrested for bigamy. The decree of divorce was admitted as evidence, but the Justice, following a recent decision of Chief Justice Cooley, of Michigan in a similar case, held the defendant in bail. The divorce law of Utah Territory permits the Mormon Probate Judges to grant divorces to persons who intend to become residents of the Territory, and there is no limit, except the discretion of the Court, to the causes for which divorce may be granted.—N. Y. Sun.

"Millions In It."

Matching coin is the favorite diversion of John T. Raymond, according to the Dramatic News, which says that he will go out with a couple of hundred dollars in his pocket in the morning and return in the afternoon for more. Last fall, when in San Francisco, Raymond met Maurice Grau on the street, and they went together into the bar-room of the Palace Hotel. Raymond proposed matching. They matched two ten-dollar pieces. Grau won. They doubled. Grau won. From tens and twenties they went up to hundreds, a streak of luck accompanying Grau throughout. From hundreds they soon got to thousands. In less than a half an hour Raymond had lost $32,000. So the story runs, at least. It was on honor, of course, as neither had the amount of money. Raymond was excited and nervous, and proposed matching the whole $32,000 on one cast. Grau consented, and put down head. Raymond matched him and won.

A sow on the farm of W. D. Sullivan, near Mayfield, gave birth to a litter of thirteen pigs the other day, among which was one with two bodies, or two pigs with one head, whichever is the most expressive. This strange creature had two perfect bodies from the shoulders back.

POLITICAL POINTS.

WE do not think the murder of Republicans in Louisiana likely to improve the situation.—Cincinnati Commercial.

HAYES is backing and filling in his Southern policy. It is idle to expect that he will accomplish anything of real benefit for the South, handicapped as he is with fraud, and holding the Presidency by the same sort of title that Packard and Chamberlain hold their Governorships. Hayes is in a bad box.—N. Y. Sun.

WE hear from the South one day that Packard has not a shadow of support outside of the bastile in New Orleans in which he is intrenched, and soon after we are told that the followers of Nicholls live in hourly expectation of massacre by the armed minions of Packard. The two theories don't exactly harmonize.—Cincinnati Gazette.

IF the Louisiana policy of the Administration were to withdraw the troops and let the factions fight it out among themselves, wouldn't Packard be very foolish not to assemble some of the militia together? As he has as good a right to the Governorship as Hayes has to the Presidency, why should he be blamed?—Cincinnati Enquirer.

OF the 40,000 Postoffices in this country, only 1,600 are filled by the President's appointment, subject to confirmation by the Senate. The First Assistant Postmaster-General, with the approval of his chief, fills over 38,000 of the offices. A great many Radical editors will now discover that there is still something worth living for, even when the Postoffice Department is in the hands of a man who "tried to destroy the Government."

THOSE Republican organs that have been pouring out wrath and indignation on the Democratic House for refusing to vote the army appropriation without a clause in the bill to prevent the President from using United States troops for carpet-bag purposes in Louisiana and South Carolina, will please bear in mind that the Republican House did precisely the same thing in the long session of the last Congress in Pierce's administration, when "bleeding Kansas" was on the stage.—St. Louis Republican.

THE friends of ex-Speaker Randall are using, as an effective argument in his favor, the statement that he has over one hundred Democratic votes pledged to his support for the Speakership of the next House. The facts are altogether different, and it may gratify the people of Cincinnati to learn that the canvass has proceeded far enough to demonstrate that, if a Democratic Speaker is elected, Mr. Sayler will undoubtedly be chosen. The statement is made in deliberation and with the facts in hand to entirely justify it.—Washington Special.

WHILE the general principle of the President's plan of civil service reform does not contemplate the removal of those whose commissions have not expired, this is only adopted as a general rule, affording solid ground to stand on at the start; but it can be accepted as beyond question as equally a part of the President's plan to see to it that if an office has been obtained by improper means, or if improper persons are found in office, the mere fact of their holding commissions will afford them no protection. All cases of the kind brought to the attention of the President will be fully considered as rapidly as they can be reached.—Washington Special to Cincinnati Gazette.

ON the fourth day of March instant, a man named Hayes became de facto President of the United States. The manner of his coming into office was unprecedented, and was so clearly illegal that two of the most highly esteemed members of Congress in his own party, Messrs. Seelye and Pierce of Massachusetts, entered their solemn protest against it, and a majority of the House condemned it by resolution. But the promises of the man were so fair that many easily-persuaded and unreflecting persons thought they served in some degree to lighten the cloud that rested on his title. A new policy was to be introduced. Peace and plenty were to fill the land. The common mind accepted the idea of this new policy as something devoutly to be desired. Merchants held meetings and adopted approving resolutions. Political clubs did the same. The newspaper press very generally commended it. We ourselves could not deny that grass had grown greener since the fourth of March; that the geese had begun to fly northward, showing increased confidence in the weather; and we were prepared to hear from the south side of Long Island that eeling was better. But now the question arises, What is this new policy? Mr. Hayes evidently does not know. The members of his Cabinet do not know. Nobody knows. Some enterprising political explorers ought to be appointed to see if they can find out.—N. Y. Sun.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

A JOINT account—a butcher's bill.

MOST tailors are subject to fits though their customers are not troubled that way.

DANDIES, to make a great show,
Wear coats stuck out with pad and puffing;
But that, you know, is apropos,
For what's a goose without the stuffing.

WE can generally tell what a man is going to do next when he puts the lighted end of a cigar into his mouth by mistake.

A LADY who drew a gentleman's dressing gown at a recent church fair, now wishes to draw a good-looking young man to put in it.

A PHILOSOPHER who went to church where the people came in late said it was "the fashion there for nobody to go till everybody gets there."

BY a cold-blooded wretch.—It is estimated that the number of ladies who can not pass a mirror without glancing into it averages about twelve to every dozen.

"HAVE you a suit of clothes here to fit a large body of water?" "No; but we can send you a needle and thread with which to sew a potato patch on the pants of a tired dog."

"SINCE I last wrote you," says a Tennessee subscriber, "my wife's mother has gone to that bourne from whose country she'll never return. We want you to fix up an obituary poem for us, something that can be whistled to a lively tune."

A MAN "Down East" returned his newspaper to the printing-office with "jackass" written on the margin, and in the next issue the editor stated the fact, and wound up the paragraph by asking, "Will our indignant subscriber please let us know at what stable he can be found?"

THE most original spelling we have ever seen is the following. It beats phonetics: 80 you be—a tub. 80 oh! pea—a top. Be 80—bat. See 80—cat. Pea 80—pat. Are 80—rat. See you be—cub. See oh! double you—cow. See a be—cab. Be you tea—but. See a double ell—call.

A ROME miss of seventeen summers has concluded to marry a big man for a first husband, and a little one for the second, so that she can cut the clothes of the first down, and make them over for his successor. Thus the hard times forces home lessons of rigid economy and practical sense upon tender childhood.

A meek-eyed married man offered as a test at a spiritual seance that the medium name the articles in his wife's upper bureau drawer. The medium said the spirits would repeat the contents of Webster's Dictionary or any other light task, but that lofe was too short to attempt the task proposed, and the rash proposer was hurried out of the hall.

BY a singular coincidence a letter written by John D. Lee since his conviction and addressed to one of his numerous wives reached the dead letter office on the day and near the hour of his execution at Mountain Meadows. The letter had failed to reach the lady by misdirection, and was forwarded to the right address by the Post Office Department on the day it was received.

LORD CHIEF-JUSTICE COLERIDGE, of England, in addressing a jury at Durham, recently, remarked that his experience had shown that crimes of violence, almost without exception, originated in public houses and were traceable to drunkenness, while he was convinced that if England were sober she might shut up nine-tenths of her jails. During the past sixteen years crime had greatly decreased among the higher classes, which he thought gave great hope for the future.

It is a rare thing to see a more lively day in Burlington than Monday was. It was County Court day, the day upon which was exhibited the fine horses with which the county is rapidly becoming stocked, and last, but not least, the day upon which the local political candidates made their debut. So, when one was not listening to the "chin music" or submitting to the almost destructive squeeze of the candidate, he was entertained by some "hoss man" expatiating upon the fine points of his favorite and much admired steed. But, returning to the political "exhibition," we find the principal feature to be the speeches made by the official aspirants. The first to mount the rostrum and give vent to his fiery eloquence was Colonel James L. Henderson, of Gunpowder. He spoke long and loud, denouncing the dog law a hardship because the tax imposed on two little "purps" is more than that on "two crow-baits"—this is the Colonel's word for horses. The Colonel kicks strongly against the law prohibiting seining and wants every man allowed to seine on his own "land." In the face of the ex-Representatives he charges that the county has not been represented for many years—all that the gentlemen heretofore elected had done, was go to Frankfort, get some chairs and knives and forks out of the penitentiary and come home. He is emphatically opposed to the stock law because it is "got up under no head." Mr. H. is for free trade and sailors' rights, and consequently opposed to the local option law, and claims that whisky is used by many instead of milk—that there are many who deny using it, their breath to the contrary. The Colonel says if these fellers with bad breath don't use whisky their fathers did and they inherited the odor. The road tax he considers an outrage upon the aged property holders who fought bled and —— in the struggle to open roads at an early day. The Colonel charged his opponents with being too timid to appear before their countrymen and lay before them the principles involved in the race now pending. Mr. H. then subsided and in a few moments was as calm as a May morning.

Mr. Rouse was called, but not being in the house did not respond. Dr. S. S. Scott, candidate for State Senate, was called and responded in a brief speech stating the reasons why he had consented to become a candidate, and complimented in the highest terms his opponent, Capt. L. C. Norman.

Captain Norman was called upon and made a brief speech, in which he also gave his reasons for making the race, and spoke in the highest terms of his opponent. Captain Norman and Dr. Scott are warm personal friends and it seems it would be proper for their friends in the county to bring about, if possible, some reconciliation of the matter. If Owen and Gallatin have decided to let Boone have the Senator for the next term, the Democracy of the county should, if possible, decide the matter between the candidates, and not leave that to the counties proposing to occupy neutral grounds in the contest. If it is a fact that Boone is to choose the Senator, let her do so.

Spotted Tail has proposed entering upon a Peace Commission and visiting Crazy Horse and other hostile Indian tribes, and endeavoring to induce them to come into the Reservations. The military authorities do not propose delaying the campaign, and supplies are being forwarded rapidly and everything is being put in readiness, and unless Spotted Tail brings about a treaty, warm times may be expected on the frontier at an early day.

The following report of sales of tobacco are reported by the Western Tobacco Journal of last week:

Wade Hampton visited Mr. Hayes and returned to his native soil feeling as proud as a little boy with his first pair of boots. Hampton thinks his claims are in a good condition to be approved by Mr. Hayes. He assures Hayes that he will protect both the whites and the blacks in the administration of the State affairs in South Carolina.

Foster, of Ohio, says there were no pledges on the part of Mr. Hayes made the South, but at a meeting in which demands of this kind were considered he and others felt fully justified, from their knowledge of Hayes' views, to state that his policy would be to favor local self-government and home rule in the South.

The weather being more favorable for some weeks for handling the new crop of tobacco the receipts have been more liberal and the offering considerably increased. The prices continue firm—Boone County tobacco is selling at prices ranging from $2 85 to $11, the bulk of sales being at $6.

The Terrell case will go to the Court of Appeals carrying the weight of two verdicts. One for seven years, found by the Grant County jury about one year since, and one for eight years, the finding of the jury last week.

To bring the force in the Bureau of Engraving and Painting of the Treasury Department down to the actual requirement, it became necessary to discharge about two hundred employes.

In this, the Eleventh Judicial District, there were, in 1876, 618 chancery suits and 1,103 common law suits brought, 42 criminal prosecutions and 316 misdemeanors.

You see this week the announcement of Mr. Reuben Conner, one of the leading farmers of the county, as a candidate for the State Legislature.

In a speech made by Proctor Knott, at Lebanon, Monday week, he declared that he never had in his public life abandoned principle to expediency.

It is threatened to institute proceedings requiring Mr. Hayes to show by what right he occupies the office of President of the United States.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

St. Louis, Mo., March 30th, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

We have had pretty springlike weather all the week, and the great snow of last Friday and Saturday, has gone, as the notorious James Fisk would say, to where the woodbine twineth. The old, the young, and the middle-aged, with us this week, seem happy in the belief that old gray-bearded winter has filled his mission, and that we will now for a few months enjoy the pleasure of spring. Let it be so for we are tired of the chilling blasts of winter.

There is but one all absorbing topic with us just now, which is our Municipal election to come off next Tuesday. We informed you in our last that we, at that time, had three tickets in the field each headed by the same party for Mayor. While we were thus informing you, the fourth Convention was in session at Armory Hall and united in bringing out a ticket headed by the Hon. N. C. Hudson, a genuine Republican, for Mayor, and giving all the other places on the ticket to Democrats of the most orthodox school. This last ticket, we hardly know what to call it: is supported by the St Louis Daily Times, the most ultra Democratic paper this side of the Father of Waters, as well as by the Globe Democrat, the organ of the Republican party west of the Mississippi. Verily, verily, politics make strange bed-fellows. We are likely to have great confusion in voting on election day, as it seems but few up to this time know what ward they live in, and a still fewer number seem to know their precinct or voting place. As advised, we have lately adopted a new charter and redistricted the city. We also informed you that we now have 26 wards instead of 13, as heretofore. Since then we find we made a slight mistake, as we now have 28 wards instead of 13, and 4 times as many precincts as heretofore. Your correspondent's partner is 43 years old, resides in the house in which he was born, has filled many offices under the City Government, and on yesterday received notice that he was appointed Judge of the election at a precinct altogether different from the one he supposed was his legal and proper voting place. We have lived in the same block for the past ten years and we frankly confess that we don't know our precinct as we now have four voting places within a stone's throw of our residence. We will however on election day, if we vote at all, consult some good looking colored citizen, or some truly loyal Irish "gintleman," as to where we belong and as to how we shall vote. We would rather be right than to be President, or Mayor by votes of persons that did not know where they lived.

Business generally very dull, every body seems to be waiting for a settlement of our Southern troubles. We suppose it would not be much out of the way for us to say that our own business men are almost as much interested in the Louisiana troubles as those that live in the City of New Orleans. This season of the year our trade with the last named city is unusually large. In times of perfect peace, this season of the year we send out from 4 to 8 large steamers per week, for the Crescent City, but now it is a tight squeeze to load two per week. But after all I don,t know that we should complain much, as we have not had an important failure within the past 6 months, while you can count them by dozens in other large cities of the land..

Cheering reports continue to come from all sections, concerning the growing wheat crop. If the Good Being will only continue to smile upon us, and save us from our usual grasshopper scourge, and drought, we will most likely, this year, have an abundant harvest.

Our wise Legislators have recently passed a bill authorizing the Governor to offer a reward of ten thousand dollars for a cure for hog cholera. Now, be it known, that if there is anybody over your way that has a certain cure for this terrible enemy of the pig species, send him to us, and if he will give us a half interest in same, we will insure him a clear profit of half a million of dollars the first year. We would much rather have a half interest in such a panacea than to be President of the United States, 8 years. By the way, the good people of the rural district West, for the past year as well as now, have another pest fully as troublesome as hog cholera. We don't know by whom the infliction is sent, but they probably call 'em "tramps." Possibly thieves would be a more appropriate name for the roving bands that infest the Northwest, West and Southwest at this time. It may not be a bad policy on the part of our wise law makers to provide a remedy for tramps or thieves. If we could get up a war with some foreign nation and send these fellows to the front in the battle, it would be a good thing for the country. It is said there are at least ten thousand of these roving fellows in the State of Iowa alone, and we hear of them all over the States of Missouri, and Texas. Twisted hemp would also be a good remedy for many of these fellows if properly administered or adjusted.

Our Chamber of Commerce, will, on tomorrow, petition President Hayes to withdraw Federal troops from Louisiana, and leave the adjustment of the affairs of that State to the citizens thereof, thereby establishing home rule.

Bob A Long.

After he was dead one of the party discharged the contents of a shot gun into his body." The murderer's name is Robertson. He accused the boy of snapping a pistol at him. Robertson was arrested.

Only one shot was actually fired at him as he disappeared around the corner like a "greasy streak."—Frankfort Yeoman.

—The trial of John C. Northcraft for killing Thomas H. Chandler on the night of the 27th of December, 1875, was concluded on Saturday last by the jury returning a verdict of not guilty. At the time Chandler was killed he was Marshal of Lebanon, and was in the act of killing Geo. F. Northcraft, the brother of the accused. The friends of Chandler contended at the time that he was in the discharge of his duty, undertaking the arrest of George F. Northcraft, who was drunk and disorderly. The trial began on the 19th inst., and lasted the greater portion of six days.

—In Anderson County the candidates for the lower branch of the Legislature are Hon. Wm. Neal, Thos McMurry, Ambrose Portwood, Larkin Penny, P. C. Walker, Jas. Jelff, Richard Littlepage, Jas. Mr. Larkin Penny is an ex-Magistrate. Mr. Walker is a young attorney. Jas. Jelff is a farmer. Richard Littlepage and Jas. Lynch are farmers. Wm. Rake is a carpenter, blacksmith, undertaker, butcher and cabinet-maker.

—While Barren, Metcalfe, Cumberland and Monroe counties are doubtless fine localities for the oil-seeker's operations, our neighbor county of Allen should not be overlooked by the prospective Greaser with speculation in his eyes. In 1863-4, a few wells were put down in that county on Bay's Fork, and Big and Little Trammel creeks with good success. Developments were, however, abandoned on account of the low price of petroleum. There are several very fine oil-springs in Allen County. One spring on the farm of Dr. A. S. Walker, seven miles west of Scottville, on Big Trammel creek, produces several barrels of oil daily. People in the vicinity of the spring, long before the petroleum era, gathered as much as two or three barrels a day by dipping in blankets and then wringing out the oil, which was then known as American oil. Where nature thus pours forth her richness unaided and unsolicited, fortunes could assuredly be made by the use of a little machinery, energy and skill.—[Glasgow Times.

WE are sorry to note the death of Harrison Booth, who resided near Union. He died on the night of the 1st inst.

THE mischievous wind only watched for open doors, Sunday, that it might enter the houses and in its frolic lift the carpets off the floors.

THERE was an abundant supply of lung food dashing about Sunday. There was no excuse for complaining of being short of breath.

THURSDAY morning B. B. Roberts left the Boone County Jail with a view to making the Penitentiary at Frankfort his abode for the next four years. The prisoner left in charge of ex-Sheriff B. K. Sleet.

ELDER JOHN F. ROWE, of Ohio, is conducting at interesting meeting in the Christian Church in Petersburg. The members of that church will be pleased to have their brethren and sisters from a distance attend.

THE President and Board of Directors for the Burlington and Florence Turnpike might do a good thing for the road by having the first bridge this side of Florence X-Roads repaired before some one meets with an accident at that point. It has been a dangerous bridge now for several months.

AFTER B. B. Roberts was tried and found guilty of horse-stealing, he turned loose a satanic disposition, and displayed a desire to rip somebody open. Uncle Sam, wanting to take no risk, assigned Ben a separate stall in the lower story of the jail, where he was kept till delivered to the Sheriff for shipping to Frankfort.

TWO attorneys from Covington, last week, became so immersed in business that they forgot they had a horse and buggy at the hotel, and when ready to start home hired another conveyance, and would have returned, leaving the Covington turnout, had the landlord not reminded them of the one for which they had been paying board during the week.

THE team attached to the bus that runs between Sparta, Gallatin County, and Owenton, Owen County, became frightened one evening last week, ran off, turned the bus over, killed the driver and one horse, injured a passenger who was riding on top of the conveyance, tore the vehicle into shreds, but singular to say, a passenger who was riding inside escaped uninjured.

THE attendance at the Literary Society, last week, was uncommonly large. The programme, composed of reading, essays and declamations, was seemingly entertaining to the visitors. The question discussed was, "Affirmed that the old bachelors should be subject to civil disabilities." There were two contending for the negative and fourteen for the affirmative. Twelve of the affirmative was the jury serving in the Terrell trial, and before whom the bachelor question was argued. They did not have any sympathy for the bachelor.

THE show of horses on the street, Monday, surpassed any ever before seen here. The animals shown, with one exception, were saddle and harness horse. Some of the horses shown in harness exhibited considerable speed, although the street over which they were moved was in a wretched condition. Eclipse Clay and Jenkins' Almont did the fast moving, during which the crowd along the street became excited and commenced hurrahing, which reminded one of the exhibition in the speed rings at the fair. Eclipse Clay is a beautiful trotter, and right well should we like to see him and Almont matched on a good track.

LAST Thursday, at Walton, a negro was arraigned before Esquires Cumner and Norman under two charges of attempted rape. The testimony in the case was conclusive and the negro was placed in the hands of Constable T. F. Chambers and Joe Childers, with orders to deliver him to the Jailer of the county. They started from Walton with the prisoner about 7 o'clock that evening, and had gone but about one mile and a half when they were assailed by a mob which took the negro from the officers and swung him to a limb, where he was found next morning. Chambers says some might say there were 500 men in the gang, but he did not think there were more than 15 or 20. None of them were recognized.

Criminal Court.

Last week, when our court report closed, the trial of W. G. Terrell for the murder of Harvey Myers, on the 28th day of March, 1873, was progressing. The hearing of testimony, which was then begun, continued till about 2 p. m. Thursday, after which came the voluminous instructions given the jury by the Court. The arguments were commenced by Judge P. U. Major, who spoke about three hours, making out a very plausible defense. At the close of Judge Major's speech, court adjourned for supper. After supper, Gov. Fisk made a two and one-half hours' speech, in which he wiped out the theory of the defense, as set up by Judge Major. This completed another day's work in the trial, and court adjourned till 8 o'clock Friday morning, by which time all parties were in court and ready to renew the trial. Gov. Carlisle led off in the day's work on the closing argument for the defense. For three hours he, in his masterly way, argued the different points in the case, as they were presented by the testimony during the trial. Gov. Carlisle's speech occupied the entire forenoon Friday, and not till after dinner did Colonel Monfort close the arguments on behalf of the State. The Colonel's speech was but about one hour and forty-five minutes in length, but clearly comprehended the entire case. Mr. Monfort prosecuted only for voluntary manslaughter, and his arguments were directed to that point, and at every step during the speech impressed that charge upon the minds of the jurymen, who had given the trial, during the four days, a marked attention. The jury was told to take the papers and retire to their room about five minutes before 2 o'clock Friday afternoon.

So soon as the jury in the Terrell case had retired, B. B. Roberts, who had been found guilty of horse-stealing, was brought into court to receive sentence. The judge asked Roberts if he knew of any reason why sentence should not be passed. Roberts replied:

"I have but one thing to say. I am willing to serve my time. I did not steal the horse, but I knew something about it. All that I am sorry for is that my partner is not with me."

The Judge then sentenced him to four years' hard labor in the penitentiary. Roberts, looking considerably cut down, was then taken back to to jail.

The jury in the Terrell case remained in its room till 5 o'clock, when the ringing of the Court-house bell proclaimed that the jury were ready to deliver the result of their three hours' deliberation. The crowd that had attended court during the day was soon in the court-room to learn the fate of W. G. Terrell. The jury came down the steps, filed into the bar, and delivered to the Judge the indictment, upon the back of which was indorsed the verdict. The jury was called, when the Judge read from the back of the indictment the following:

"We, the jury, find W. G. Terrell guilty of voluntary manslaughter, and fix his punishment at eight years' confinement in the Penitentiary. J. V. DEAN, Foreman."

Had a bombshell at that moment exploded in the court-room, the astonishment would not have been greater. Judge Major reclined his head in his hand, while Gov. Carlisle appeared nonplussed. The court-room was wrapped in silence for a few minutes, when Gov. Carlisle took the papers in the case and commenced reading. The accused was put in charge of the Jailer, and in a short time the attorneys for the defense were holding a counsel. The jury was discharged and court adjourned till Saturday morning, when Terrell's attorneys filed grounds for an appeal. The Court then passed sentence, as shown by the record, and the judgment was stayed forty days for the action of the higher court. Terrell was then ordered lodged in the Covington jail.

Colonel Terrell took the verdict rather hard, as did also his brother, who had been constantly by his side from the commencement of the trial.

The jury before whom the trial was had was composed of the intelligent and good citizens of Gallatin County—men who have no fear of doing what they conceive to be justice to all men.

The Terrell case being disposed of, Judge Major took the bench and notified the attorneys for the defense in the Percival case that he overruled the motion for bail. A motion for a change of venue was then entered and argued pro and con, the Judge granting the change, sending the case to Oldham County, to which place Mr. Percival is to be transferred on the first Monday in next May, that being the time the court commences there.

This concluded the business in Criminal Court, and in a few hours the Judge and the array of attorneys who had been attending court took their leave.

JUDGE GEO. R. MCKEE sojourned a few days this week in Burlington.

LAST week the type made us say O. W. Huey is an enthusiastic Henderson man, when we intended to say J. O. Huey.

AMONG the distinguished persons attending court last week, was Dr. J. G. Furnish, who, but a few weeks since, bid adieu to the Ohio Medical College, having completed his course of lectures, and received a diploma.

WHOOPING-COUGH has made its appearance in some parts of the county. The juvenile inhabitants of Burlington are generally affected with a cough, but if the whooping-cough, it is not sufficiently developed to be so recognized.

THE heirs of John W. Rogers visited the County Clerk, Tuesday, and conveyed to each other their respective shares of the estate.

WE congratulate ourselves that we shall not in future be tormented with loafers. They can sit on the curb-stones.

THE grass comes creeping, creeping everywhere.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Rabbit Hash.

Wood-sawings is a very bad disease in this neighborhood of late. There were only five last week.

The majority of the voters in this precinct are for L. C. Norman for Senator.

Personal—Mrs. John H. Stephens is in a fair way to recover.....Will Cowen, of Clarke County, Ind., brother to our M. D., spent a few days in town last week.....Mr. Geo. Ward, of East Bend, is quite sick with pneumonia.....Miss Alice Snyder's school will be out in three more weeks.....Misses Emma and Susie Walton made a flying visit to Burlington, last week.....A little child of Jacob Burnett's is quite sick. Also, Mrs. Joe Riggs.....Capt. Robt. Piatt has been ill for the last few days. MIKE.

Bellevue.

The Willoughby Debating Society met at the usual hour on the 30th of March, and warmly discussed the following question: "Resolved, That ladies, rather than gentlemen, should propose marriage." The question was decided in favor of the negative. The following was selected for the next meeting: "Resolved, That education is preferable to wealth." Also, several essays by the ladies.

A certain party of men, who claimed to hail from Dillsborough, Ind., were anxious to obtain work on the proposed pike, but were on a strike at this place for a better boarding-house until a few days ago, when the parties with whom they boarded went to waken them for breakfast, and lo! all had fled between two days, bulldozing the landlords out of $25 charges for board.

Our wagon maker, Thos. Carson, has purchased a lot in this town, with the intention of building a dwelling.

We are pleased to learn that our friend L. C. Norman will make the race for Senator. Just the figure for it, certainly. MICAWBER.

Verona.

A few days since, some parties went into Mr. W. T. Wolf's store and ordered some coal-oil. Mr. Wolf went to the warerooom to get the oil, and, upon returning, missed some goods. He at once seized the poker, charged the party he left in the room with the theft, and commenced a search. Upon the person of the accused he found a pair of shoes, several handkerchiefs and some coffee.

The dogs, in the last few weeks, have destroyed quite a number of fine sheep in this neighborhood. The dog law does not dispose of the worthless cur.

Planting onions and potatoes is now in order.

No more cold weather—the martins made their appearance Saturday.

The RECORDER is eagerly sought, and is the paper for the people. It contains court news, neighborhood notes, and in fact much to interest the citizens of the county.

The latest curiosity in this locality is an egg with three yelks.

Personal—Mr. Sullivan has twenty hands engaged on the section of the railroad at this place.....Geo. Hume is erecting a new house.....Mr. James T. Vest is having an addition put to his residence. BLUE GLASS.

Plattsburg.

Notwithstanding the low prices farmers have received for their tobacco, a great preparation is being made for another crop. Mr. Sim Baldon will have nearly twenty acres planted on his farm this season, and others are preparing more extensively than ever before.

Mr. Wm. Hensley, jr., who was taken ill with pneumonia at Mr. Snyder's, a few weeks since, has so far recovered as to be able to return to his own home.

There is not the least doubt but the county will own more stock in dogs during the next twelve months than in all the past of her history. One resident of our burg informs us he has $1 worth ready for the Sheriff whenever he makes his call. Unfortunately for the canine race in this town, one of said patriarchs figured conspicuously in the late convention held at this place.

Query—If the owner of dogs fail to pay the tax, and the Sheriff bids in the dog for the county, and kills said dog and receives fifty cents for said killing, is not the county minus the fee paid for the killing, not to say anything for listing by the Assessor? [Certainly.—Ed.] DON JUAN.

Walton.

Walton was wrought up to a high state of excitement when it was ascertained that the negro, Parker Mayo, had been taken from the Constable of Florence, who was taking him to Burlington jail. The mob that took the negro hung him to a large oak tree, situated only a short distance from the pike, in the field belonging to Mr. Geo. T. Gaines.

That popular candidate for the Legislature, J. T. Matson, of late has been devoting a large portion of his time here dispensing smiles and handshaking very freely. He has not only secured the promised votes of the men but has also won the ladies over to his side, and they are using all their influence in his behalf, so there can not be any doubt of success here.

Mr. George T. Gaines started, last week, for Texas. His visit is partially for his health, and also with a view of making that his future home, if pleased with the country.

We claim to have the prominent scholar of the country. A young girl of fifteen going to the Walton school has nine studies, viz: Geometry, Algebra, Mental and Practical Arithmetic, Latin Reader, Rhetoric, Grammar, United States History and Definer. She recites a long lesson from each every day. Really we can't understand how one brain can comprehend, and keep the lessons from being one confused jumble.

Mr. Abe Stansifer is confined to his bed by a severe attack of fever.

A most interesting debate is promised us for next Friday evening. We are unacquainted with the subject. Messrs. Johnson, Stewart and others will take part. NEMO.

Beaver Lick.

The principal farmers of this neighborhood are plowing the arable land, and, from present indications, there will be an ample amount of ground planted in corn. Many have finished sowing their tobacco seed, and are now busily engaged in preparing their soil for the culture of the noxious weed.

Mr. John Matson paid this neighborhood a flying visit recently, and beautifully deceived the people generally in the design of his brief sojourn, they supposing his intention was to purchase their crop of tobacco for a large price; but John placidly informed them that he was not engaged in the business. I don't think John ought to "clone" the (eager to sell) tobacco holder that way, "no way."

Occasionally, amid the darkest web, there ariseth up the brightest star of joy. So it is with the people of Beaver. For many long years they have been groping in the darkest of discouraging inconveniences; but recently there arose the star that generously ministered unto us the long desideratum, which was a postoffice. It was through the judicious and intelligent management of Mr. John Sleet we acquired a postoffice, to whom many thanks of the public are due.

Miss Pettie Hume began a school at Big Bone Springs, last Monday week, where she taught the public school with entire satisfaction to the patrons last winter.

Tramps are about the most prominent feature of to-day, there being scarcely an hour that there is not in sight some straying "dead beat" passing through Beaver or lodging in or near the suburbs over night, which creates much not ungrounded fear in the vigilant portion of the community; for tramps, you know, will sometimes surreptitiously acquire, not only trivial property, but also valuables which make themselves too conspicuous in their presence. A chicken roost is one of their frequent resorts, which was realized recently by one of our "don't-care-for-nothing sort of fellows," who now cries, "Down mit dose dramps." INCOGNITO.

Petersburg.

Criminal Court is over, and with a long drawn sigh of relief we chalk a wide mark on the wall, in celebration of the expiration of its term. It is amusing to see the look of surprise on the cheerful countenances of our people; surprised that they were not dragged into the presence of the big Judge and convicted of some misdemeanor. The Enquirer man who wrote of the toll-gate tunnel from Burlington to Florence, of Uncle Mit and the seven hundred shares, of his Honor, the Judge, &c., &c., and made it all sound so funny, is a man of immortal fame among us, and must all our young men of economical or expensive leisure are lured by the glowing tales he told that young man who rode in the buggy with him, and have resolved to go and do likewise, i. e., not tell tales, but get a salary to write for some paper.

Among the casualties, we note the following as the most startling: A little daughter of Mr. Fuller's fell into a cistern, one day last week, and was rescued by the gallant young man of the tribe of Vulcan, Awful Alloway, who is always ready to lend a helping hand to those in distress.

A renowned (?) lecturer on Phrenology made a raid on the ten cent pieces, one evening last week, and carried off a few.

One of the residences on East First street, was put on rollers and rolled down into Bucktown.

Our old citizen, Mr. W. C. Berkshire, has moved back among us. He has been in Covington for something like a year and a half, and during all that time never paid us a visit.

The excursion of last Friday was a most pleasant affair, and was a success in every respect. Some roosters who had evidently been drinking too much onion juice furnished a woefully tangled account for the Enquirer, which can scarcely be recognized by those who attended the lecture as a description, at all.

Speaking of onion juice as a tangle foot beverage reminds us that it is increasing in in popularity daily, and the demand for onions correspondingly on the increase. Judge Cave and his partner are seriously thinking of planting their whole farm in the esculent root.

TWO PORTRAITS.

I.

Paint me a picture, Master!
And make it strict and true;
Put on the cheeks no brighter red,
In the eyes do deeper blue;
Give to her form no softer grace—
For to each rounded limb
The highest lines thine art can trace
Are shadowless and dim.

Color to life her matchless hair—
And, if thou may'st, portray
The sweetness of those scarlet lips,
The smiles that round them play;
Can'st thou produce the radiant light
That beams from out her eyes,
Or make more fair, or pure, or bright,
The soul that in them lies?

Fashion my Bride, good Painter!
Loving and kind and true,
Fair as a wreath of lillies,
Sweet as its perfume, too.

II.

Paint me another picture,
As in the years before,
Tracing with careful pencil
Herself, and nothing more;
Leave not a single shadow
Out of that snowy brow—
Every thread of silver—
Paint her as she is now.

Maybe the eye is duller
Far than it used to be;
Maybe the cheek is paler,
Maybe the smile less free;
Care has altered them doubtless—
But, O, I tell you,
The cloud that darkened one life
Shadowed the other, too.

Paint me my wife, O, Master!
Now that the years have fled,
And love has blossomed out of
The dust of passion dead.
Place the pictures together,
Side by side on the wall.
Which is to me the fairest?
Give me the last of all.

Subsoiling.

Several advantages grow out of breaking land very deep, or what is generally called subsoiling. The roots are enabled to penetrate much deeper in quest of food, a greater amount of atmospheric air (and consequently nitrogen and carbonic acid) is held in the soil; for as the plow presses on, the atmosphere presses into every interspace behind it, and a soil well broken twelve inches deep will have twice as much of these valuable gases as that only broken six inches. Besides, it causes heavy rains to sink rapidly, preventing too much water from injuring the plants, and at the same time saves rolling lands from washing into such ugly gullies as so often disfigure our hillsides.

Again, subsoiling lands is a great prevention to drought, by holding in store a better supply of hygroscopic and capillary waters, enabling the latter to move more freely through a deeper and more porous tilth.

In 1873 we instituted a practical test of the advantages of subsoiling land for both corn and cotton. For the latter we planted one-fourth of an acre, subsoiled 12 inches deep, 4 feet wide, using at the rate of 300 lbs. of ammoniated phosphate. It produced at the rate of 1,227 lbs. per acre. The same amount, not subsoiled, by its side, produced 1,012 lbs. The first paid for the fertilizer and made a clear profit of $16 38 per acre. The last made a clear profit of $7 03.

Subsoiling land for corn was tested as follows: One-half acre was planted and cultivated precisely the same way, with a small amount of ammoniated superphosphate applied in each hill. The corn was planted in rows six feet wide by three in the drill; one-fourth acre was subsoiled 12 inches deep just previous to planting. The subsoiled plat produced at the rate of 19.70 bushels to the acre. That not subsoiled, 17.34 bushels. The overplus of corn made about paid for the extra labor. A dry year it would doubtless have paid more.—Scientific Agriculture.

Sagacity of a Gander.

A correspondent informs us that in the village of Droyton a grain buyer, several weeks ago, saved a gander from two dogs who were acting rudely toward him, and ever since he has shown the greatest affection for his protector; in fact, he never leaves him while in the market, and if he enters a store or other place of business, the gander will remain outside the door until his guardian comes out, and always greet him with kindness, which he shows by making a great noise, flapping his wings, wagging his tail and following him wherever he goes. He is the observed of all observers, and is certainly a curiosity. He can be seen every day in the village following his protector from door to door. The perceptive faculties of the gander are remarked by everybody, and particularly by strangers, as he will perceive his protector in the morning as he comes to business, several blocks away, and will immediately fly to him with every demonstration of joy.

A CIRCUS company on their way to Australia, stopped to see one of the Fiji Islands. While wandering about one of them turned a somersault, and the native spectators were astounded by the sight. Thereafter, the circus men, discerning the opportunity for fun, varied their walks by frequent somersaults and grotesque contortions, all the time maintaining sober faces and the utmost gravity of demeanor. Multitudes followed them in the belief that they were missionaries, sent to teach a religion in which somersaults were a part of the service.

A True Country Gentleman.

The city of Wheeling, West Virginia, possesses a lover of rural refinement, who delights in all kinds of floral and rural oddities, prompted by generous good nature and love of gardening. We have lately heard something about him which leads us to bring him forward to public notice and give him full credit for a lifetime spent in the encouragement of home ornament. We refer to Mr. Thomas Hornbrook. In the parlors of a friend there bloomed, one day the past fall, three immense bouquets, a present from Mr. Hornbrook. The largest was composed almost entirely of Tube Roses in full bloom, in the very fullness of their fragrance and beauty. This bouquet stood three feet in height, and was surmounted by a wreath of Smilax. The other two bouquets were almost equal in size to the first, and were composed of Lilliput Bouquet, Dahlias, Gladiolas, Salvia, Tritomas, red, white and purple Dahlias, and Japanese Honeysuckles. The floral pyramids were crowned with the most beautiful specimens of the Coxcomb, and the vases were set among Coleus, or foliage plants of the richest and most varied hues.

Mr. Hornbrook's property, where he has spent twenty years of intelligent effort, is about four and a half miles out of the city. It contains fifty acres, laid out with two entrances, and avenues which in extent reach fully a mile. One of the avenues is thirty-six feet broad, lined with an espatier of many different kinds of trees, vines, etc., and are, in their season, superb reaches of bloom, fragrance and shade. Various places give splendid openings for glimpses of beautiful scenery, and throughout the drives it is constantly bordered with specimens of the best evergreens and ornamental trees.

His place is one of great resort for visitors from the city, and one special feature is the welcome given to everyone. Numerous finger-boards are placed at intervals, with directions where to go and see the things most worthy of observation, and how to conduct themselves while on the premises. The following are some of the inscriptions copied from the same:

(Fronting the pike)—"Thos. Hornbrook's place. Ladies and gentlemen are welcome."

"A good spring of cool water for thirsty souls."

"Don't stone the birds or destroy their nests."

"Avenue to the top of the mound. Drive up."

"Hitch your horses here, if you wish to promenade and do your courting. There are many quiet little walks and shady nooks exceedingly convenient for such pleasant business."

"Ladies and gentlemen, when you call to see my place, don't think that you are under any obligations to call on the proprietor."

(On top of the mound)—"Well 70 feet deep, containing 30 feet of water."

On the principal eminence is a place naturally suited for a magnificent residence, but, with a humor peculiar to himself, he informs visitors, by means of one of his finger-boards, that he has now given up the idea of erecting an "earthly mansion," and intends securing a more permanent one in heaven. In the meantime, his residence in the midst of the garden will do till the other is ready.

The cleanliness, tidyness and thrift of the place are everywhere noticeable. Every year he goes out early in the spring, as soon as the weather will permit, and, at the head of eight or ten men, works early and late until the grounds are in thorough order. His humor, quaintness and peculiar habits have made him celebrated in the vicinity, and, as we read of him, recall stories of the old county squires, few of whom are left to bless society.

Your Wife's Claims.

Yor are a man of business, and have no time to show attention to your wife—few opportunities to converse with her; at least, you make few. She submits to this unsocial state of things because she must; but is she happy? Probably not; no woman likes to be considered a cipher. Your wife, ought to be your best adviser. She ought to be your most confidential counselor. The self-conceit of men amounts to a genius. There are many husbands who would as soon think of taking advice of their wives as of their children. But it is only the fool who is too wise to seek counsel. A woman, you say, knows very little about business; nevertheless, her intuition is often wiser than a man's judgment. Your wife is your partner. You have earned the money; but she has sacrificed and pinched and worried and worked to help accumulate it. She has done her fair share toward making your property what it is. She has a right to be consulted how it shall be used. A double right has she to have her judgments weighed and measured in all questions relating to the disposition of the family, and the training and culture of the children. Talk to your wife on all occasions. When you come home at night, tired with the cares of the day, to find her equally fatigued, bring to her the news of the day; bring the latest, freshest thought. In buying your evening paper, or subscribing for your monthly magazines, or renewing your religious weekly, get what suits her needs and meets her tastes. There is more in that patient, quiet, silent wife than you think; do not freeze her very individuality by your practical contempt of women.

Preparing Potatoes for Planting.

Most farmers are proposing to plant their potato crop as early as possible, partly because of the potato beetle, to get a start of that, and partly to secure the high price which is pretty sure to be had for the first potatoes in market this year. The first reason is not a good one. If we are to have the potato beetle in quantities this year, the enemy will be with us as soon as the earliest planted potatoes are up, and probably before. As the potato grows slowly, when planted early, this plan will only insure a longer season for fighting the beetles and larvæ. But many potatoes will be got into the ground as soon as it can be done after the frost is out, and the best way to forward them as rapidly as possible is worth noting. Potatoes intended to be planted early should be cut a week or ten days previous, and immediately rolled in gypsum. Newly cut potatoes, in contact with cold, moist earth, are apt to rot, and sometimes the sprouts will thus be destroyed. On the other hand, if cut and allowed to dry, the pieces, if small, will sometimes fail from drying out. The gypsum dries the surface of the cut so that it will not decay, and at the same time prevents the juices of the potato from evaporating. The potato plant is benefited by a dressing of gypsum, and the dusting of it which adheres to newly cut potatoes is worth more than its cost as a fertilizer, besides the other advantages named above.

For late planting, especially of early potatoes which sprout badly, the seed tubers should be kept as cool as possible. Pits in the open ground are generally preferable to the cellars under dwellings, which are often much too warm. The second and each succeeding shoot from the eye is more feeble than the first, and, if sprouted very badly, they are almost worthless as seed.—Country Gentleman.

Some Causes for Poor Butter.

Among the causes which injure the quality of butter, I will name, first, disease in the cow; fright also has an injurious effect upon the milk; breathing foul gases or odors often leaves its taint upon the milk; it is also affected by whatever the cow lives upon. Next, the cream while exposed to the air in rising is very susceptible to taints of all kinds; churning at too high or too low a temperature always injures the product. Butter can be greatly hurt by over churning, or both, and much of the poor butter in market is spoiled in these ways. When over-worked it appears greasy and sticky, and will keep but a very short time. The secret of this injury is in the breaking of the grain. Perfect butter, like sugar, appears under the microscope to be made up of granules or crystals, and to crush and to destroy these is to destroy the distinguishing feature of perfect butter, and ruin completely the keeping quality. I find in going among dairymen and dairywomen that a large portion of them do not know how to make butter which will keep sweet to get to market. On seeing a package of butter being put up, I asked the good lady whether she believed her butter would keep perfect for a long time. She replied that it always had kept good until her husband carried it to the village every Tuesday, which was their market day. This butter was churned, washed, salted, worked, and packed in less than sixty minutes from the time the cream went into the churn. If it reached the consumer in a few days it was probably eatable, but if through any delay or oversight, it was set one side for a few months, it would be poor, and, perhaps, altogether unfit for eating or cooking.—Scientific Farmer.

The Average New Yorker.

The average New Yorker is not melancholy, has no slight tinge of it, is never abstract or moody, or scholarly; for the moment he acquires any spirit of a dreamer or a recluse that moment he fails as the practical, selfish, hollow New Yorker of the average kind. He sees only the silver even in the lining of the clouds. A dead woman floating in the water is only a curiosity to him; and he eats pea-nuts when Lear stands in the tempest. The bright surface, the polished surface, the gay surface that reflects to him the airy clearness of his own empty manner—these charm him; and so he is charming. He will, if in the mood or in company, give a beggar a quarter, and as generously borrow a silk umbrella. For him things must be nice, clean, bright, rosy. In many ways they are Frenchy; but even in his voluble volatility he has none of that essential zeal, that warmth of human instinct which makes the saying of a Frenchman an epigram. He is jolly and not original. He acquires, but never grows. He has stealth without humor, and a smile of the lip and teeth. In his quiet moments he is planning, not a sentimental crusade, but the manner of making money or obtaining a social conquest; and he is much better at catching an opportunity and using it than he is at originating a reform. So he sees very little of the misery that is around him. He says "God bless you!" to a bothering beggar, but he sheds no tears. Yet there is misery and human anguish all around him.

MRS. PARTINGTON expresses her apprehension that the people of the gold regions will bleed to death, as the papers are constantly announcing the opening of a new vein.

A MITE SONG.

Only a drop in the bucket,
But every drop will tell;
The bucket would soon be empty,
Without the drops in the well.

Only a poor little penny,
It was all I had to give;
But as pennies make the dollars,
It may help some cause to live.

A few little bits of ribbon
And some toys—they were not new;
But they made the sick child happy,
Which has made me happy, too.

Only some outgrown garments—
They were all I had to spare;
But they'll help to clothe the needy,
And the poor are everywhere.

A word now and then of comfort,
That costs me nothing to say;
But the poor old man died happy,
And I helped him on the way.

God loveth the cheerful giver,
Though the gift be poor and small;
What doth He think of His children
When they never give at all?

[Written for the Recorder.]

HOW SHE DECIDED.

"Mamma, I am in a complete dilemma."

So said pretty Jennie Campbell, as she and her mother were busy with their needles.

"About what, my daughter?"

"Why, don't you know George Markham and Paul Devere have both proposed to me? And I don't know which to accept."

Mrs. Campbell paused at this juncture, and for awhile was in deep study. The thought had never entered her mind that she would soon be obliged to part with her daughter, for she had never thought but that she would always be with her, hence her hesitation. The silence was finally broken by the mother, who said:

"You should most certainly accept the offer of the one you like the best."

"Yes; but I like them both; each has told me of his love—how earnest and how devoted—and pledged to be constant, if but rewarded with my hand."

"I must confess, Jennie, you are in a perplexed position, and I am equally at a loss to decide which I should like the best for a son-in-law. I think both are nice gentlemen, and any young lady would do well to get either. But I wish you to bear in mind that George is only a clerk, while Paul is the only child, and, therefore, will be the only heir to a large fortune."

"I don't care for the wealth; what I want is a good and true husband. But, mamma, I want to know what you would do under the circumstances."

"I would advise you to defer, for a short time, answering either, and in the meantime something may occur which will enable you to make a decision."

George Markham was a poor clerk on a small salary; but he was free from bad habits and had a persevering disposition, and his highest ambition was to become a partner of the firm of which he was clerk, which had been promised him at the commencement of the next year. He was left an orphan at an early age, but his steps had been guided by his mother's dying admonition: "My son, be honest, be upright, and never let the wealth of the world entice you from the path of rectitude." The seed had been sown upon good ground, by a Christian mother, and now was springing forth and promised a bountiful harvest.

Mr. Devere, Paul's father, had formerly been a resident of the town of G——, but had moved to Chicago when Paul was quite small. It was known that he acquired great wealth, and was now a great banker in that city; consequently, his father's influence and his own good appearance secured him a hearty welcome from the citizens of this town, although nothing was known with reference to his own life or character.

Mrs. Campbell was a widow residing in this town, and had been left so when Jennie, her only child, was very young; but her husband was wealthy, and the mother and daughter had never known what was want. Jennie had been sent to college and had graduated, and, although quite a lady, was not above attending to domestic duties when they required her attention. We find her now a lady of nineteen, respected and admired by all who knew her, which we can infer, as she already has two suitors for her heart and hand. Mrs. Campbell is proud of her daughter, and desires to make her happy for life when she does release her claims; hence the difficulty in deciding.

It was three days after the conversation before mentioned when Jennie rushed into the house and exclaimed:

"Mamma, the young folks are going to give a picnic in Mr. Davis' woods, to-morrow, and Paul has asked to be my escort. May I accept?"

"Why, certainly, Jennie; I'll not object if it is pretty weather."

"Thank you, mamma; I am extremely anxious to go. I know I shall have such a nice time; and Paul as my escort will add ten times to my pleasure."

The remainder of the day Jennie spent in preparing her beautiful white dress, so as to be ready for the morrow; and she was as happy as possible when she thought of the pleasure to morrow had in store for her.

Morning dawned bright and clear, and by 9 o'clock Jennie was dressed and ready for the picnic. She was sitting in the parlor awaiting her escort when she heard the door-bell and knew he had come.

"Well, Jennie, are you ready?"

"Yes, Paul," she replied.

"It is high time we were gone. We have all concluded to walk to the woods, as it is only a mile and a half, and the roads are so good."

It was a very pleasant walk to our young lady, and Paul, having a good opportunity, again pressed his claims; but she told him he would be obliged to wait a few days before she could give him an answer. She told him it was a question of happiness or unhappiness for life, and it was necessary that she should consider well before answering.

This made Paul angry—it stung him to the quick—and he replied:

"If you are not going to accept my proposal, just say so."

Jennie made no reply to this, for she scarcely understood him, havign never heard him speak in this manner before.

They finally arrived at the woods, and found all the young folks assembled, enjoying themselves in the highest degree. They were the subjects of many remarks, some of which poor George Markham overheard, and felt as though the lady by his side might hear his heart beat within him. One lady says:

"Oh! there are Paul Devere and Jennie Campbell. Are they not a lovely couple? Madame Rumor says they are soon to be married. I wonder if she tells the truth."

This remark caused George much pain, and marred his happiness for the remainder of that day.

In the evening the young folks concluded to go to the river at the edge of the woods and take a boat ride. The river usually was not very wide, but a heavy rain a few days previous had swelled it to its high water mark.

Paul Devere was a first-class oarsman, and he was selected to row the boat. Jennie and two other young ladies got into the boat, and it was soon skimming over the water at a fast rate. It had now reached half way across the river, when Jennie, who was leaning over playing in the water, suddenly lost her balance and fell head foremost into the river.

The screams on shore soon told how horror-stricken was the crowd. But it was seen Paul made no effort to rescue her, but sat, mute as a statue, watching her borne down the stream far from help.

As soon as George could realize what had occurred, he plunged into the river and soon reached Jennie. He caught her around the waist and made for the shore, but the water was so swift that he made slow progress, and those on shore began to think that both would perish. At this critical moment an uprooted tree came floating down the stream, and George, with the desperation of a drowning man, grasped a limb, still clinging to Jennie. The suspense of the crowd was great, and the question now was, would the limb hold long enough for his strength to return? But at this moment the limb gave way, and both disappeared. When they rose to the surface George was making desperate efforts to swim out of the strong current, and finally succeeded and reached the shore, but fell unconscious.

When George regained consciousness, Jennie has been removed to her home. Many praises were lavished upon him, and it is needless to say he was the lion of the day.

The next evening, when George called on Jennie, Mrs. Campbell met him at the door and said: "How can I ever reward you for saving my daughter's life?"

George replied: "By bestowing upon me your daughter's hand."

And this was the way she decided.

As has already been noted, the proposition is seriously made to form a sea of the desert of Sahara by cutting a channel to let in the waters of the Mediterranean—an enterprise regarded as entirely feasible, more so, in fact, than cutting of the isthmus of Darien, which may be said to be an assured project. A German scientific writer, however, goes so far as to assert that the Sahara project, if carried out, would eventually turn Europe into another Greenland. He alleges that the diversion of the Gulf Stream, by the cutting of the Suez canal, has already begun to have an influence on the climate of Europe, and that the covering of the burning sands of the great African desert with water would destroy the hot winds, which are necessary for the melting of the Alpine snow and ice, and would finally result in a glacial formation that would overwhelm Italy. He instances the changes in climate in Australia and New Guinea by the deviation of a warm current of water which formerly ran through Torres Sarait, by the growth of a coral mass, as a practical illustration of his theory.

POLITICAL POINTS.

MR. HAYES is compelled to confront another obstacle to his Southern policy. If he recognizes Nicholls, that act will be a denial of his own title to the office, and will be regarded as a confusion of judgment, and those quo warranto papers are staring him in the face. It's real funny, to have some one steal the Presidency for you. But to hold it when stolen is perplexing.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE great conundrum of the period remains a solemn and impenetrable mystery. Meanwhile, business is stopped awaiting the development of Hayes' policy, the public peace depends on the public temper, and there is a general soft and mushy and slippery condition of things in consequence. If it be not importunate, we should like to call for a sight at this much-talked-of policy. Does it mean Nicholls, which is prosperity and contentment. Does it mean Packard, which is depression and squabbling, or does it mean inaction, which is decay. —New Orleans Times.

SECRETARY SHERMAN has introduced himself early and emphatically to the whisky ring. The pending applications for release from civil suits in several parts of the West being called to his attention, he promptly refused them, and ordered prosecutions to proceed at once in all cases. This not only disposes of the efforts of the ring to avoid the penalties for its thieving, but also of a crowd of strikers here, whose business it is to sell influence on the pretense of being able to obtain decisions from the Departments. The fact that whisky is selling in market below the cost of production including taxes, is accepted by the Government as an evidence of fraud, and vigorous measures will at once be adopted by the Treasury Department to enforce the laws. To this end, nests in the department here will be stirred up, and Bristowism, which broke up rings a year ago, will be re-established upon a permanent basis. Upon this point the President and Secretary Sherman are determined, and it is quite likely that many heads will fall within the next few weeks.—Washington Special to Cincinnati Gazette.

THE new House of Representatives suffers by the loss of some of the ablest of the old members. Mr. Kerr is dead; Blaine, Hill, Hoar and Lamar have gone to the Senate; Pierce, of Massachusetts; Kasson, of Iowa; Elijah Ward, Charles J. Faulkner; Abbott, Seelye and Thompson, of Massachusetts; Willard, of Michigan; Jenks, of Pennsylvania; Scott Lord, Hancock, of Texas, and Holman, of Indiana, do not reappear. All these will be missed. We trust among the new members there will be some chronic and stiff-backed objector to take the place of Mr. Holman, whose "I object" was a terror to jobbers in the last House. Of men of note and power in Congresses before the last, the new House regains only Clarkson Potter and General Butler. Of the new members, General Ewing, of Ohio, is the only one we now remember who is pretty sure to make his mark. But of the men who served with more or less distinction in the last House, and reappear in the next, there is a considerable list. On the Republican side there will be Foster, Garfield, Hale, Crittenden, Kelley, Townsend, Crapo, Burchard and Frye, and some others, probably, whom we do not remember. The Democratic list is longer, and includes Randall, Wood, Cox, Schleicher, Knott, Randolph Tucker, Swann, Randall, Gibson, Reagan, Clymer, Lynde, Hewitt, Eppa Hunton, Bright, Sayler, Gilbert, Walker and Wadkell, of North Carolina.—N. Y. Herald.

The Bible vs. Dancing.

The following, clipped from a St. Louis paper, was sent us by a lady friend for publication:

Rev. Dr. Patton, in an able article in an exchange on the subject of dancing, thus sums up his conclusions:

Having carefully examined every text in the Old and New Testaments in which the word occurs, we are led to the following conclusions:

1. That dancing was a religious act among idolators as well as worshipers of the true God.

2. That it was practiced as the demonstration of joy for victories and other mercies.

3. That dances were in the daytime.

4. That the women danced by themselves; that the dancing was mostly done by them.

5. No instance is recorded in which promiscuous dancing by the two sexes took place.

6. That when the dance was perverted from a religious service to mere amusement, it was regarded disreputable, and was performed by the "vain fellows." Neither of these had any tendency to promote piety.

8. That the Bible furnishes not the slightest sanction for promiscuous dancing as an amusement, as practiced at the present time. The dancing professor of religion must not deceive himself with the impression that he is justified by the Word of God.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

Two dogs fought in a Kentucky pit until both were disabled; and then their masters fought with pistols until one was mortally wounded.

A GREAT many anecdotes are related of personal bravery. We should like to see that man who would deliberately allow a woman to catch him making mouths at her first baby.

AT a concert, recently, at the conclusion of the song "There's a Good Time Coming," a country farmer got up and exclaimed, "Mister, you couldn't fix the date, could you?"

A LADY who assumes to know how boys ought to be trained, writes as follows: "Oh, mothers! hunt out the soft, tender, genial side of your boy's nature." Mothers often do—with an old shoe.

AT Florence, Arizona, there is a restaurant kept by a Chinaman, with a Mexican wife, negro cook and a white woman for a waiter. Hash with any kind of hair-dressing promptly served.

"COME, Bill, it's 10 o'clock, and I think we had better be going, for its time honest men were at home." "Well, yes," was the answer, I must be off, but you need not hurry on that account."

"I SHALL not discuss woman in the columns of my paper," said George D. Prentice, "while considering the main points involved in this campaign, because everyone who is informed on the subject of her creation knows that woman was a side issue.

"I NEVER can enjoy poetry when I'm cookin'," said an old lady; "but when I step out to feed the hogs, an' h'ist myself on the fence and throw my soul into a few lines of 'Cap'n Jinks,' it does seem as if this airth was made to live on, after all."

JENNIE OVERTON, a young Chicago widow, took poison the other day because she had been jilted by the young painter to whom she was engaged. A cold-hearted policeman interfered with the effects of the dose, and now she will hold over and try again.

DON'T put me in the river bank, among the fragrant flowers; nor where the grass is watered by the early summer showers. But put me in the kitchen range, and open wide the damper, and then my vaporous remains can up the chimney scamper.

TWO old bachelors meeting after a long separation, and each finding that the other continued in a state of "single blessedness," one exclaimed: "Well, I am sorry for your forlorn condition!" "And I," replied his friend, "am equally sorry for yours." "Then," rejoined the first, "we are a couple of sorry fellows!"

THE honeymoon had long gone by when a melancholy husband wearily confessed himself to a friend: "What do you think? I never could have imagined it! In the first days of our married life she was an angel—so dear and lovely that I could have eaten her up." "And now?" asked the friend. "Now I repent of not having done it."

THEY were husband and wife, and as they stood before the Guard's Monument, in Waterloo Place, she asked: "What's that figure on top?" "That's a goddess," he answered. "And what a goddess?" "A woman who hold her tongue," he replied. She looked sideways at him, and then began planning to make a peach pie with the stones in it for the benefit of his sore tooth.

A YOUNG man in Dubuque, Iowa, went on Saturday week to a country dance and did not return to his home until the church bells were ringing the next morning. His father told him he must go to meeting, and he went. Before the minister had finished the opening prayer the young reveler was sound asleep and dreaming of the dance. An old lady who sat next to him touched his hand to arouse him, whereupon he seized her waist and shouted: "All join hands and circle to the left. Swing the girl with the blue dress on."

DR. RETCHIE, of Edinburgh, though a very clever man, once met with his match. When examining a student as to the classes he had attended, he said:

"And you attended the class for mathematics?"

"Yes."

"How many sides has a circle?"

"Two," said the student.

"What are they?"

"What a laugh in the court the student's answer produced when he said, "An inside and an outside."

The doctor next inquired: "And you attended the moral philosophy class, also?"

"Yes."

"Well, you would hear lectures on various subjects. Did you ever hear one on cause and effect?"

"Yes."

"Does an effect go before a cause?"

"Yes."

"Give me an instance."

"A man wheeling a wheelbarrow."

The doctor then sat down and proposed no more questions.

Three inches of snow at Quebec on the 6th.

It is said that Georgia has a larger acreage of corn this year than it has any year since the war.

The Illinois Legislature made an appropriation for the completion of the monument of Stephen A. Douglas, in Chicago.

The new Mayor of Cincinnati does not think it his duty to say how the laboring man shall spend his Sundays, and therefore does not propose to interfere with the sunday amusements over the Rhine.

Packard has no use for the commission Hayes has sent to Louisiana. He claims that he was elected Governor of that State, and it is Hayc's duty to recognize him as such. The prospects are Packard will not be as easily gotten out of the way as Chamberlain was.

At the city election in Cincinnati, last week, the Republicans elected their candidate for Mayor. Geo. W. C. Johnson, who has been filling the office of Mayor for the last two terms, was the Democrat candidate, and was defeated by about 2,000 majority. The name of the man elected is Moore.

Colonel O'Neal's property in the office of United States Marshal for this district is not vested to the satisfaction of all concerned. General Fry, who has been in pursuit of the office has not yet abandoned all hopes, and still urges his claims. The Colonel may unexpectedly have the prefix "ex" applied to him.

Hayes has, at the instance of Stanly Matthews, reconsidered his intention to have a special session of Congress conven on the fourth of June, and has been induced to call the extra session for some time about the middle of May. The cause for this change is claimed to be the want of funds to pay the navy up to the end of the fiscal year.

The third trial of Col. Terrell for killing Hon. Harvey Meyers will take place in Lagrange, he having obtained a change of venue to Oldham County. It is set for some time in May. His first sentence was for seven and his last for eight years in the penitentiary.—Frankfort Yeoman.

All wrong. It was the trial of Ira Percival that was changed to Oldham. Colonel Terrell's third trial will be in the Court of Appeals in Frankfort, where he will try to have the last trial set aside and a new one awarded.

Governor Hampton returned to Columbia on the 6th. He was greeted at the depot by the military, fire and other organizations, and was escorted from the depot to Carolina Hall by eighteen hundred United States Infantry. At the hall he addressed an immense crowd of people, and announced that his policy in the future would be one of peace and harmony, and that he would support Hayes as long as he pursues the policy indicated in his inaugural address.

Chamberlain has expressed his intention not to remain in South Carolina. It is supposed that he will journey toward the North and locate in Boston or New York, where he will pursue the practice of law. Thus we see how Chamberlain's interest is identified with that of the State over which he proposed to rule as Governor so soon as his claims to the office of Governor of the state are refused him, he takes up his march to [illegible], showing plainly that his interest or office were all that induced him to become a so-called citizen of [illegible].

On the sixth inst., a large and enthusiastic mass meeting was held in New Orleans, and quite a lengthy set of resolutions adopted, in which the meeting declared the right of local self-government to be a fundamental principle of Republican Government, and that it is an inalienable privilege of every state. That for four years the people of Louisiana have lived under a usurping government, never elected by the people of the State and never voluntarily acquiesced in by them. That the result of this usurpation has been to distroy the happiness of the citizens and depress all branches of business as well as the value of property. They maintain that the government at the head of which is Francis T. Nicholls is the constitutional government of the state of Louisana, and that the pretended government at the head of which is S. B. Packard, is the offspring of a Legislative conspiracy of the late usurpers to perpetuate their power in defiance of the will of the people as expressed by the ballot-box. In reference to the inaugural of Hayes, they say they hail it as an omen of returning to peace and the constitutional method of government, and that they will heartily welcome the commission which is about to visit them, assuming that they are impartial citizens, whose purposes are ligitimate. The meeting ignored, in every instance, the Packard administration and every thing pertaining to it, while they extolled the Nicholls government in every particular.

The Cincinnati Grange Bulletin of last week says: "The Cincinnati District Council have taken a new start in their long talked of Supply-house project. New incorporators have been appointed, a new certificate of incorporation is to be obtained, and as soon as sufficient stock is subscribed a Supply-house Association is to be organized on the 'Rochdale plan.' Whether the phrase 'Rochdale' plan is to be taken literally, or simply as synonymous with 'the National Grange's plan,' we cannot say. But the adoption of either the real English system of co-operation, or of that recommended by the National Grange, will be cause for congratulation."

In Vermont, one John P. Phair had been convicted as the murder of a Mrs. Frieze, and was to have been hanged on last Friday. The time for the execution was but twenty-five minutes in the future. A man in Boston, suddenly remembering a transaction which, if gotten into court, would relieve the doomed man, telegraphed the fact to the officers in whose charge the man was and thus saved him from the scaffold, of which in twenty-five minutes more he would have been a victim.

The tobacco market for the week previous to the rain was rather dull, the receipts being light, but the weather becoming more favorable for its handling, the receipts were somewhat increased and the market enlivened. Mason County District, new is bringing prices ranging from $3 10 to $10 while the old crops ranges from $6 25 to $21. Owen County tobacco brings from $3 05 to $11 and Boone County tobocco, $3 50, $6, $9 40.

Tuesday, at noon, the soldiers, in obedience to the order of Mr. Hayes, were to withdraw from the State House in Columbia, South Carolina. Hampton will then commence the administration of the State affairs, recognized as the lawful Governor of the State.

We are in momentary expectation of a dispatch from Maine, conveying the pleasing intelligence that Mr. Blaine's tongue cleaves to the roof of his mouth and his right hand has forgot its cunning. Mr. Blaine, it should not be forgotten, invoked this fate upon himself if ever he deserted the carpet-baggers or failed to defend them in their extremity. And now, when they are tumbling neck and heels out of their offices in South Carolina, Mr. Blaine is not only silent, but he gives out that he is in high feather with the Administration. Mr. Blaine proclaimed the war, but he has left it to Phillips and Garrison and the carpet-baggers themselves to fight it out. As usual, when a dangerous assault is to be made upon power intrenched in Federal office, we find that the mercenary politicians have slunk back under the President's table in search of crumbs, and indifferent to kicks. There are Morton, Cameron, Blaine, and the rest, snapping and snarling around his Fraudulency's shanks, eagerly asking whatever he chooses to toss them. But we do not say they will maintain this attitude long. When the offices are filled and the first run of the patronage exhausted they will be at his throat like a butcher's dog.—New York Sun.

Unfortunately for him, the name of the lawyer who conducted the defense is not given; nor, for that matter, is that of the Esquire before whom the trial was had. That is evidently the shop to get justice in.

—S. J. Carpenter, who recently returned from a visit to Elliot County, has given us a description of a wonderful natural curiosity which he saw while there. It is a bridge of solid and seamless stone over a creek called Little Caney, and is a magnificent arch of one hundred and sixty-two feet in length. It is somewhat higher in the center than at the ends, just like the bridges men build, and varies from ten to fifteen feet in width across the top. The water is about one hundred feet below, a narrow, deep stream. About fifty yards above the bridge the waters of the creek fall over a precipice sixty feet high. The scene from the bridge is strikingly beautiful, the near proximity of the lovely falls, the stream bordered with huge pines, and the high cliffs being grand. The mountains of Kentucky abound in magnificent natural wonders that will in time become as famous as her celebrated cave. The bridge we have mentioned would amply repay a visit, and is, we believe, the only one in the country except the one in Virginia.—Flemingsburg Rambler.

San Francisco, March 29—Further particulars of the arrest and imprisonment of John A. Sutter, United States Consul at Acapulo, are as follows: Previous to the occupation of the town by the forces of Diaz, under command of General Jimenez, General Alvarez, who held the place in the interest of Lerdo, levied a contribution on the citizens to obtain funds to carry on the contest against Diaz. Among those who paid the amount assessed was Henry Kasten, an American citizen, who owned considerable property, including a plantation, in the vicinity. About this time Consul Sutter's house was entered one night by a Mexican, with a view to robbery. Sutter shot at and wounded him. He was examined and discharged by due process of law. When Jimenez entered the city this same Mexican turned up as one of his adherents, together with a large portion of the rabbles element: and there is an impression that his private enmity may have had some weight in the subsequent proceedings against Sutter, more particularly as many threats were uttered against him by the rough element. Jimenez at once began to levy forced contributions, and seized a lot of cattle belonging to Kasten. The latter lodged a protest with Sutter as the American representative, and then, fearing personal trouble, left the city. On the morning of the 5th instant Sutter sent a protest to Jimenez, receiving a reply to the effect that he might better be careful how he protested against or interfered with the action of the Mexican authorities, or he would get into trouble. A few hours after Sutter was surrounded on the streets by soldiers and marched to prison. Subsequently Jemenez apparently concluded that he had carried the thing to far, and informed Sutter that on making a request in proper form he would be liberated. Sutter replied that he would accept his liberty if offered, but declined to request it and still remained in jail on the departure of the steamer. In a letter to his brother here, he says he has sent a letter to the United States Consul-General at the City of Mexico, representing the state of affairs. He intimates doubt whether it will reach its destination, as all his correspondence passes under the eyes of his jailers.

AT an election held last Saturday for President and Directors of the Burlington and Florence turnpike, M. Hamilton was elected President; W. M. Conner, Samuel Cowen, T. W. Finch and N. E. Hawes, Directors.

THE correspondent to the Rising Sun News from this place says the negro who, a few days since, was tried before Esquire Riddell on the charge of rape, was, a few days afterward, lynched. This is a mistake. It was the negro that was tried at Walton on the same charge and about the same time.

IF you want to know where you can make your money do you most good, read the advertisements in this week's paper. You will find among the new "advs." those of Miss L. Calkins, Mrs. M. A. Ward, Wm. Colter and Geo. McAvoy, of Rising Sun, J. C. Wiles and Geo. Pfalzgraf, of Lawrenceburg. You will find the advertisements in the RECORDER composed of the best business persons, who want to keep their business before the people of the county.

WE understand that the negroes at work on the Southern Railroad indorse the action taken in the Parker Mayo case, and say he met the fate one guilty of such dastardly outrages merits. Lynch law is a dangerous one, but in such instances as the one mentioned above, it seems nothing less than a resort to it could have administered justice when due. It is to be hoped that the lynching of Mayo will be the last occurrence of the kind in Boone.

WE call the attention of our readers, and especially the Justices of the county, to the order made by the Boone County Court at a special term, held on the 4th inst. This order contemplates the accomplishment of that which has been in need of attention for several years. The citizens of the county can, if desirous, materially assist the Justices in their respective districts in the discharge of their duties, under this order of the Court, and have the matter so satisfactorily arranged that change, hereafter, from one district to another will be unnecessary.

A Challenge.

The following communication, handed to us for publication, explains itself:

APRIL 5, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

We, the undersigned, members of the Farmers' Literary Society, hereby challenge four of the speakers (lawyers preferred) of the Burlington Society to discuss the following proposition: "Resolved, That lawyers have been more injurious to the country than beneficial." We affirm.

W. M. CONNER, A. F. CRIGLER,
J. H. WALTON, C. C. CONNER.

THE maple buds are on a bust.

DR. HALL conducted divine worship at this place last Sunday.

NEXT week we commence the publication of a selected piece entitled "My Brief Romance." It will run about four weeks.

MR. LEWIS CONNER was in town Tuesday, shaking hands with his late associates. Mr. Conner's hands have commenced a callous growth.

THE stock trade at this place has again been revived. Tuesday Mr. James Conner received 33 hogs averaging 190 pounds weighed here.

THE Clerk has been busily engaged making a copy of the record in the Terrell case, which goes to the Court of Appeals. The record is now about complete.

IT again becomes our duty to chronicle the death of one of the old and highly respected citizens of the county—Esquire James N. Early. He died after a long period of suffering, on the 4th inst., at his home in Petersburg where he has resided for many years. The deceased leaves a large circle of friends and relatives to mourn his death, not only in this, but in other portions of the state. The remains were interred in the Cemetry at Petersburg, the funeral ceremonies being conducted by the Odd-Fellows and Masons, he being a worthy member of both orders.

LETTER FROM VIRGINIA

URBANA, VA., April 2, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

As it has been some time since you had a line from the Old Dominion, and the spring time has fully come—vegetation springing up, greatly to the comfort and joy of cattle and sheep after a hard winter, our rivers filled with shad and herring, equally to the delight of all; the whistle of the plowman is heard in the fields, corn planting commenced and the crows abounding, prepared for their ancient calling of pulling it up.

I will give you a word or two from this old region, but it is very hard to get any thing to interest you. Everything here moves on in such a quiet, sober and straightforward way—no murders or prize fights as you seem to enjoy in Boone and but few cases of larceny. The last attempt at the latter was by a poor man scarce of fuel, on a cold stormy night, attempting to steal a railroad tie from the wharf to warm up his wife and children. He had it on his shoulder, but the way being hard and icy, he slipped and fell, the heavy tie coming down on his head, killing him instantly. This sad case has completely stopped the stealing of ties.

Old folks are passing rapidly and quietly away, and the young ones coming in squalling.

Since the settlement of the Presidential question, and the conservative policy of the administration established, business of every kind has greatly revived, and, so far as this section is concerned, the people are all well pleased, confidence restored, and gone to work with a will. The farmers are anticipating a good season, planting a large area in corn. Wheat, rye and oats look well, promising a large yield, with a good prospect for fruit of every kind. Peaches now in full bloom.

I stumbled, the other day, on an old relic which I feel inclined to mention. It will make you think of former days, when the social glass and sparkling wine were enjoyed without restraint. It is a piece of dining room furniture one hundred and fifty-one years old—a side-board still doing service. While spending a day with a friend, one of lineal decendants of the Steptoe family, my attention was drawn to it (not to take a glass of wine or brandy, which, had it been filled, as in former days, I might have been tempted to do, but being struck with its antiquated appearance), and took occasion to inquire into its history and give it a close inspection, which it seemed to give my friend great pleasure to extend. It is made of solid mahogany, inlaid and beautifully ornamented with box wood; eight and a half feet long, three feet nine inches deep, four feet high at each end, and three and a half in the center or middle part, which has an oval front something after the style of a modern bay window; stands on twelve pedestal feet elevating it six inches from the floor. It has three large apartments for tea, breakfast and dining service of china, glass, plate and table ornament, and nine large drawers. But the most interesting of its apartments are two cases, each to contain twelve decanters, one for vinous, and the other for spirituous liquors, all of which, in former days, were well filled with a like variety of the best imported qualities. It was imported from London in the year 1726 by the progenitor of the Steptoe family, costing fifty five pounds sterling or $275, and has been held by the family every since and never moved from its abiding place in the old Hewick Mansion. Many an old Episcopal Bishop, in former days has preached his best morning sermons anticipating all the while the dinner and the wine—especially the wine—at Bros. Steptoe's; and his evening services were always remarkable for being full of the spirit.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Florence.

The Fair board met last Saturday, and made out their premium list. The number and amount of premiums are a little larger in the aggregate than last year. There will be a 1st and 2d premium instead of but one, as last year.

The Catholic service of 40 hours devotion, or Adloration of the Blessed Sacrament, commenced at the church here Sunday morning and ended Wednesday, noon. The altar was bautifully decorated and arranged for the occasion. Father Bent was ably assisted in the services by Rev. Father Augustine of Cincinnati, and Rev. Father Gambert, of Covington.

Thursday Reuben Conner, Esq., sent through 35 of the finest hogs that we have seen pass here this season. They averaged 425 pounds.

Personal—Perry Carpenter has got the whooping cough.....Jean Rice came home from college with the measles. That's the way the money goes, pop goes the weasel.

Thinking perhaps a few items from here would be acceptable to the readers of your paper I will scratch a little. Nearly all your readers will recognize the place by reading a description of it.

Our old time miller (Mr Parsons, of Milling Valley) and his partner, Mr. J. S. Mason have a large circular saw mill in our valley, which is doing a thriving business every day in the week except Saturday, when Mr. Parson turns his attention to making corn meal the little mill.

The farmers again wear smiling faces; but, I tell you, for awhile they looked terribly discontented, while having to entertain old winter in the lap of spring. However, they are nearly done breaking for corn.

There was a very small attendance at Big Bone Church fourth Sunday. Cause inclemency of the weather.

Wade Ryle and wife buried an infant in the Cemetry at Big Bone on the 30th inst. "Of such is the kingdom a Heaven."

DON JUAN.

Petersburg.

Startling information reaches us through a reliable source that Judge A. B. Parker proposes to exchange a nice set of little used and slightly damaged law books, for a set of steamboat books. This item of news has produced a most wonderfully tangled condition in the professional duties of Mr. J. D. Willis, a prominent attorney from Indiana who frequently practiced in this Judge's court. This vacancy taken in consideration with that occasioned by the death of Mr. J. N. Early, indicates to the observing mind that there is to be a fall in cymine in this Judicial District, and upon whom it will rest, is the perplexing question to the natives. All of which goes to show that Mr. Parker is to take a position, very shortly, on one of the Cincinnati and Memphis packets. We console ourselves with the reflection that our loss is their gain, for conducting the affairs of the State in the Clerk's Office at Burlington, he showed his ability to attend the Clerk's official duties to public satisfaction in any office.

One of our merchants, of the venerable class, has accumulated a sufficient quantity of that material that "makes the mare go," to offer an inducement to thieves to rob him. So last week he was halted near a suspiciously dark alley by two men, but suddenly turning his lantern upon them they took to their heels. Also during the same week, and while he and his family were absent at church, someone entered his house, but nothing was missed. He thinks he recognized one of the men who halted him, and a sharp watch will be kept on his movements for some time to come. The motto of this is that some capitalist ought to build a little bank here before someone is robbed.

Mr. J. N. Early, whose protracted illness we have noticed from time to time, died last week, and was buried by the Odd Fellows and Masonic fraternities. Rev. W. S. Keene officiated for both orders. As it was a pleasant day, and Mr. Early was well known throughout the community, a large number of people attended the funeral.

Last Saturday being the day on which, by law, this city chooses from her citizens five new dads annually, a poll book was opened for the purpose by the clerk of the old paps, who was at the same time a candidate for re-election, and business began in lively style. The clerk had filled out his ticket at the head of the poll book in the first five spaces, carefully inserted the clerk's name in the third space, so when the modest voter came up, this little game was to much for him and he tumbled accordingly. Our dear old Porter got on the list, but being busy, and trusting his political history and claims to the hands of that neophyte, W. R. Gordon, who was anything but a match for the wily clerk, he was defeated. Here are the successful boys and their votes: Solon Early, 43, R. D. Carter, 44, D. B. Tilley, 33, Wm. McWethy, 29, J. E. Terrell, 29. The race before the board for the office of Chairman, will probably be between Carter and Early, they being of the same age and the oldest men on the board. They are each 65 years old.

THE SWEETEST NAME.

The name of mother! sweetest name
That ever fell on mortal ear!
The love of mother! mightiest love
Which heaven permits to flourish here.
Dissect a mother's heart and see
The properties it doth contain—
What pearls of love, what gems of hope—
A mother's heart beats not in vain.

The words of mother! when they flow
In love's true rhetoric from her lips,
The meteor stars of sin and shame
Are lost amid a bright eclipse;
And when we walk the glittering path
Wherein temptations oft we see,
Oh, then we realize how strong
The power of mother's love can be.

A mother's love! it never wanes;
What if her boy an ingrate seems?
The beauty of that wonderous love
Around the thankless offspring beams;
Though in the path of shame he walks,
Though crime hath driven him to the bowl,
A mother's love can yet avail—
A mother's prayers may win his soul.

What heart like mother's can forgive
The peccadillos of our youth?
What hand like hers can lead us back
From sin to innocence and truth?
Oh, name of mother! sweetest name
That ever fell on mortal ear;
Oh, love of mother! mightiest love
That heaven allows to flourish here.

Breaking up of a Setting Hen.

The city man who gets into the country to spend the summer must make up his mind to learn something of the routine of rural life. A New York man who is spending the hot weather season with a family on Pine street, was asked by the lady of the house if he would take a hen off the nest, as it wanted to set, and she didn't want it to.

"Certainly," said he, and immediately started out to the barn where the hens were kept, to crush out the maternal prospects of this particular one.

He went straight to the nest to lift her off, and reached out his hand for that purpose, but immediately drew it back again and tucked it up under the other arm, and squeezed it a little, while he drew up his lips as if about to whistle something. Then he stood there and stared at the hen, and she lifted up her head and stared back at him, winking her eyes with singular velocity.

"Get off, won't you?" said he after a pause.

She made no response. He drew out his hand and looked at a red spot on one of the knuckles, and then put the knuckle in his mouth to cool it, looking all the while at the hen, and wondering how on earth she moved so quickly. The longer he eyed her, the less inclined he felt to touch her, and finally he climbed up a post to a beam which ran over the nest, and working his way out till he got just above the hen, took off his hat and shook it at her and advised her to get off. But she only looked up at him one eye at a time, and clucked ominously. He told her if she didn't leave he'd come come down there and kick her through the barn, but immediately gave up the bloodthirsty design when he reflected that it was a dumb animal and couldn't reason like a human being. Then he happened to think of his pantaloons, which were white linen, and rubbed his fingers on the beam to find them full of black dust, which led him to work his body around to look at his pantaloons, and while making this very natural move he suddenly slipped, made a plunge to renew his hold, shrieked for help, slipped again, and then came down on top of the hen and the nest, smashing them both to the floor, upsetting a barrel, and filling the air with, dust, feathers, hen-noises and shrieks. When the family reached the barn the unfortunate man, looking something like a circus-poster on legs, had got on his feet, and was turning around and rubbing his head in an abstracted manner, and every time he turned around an omelet on a white linen base came to view, while the hen stood up in the farthest corner on one leg, with a look of mingled astonishment and reproach on her countenance. After five minutes industrious application with a chip, the gentleman was escorted into the house, where his head was bathed with spirits and his comfort generally attended to.—Danbury News.

MR. GLADSTONE has published another pamphlet, in which he maintains that the conduct of the Porte towards the authors of the Bulgarian outrages is a distinct encouragement to a repetition of the horrors, and that united Europe should at least impose such restraints on Turkish administration as all Europe has declared indispensable. The proposal to grant Turkey a year of grace simply means another year of debasement and misery of Turkish subjects. Mr. Gladstone concludes: "I ask England to redeem the pledges given by the Crimean war to the subjects of Turkey."

PACKARD'S Legislature is gradually leaving him, and the probability is that the work of disintegration will go on more rapidly, as the prospect of Packard's recognition wanes.—Louisville Commercial, April 3d.

WE often hear of a man being in advance of his age, but who ever heard of woman being in the same predicament.

Excitement the Stimulus of Business.

There are numerous classes of men who live almost entirely upon excitement. In a calm dispassionate flow of life and business they are stupid and powerless; but stir up the placid sea until it surges with violence, and they are then ready with a mission, armed and equipped for the toil of life. Such minds are the martyrs of this age of enlightenment—the life they lead is a consuming one, and vitality is spent with a prodigality more than heroic. The requirements of business are making this method of living more imperative, and without it success is beyond a reach. Half a century since, the rivalries now experienced in all departments of human industry were then unknown. A new order of mind and new energies are called into requisition. The business man of the last generation would hardly be recognized by the prevailing caste. Flesh and blood are capable of enduring many hardships, but the delicate organization, its accompaniment, breaks down at the length under the incessant tension. Disregarding the friendly premonitions of temporary illness, the exhausted mind holds on its work by the necessary and agreeable stimulus of fresh excitements, until a sunden reaction crushes its vigor, and then comes on the weakness, satiety, and sorrow of hopeless infirmity.

It is not without a shade of melancholy that we notice in almost every daily journal the record of a faltering in the ranks of business men. This successful merchant or manufacturer has impaired his health by overwork, which means too much nervous excitement, and he starts for Europe in the hope of building up his health on a broken foundation. Another professional man is aroused from his dreams of ambition with the frightful conviction that phthisis has fastened its deadly grasp upon his vitals, and the grim image of weakness and decay hence-forward fill his vision. There has been an alarming increase of disease within a few years, having its origen in the causes we have named, and the effect of it should be to produce greater moderation. What if the profits are less? They can be continued longer and life made happier.

There is no necessity for this waste of life—it is a sheer delusion, the effect of a foolish ambition. Better accept the heritage of poverty or a moderate success than the infallible necessity of an early disease.

Our Paper Currency.

The issues of National bank notes for the month of March were $1,979,-100, of which eighty per cent., viz., $1,583,280 in greenbacks were destroyed, leaving the outstanding legal-tender circulation $362,656,204. The Comptroller of the Currency says the above issue is the largest amount of additional circulation paid out during any month for the past two years, and that about two-thirds of the amount was reissued to banks which had previously retired their circulation and taken up their bonds. The amount of National Bank circulation outstanding on January 14, 1875, was $351,000,000. The act of that date authorized the issue of circulating notes without limit, subject to existing laws, and also provided that an amount equal to eighty per cent. of the additional bank notes issued should be retired if legal-tender notes. Since that date $57,000,000 of National Bank notes have been retired and surrendered, and $24,000,000 of additional circulation issued, making a total decrease of $33,000,000 of National Bank notes, the amount now outstanding being $318,000,000. If the amount of legal-tender notes on deposit for the purpose of retiring National Bank notes, amounting to $16,000,000, be deducted from the amount of National Bank notes now outstanding, it will leave $302,000,000, which is but slightly in excess of the $300,000,000 authorized by the National Bank act of June 3, 1874. The total amount issued under the act of January 14, 1875, to date was $24,-179,745, eighty per cent. of which, or $19,343,796 in legal-tender notes, has been retired by the Secretary of the Treasury, leaving the amount of legal-tender notes now outstanding $362,-656,204. The Comptroller says that considerable amounts of doubtful paper, of which, however, a greater or less proportion may reasonably be expected to be recovered in future, are being charged to the accumulated surplus of the National Banks.

Commodore Vanderbilt's Heirs.

There has been a great deal of curiosity lately as to the terms of the settlement made by Wm. H. Vanderbilt with the other members of the family. It was generally believed that some sort of understanding had been arrived at by which their portions, as set down in the will, should be enlarged; but no definite information could be obtained as to either the facts or the amount. It has now transpired that within the past week Mr. Wm. H. Vanderbilt has settled with three members of the family, doubling the amounts which they would have received by the terms of the will. This gives a round million to each. Similar arrangements have been with the other members of the family, and it is understood that the amounts due will be paid over before the close of the present week.

A LAMENT.

So woebegone a gentleman
I'm sure you never knew;
I am a wretch that has not got
A single thing to do.

I never drink—for I have not
A grain of sense to spare;
I never smoke—poor earthly joy,
It all dissolves in air.

I never swear—I reckon that
The stupidest of sins;
I will not game—I've naught to lose,
And no one ever wins.

I can not swim—my system has
A tendency to cramp;
I never sail—lest getting drowned
Does always strike so damp.

I will not skate—besides, in June,
I could not if I chose;
I take no snuff—for truly mine
Is not a hungry nose.

I can not study—for my head's
The worst of throughfares;
I never hunt—I hold my life
Worth thirty thousand bares.

I never shoot—my poulter's boy
Does all that dirty work;
I hate all politics—the Greek,
The Russian and the Turk.

I can not talk from morn till night—
What have I got to tell?
Nor hear my neighbor—better lodge
Next door to old Bow Bell.

I never dance—what! bob my legs
And bounce about the floor?
I never sing—a singing man's
A nuisance and a bore.

I play no fiddle—squalls and squeals
Will not repay one's labors;
Nor whining flute—what right have I
To tantalize my neighbors.

I can't compose—I can not see
Where lies an author's bliss;
Compose! why, bless my foolish pen!
Just only look at this!

MY BRIEF ROMANCE.

CHAPTER I.

THE VISIT TO THE ASYLUM.

Having a comfortable competence, on the death of my father, I had not gone into any business, but had built a neat little cottage on the steep hill just above our small city, and settled myself as a gentleman of leisure. It so happened that my ornamental grounds and flower-pots were bordered and bounded on one side by a brick wall of some fifteen feet high, which surrounded the lands of the State Lunatic Asylum.

I sometimes visited the institution with friends who, from benevolence or curiosity, wished to converse with the patients, and I was often struck with the singular mixture of wisdom and absurdity in the statements and ideas of these various inmates.

On one occasion the pastor of the church of which I was a member conceived the idea that the delusions of insanity could be reasoned away. He was an enthusiast on all subjects which engaged his attention, and, fully mounted on this new hobby, he came for me to go over and witness its practical results.

The resident physician gave ready permission to try the experiment, and, while we were conversing, a subject presented himself in the form of a mild monomaniac. He was a tall, slender and fine-looking man, who wandered at will through the buildings and grounds and gave no trouble. His one delusion consisted in the fixed belief that he was Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the world.

My clerical friend gave a confidential nod or two to the physician and myself, as a signal to watch his progress, and at once approached the patient. I must confess that I looked on with considerable interest, for he was a good man, and seemed to have faith enough to "move a mountain" or cure a diseased mind. Said he:

"My friend, are you really Christ, the Redeemer?"

"There is no doubt of that, sir?" was the grave reply.

"And have you all power given to you, on earth and in heaven, including that of working miracles and doing wonders, just as Christ had in Judea, long centuries ago?" continued my friend.

"Certainly, sir; my glorified humanity involves that necessity," was the answer.

The good minister looked a little troubled, but braced himself for the final effort, as he continued:

"Now, sir, tell me; would you not like very much to get out of this institution, and go forth in the beautiful world, unrestrained and free?"

"Yes, sir," was the prompt response.

"Well, pay attention to me. Do you not know that if you were the Christ you think you are, that these keepers would be as powerless before you as the guard were before the angels at the sepulchre, and that bolts would draw back, bars melt, and doors fly open at your word?"

I never saw so sad, and yet so resigned, an expression on the human face, as that of the poor man wore when he replied:

"Ah, sir, you have read the garden scene of Gethsemane to little purpose if you do not know that I must ever submit in my will to the interests of the universe. It is evidently the pleasure of my Heavenly Father that I remain."

Tears were in the eyes of the minister, as he took the hand of the other and exclaimed:

"I fear you must remain; but you have taught me a lesson of humble resignation which you, perhaps, did not intend, but which I will always keep."

There was no more effort to combat delusion with reason.

The poor fellow seemed pleased with our interest in him, and when we were going away he walked with us to the great gate. Near the graveled walk a young woman was bending over a rose-bush, and, as I had often seen her before, and had been interested in her youth and beauty, I paused to notice her occupation.

What queer vagary just then got into the head of our crazy companion I can not guess; but he approached the young woman, and, taking her passive hand in his, led her up to me, and joined our hands together, still holding them in the clasp of his own.

As I knew the importance of not contradicting the insane, I did not resist, and he began to talk to us in his calm, beautiful way. Said he:

"When I was here, eighteen hundred years ago, I began my ministration at the marriage in Cana of Galilee, when the modest water owned a present God and blushed itself to wine! Even so this day do I recognize your need of each other, and pronounce you man and wife, by my own authority and that of the Father and the Holy Spirit."

Then, removing his grasp, he raised his hands with strange solemnity and gave us the apostolic benediction.

I was utterly confused and astounded, and when the fair being at my side took it all in earnest, and lifted her face timidly toward mine, I stooped and kissed her, scarce knowing what I did.

Then her hand was withdrawn, and she darted away like a bird.

The doctor looked annoyed as he said:

"That woman is one of our most hopeless cases."

My friend was as nervous as I was, and took my arm with a hurried:

"Come, let us get out of here or they will have us both in straitjackets."

I thought so too, and made no more visits.

CHAPTER II.

THE DEFECT IN THE WALL.

Some weeks had passed, and with the advance of the spring, and the care of the plants I was removing from my hot-house to the open flower-beds, I had almost forgotten the annoying incident. One day, I was standing alone by the massive wall which divided between me and the asylum grounds, when I became aware that someone was tampering with the masonry from the other side. There was a place where one of the supports had gone through the wall at the time the scaffolding for its erection yet remained, and the hole left by its removal had been imperfectly stopped by a brick on each side, put endways into mortar. The lime and brick on the other side had evidently been worked out, and someone was using a stick to punch the hole open on my side. Before I had time to speak, the effort was successful, and there was a small, square opening clear through. I stooped down to look, only to see a pair of dark hazel eyes and a fair, sad face on the other side. It was my crazy bride, by the gift of the maniac who believed himself divine.

As she saw me, she said in a grieved tone:

"Now you have found me out, and will have me locked up."

I protested that I should do no such a thing, but she looked incredulous, and sat down on the grass where I could see her plainly.

She was neatly dressed, and it was evident that she did not belong among the paupers in the care of the State, but was a patient whose relatives paid for the medical care she received. Despite the paleness and melancholy of the face, it was very beautiful, with the long dark fringes of the eyelids sweeping down over the large dark eyes, and the short brown curls clustering over the white brow. The form was a fine one, as revealed by the close-fitting brown dress; and the narrow collar of white linen was the proper margin of the shapely neck, and contrast to the soft tinge of the cheeks.

I asked:

"Will you tell me your name?"

"Maria Damar," said she, without lifting her downcast eyes.

"Were you trying to make a way of escape?" I continued.

She looked up then, and answered quietly:

"No, sir. I would be crazy, indeed, to think of that—but we are so often misjudged. The wall is all solid, save in this one place, and a woman's weak hands can not undo what the builder made so strong. I wished to make an opening, in order to communicate with some kind heart outside, but I see now how hopeless the effort was. I remember you, and when that strange man joined our hands the other day, I looked in your face to see if I could read sympathy and confidence there You mistook my look for the whim of the insane and kissed me. I thank you for the pity, but I wanted a friend."

I was startled and perplexed, but I had seen so much of the people there that I considered myself quite skilled in leading to and developing the delusion which underlay all their cunning, and I began a series of what I considered rather shrewd test questions. She laughed in a pleasant way, and said:

"You are trying to detect my peculiar shade of lunacy, I see. What shall I do to gratify you? Do you expect me to howl to the moon at night, like a sleepless dog? or shall I scream and put my hair in disorder? or do the mild maniac, and sing of my lonely cell? I should be glad to oblige you."

That was, certainly, a damper to my self-conceit and confidence in the management of such cases, and it was with a pretty full conviction of the truth on her side that I replied:

"I don't believe that you are any more crazy than I am."

Steadily she looked in my eyes for a little time, and then said to me:

"You speak, now, like an honest man, and not like the miserable hypocrites who pretend to believe all we say, only to quiet us. If I could once be with you in the open world, where a gentleman doubts his own honor as soon as the word of a lady, I would would talk to you on that subject. But who can credit a statement where law and order and benevolence seem to contradict it, and where it is customary to disbelieve and condemn in advance? You look quite compassionate, but that is so often the mask of incredulity.

I did not know what to say, and thought best to temporize. So I said:

"Your words astonish and pain me, and I need time for consideration. I know that there are insane people where you are, but you may be a victim. If you say so, I will meet you here to-morrow, at this time, and talk with you fully of the matter."

She arose and answered:

"Is that the word of a gentleman, to be kept, or the way to put off a crazy woman?"

"A gentleman's word of honor, madame!" said I, with as graceful a bow as was possible before the little square hole.

"I will be here," answered the voice again, and she was gone.

I must confess that the affair was becoming as pleasant as it was perplexing, and my first step was to go to my highest window on that side and see what the probabilities of discovery would be on the morrow. To my great satisfaction, I saw that the most dense of the ornamental evergreens of the asylum lot formed a tangle of serpentines just at that point, and that the dampness and shade under the cedars and arbor-vitæ would keep the spot unfrequented until warmer weather.

I walked down into the city to take the advice of my pastor in the matter, but did not do it, and only called at a carpenter's shop to look at his assortment of ladders, instead.

I had no definite intentions, but I was remarkably well pleased with myself. I had always been of a somewhat romantic turn, and what could be more delightful than to become the fairy prince of the story books, and rescue the imprisoned damsel from the grim castle of the giant Civilization?

I lay awake all that night, thinking over the matter in every form—sometimes convincing myself that I was the dupe of a crazy woman, and yet hoping that I was not.

How the Telephone Operates.

As the telephone, the new invention of Professor A. Graham Bell, is but little understood, the following reprint of a description and an explanation of the instrument may not be amiss: The telephone in its present form consists of a powerful compound, permanent magnet, to the poles of which are attached ordinary telegraph coils of insulated wire. In front of the poles, surrounded by these coils of wire, is placed a diaphragm of iron. A mouthpiece to converge the sound upon this diaphragm substantially completes the arrangement. The motion of steel or iron in front of the poles of a magnet creates a current of electricity in coils surrounding the poles of the magnet, and durations of current of electricity coincides with the duration of the motion of the steel or iron moved or vibrated in the proximity of the magnet. When the human voice causes the diaphragm to vibrate, electral undulations are induced in the coils environing the magnets precisely analogous to the undulations of the air produced by that voice. These coils are connected with the line wire, which may be of any length, provided the insulation be good. The undulations which are induced in these coils travel through the line wires, and passing through the coils of an instrument of precisely similar construction at the distant station are again resolved into air undulations by the diaphragm of this instrument.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

It is said that Hayes is postponing his foreign appointments till he can learn who are and who are not his friends. This is a mistake. If he delays much longer he'll have more appointments than he can fill—with his friends.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

DENYING a fault doubles it.

THE cradle is the first rock we strike in the voyage of life.

A MILLION trees are to be planted in Michigan this year.

OLD maids go by the name "wilted lilies," now. Pretty, isn't it?

ALTHOUGH a woman's age is undeniably her own, she does not own it.

PRAYER is a shield to the soul, a sacrifice to God and a scourge to Satan.

WHY is a lady's belt like a garbage cart? Because it goes round and gathers in the waist.

BLUE glass, smashed up fine and administered internally, will cure a dog—of sheep killing.

SOME people are very correct; you can never discover fault in them, but they never amount to much.

"CHANGE CARS!" is what a bootblack said to a countryman the other day when he had finished one of his brogans.

THE man with a wooden leg has one advantage over most of us. He don't have to take but one flat iron up to bed with him.

A personal editor, two shot-guns and a flour sack of assorted type, is said to complete the outfit of a Black Hills newspaper office.

A CORRESPONDENT writes, asking for a "remedy for an apple-tree worm." How can we prescribe until we know what is the matter with the worm?

BALD-HEADED men are nonumerous in Chicago that an audience in that city is said to look, when viewed from above, like a cobble-stone pavement.

THE country singing-schools are closing up their affairs, and the young man who hasn't settled the question with her will have to hold over until another winter.

"TAKE notice that when this post is out of sight it is not safe to pass this road," was the intelligent warning placed on a spot in a road in Cambridgeshire, England, very liable to be flooded.

"MADAM, did you ever lift a dog by the tail?" "Why, no, you cruel thing, you!" I didn't know, be cause I just saw you carry your child across the gutter by one arm. A dog's tail is a good deal stronger than the ligament of a baby's shoulder."

THEY are enjoying picnics down in Georgia, and, while we are taking stitches around the arm-holes of our dilapidated ulsters, the youth of that favored Commonwealth are removing grass-stains from the impinging portion of their pantaloons.

THE Suspension Bridge at Niagara Falls is reported, after a thorough examination, to be entirely safe. Out of 1,450 wires constituting the four largo cables, only 10 of the minor ones were found corroded, and they have been replaced by new ones. No time has yet been set for resumption of traffic, as a formal examination by practical engineers will soon be made.

"A CHILDREN'S Carnival for the benefit of sick children," is another of the sham charities of the day. Charity balls, dancing for the poor and all devices of the sort, are merely substitutes for benevolence. There is not a grain of charity in them, and ten thousand balls, carnivals and tea-parties for the poor will will not win a smile from Him who said, "Feed my lambs."

"WHAT'S your name?" asked a census taker. "John Corcoran." "Your age?" "Twenty-one." "What nativity?" "Well, that's what bothers me. I'll tell you, and maybe you can make it out. My father was Irish, but is now a naturalized American citizen. My mother was English, and I was born on Dutch frigate, under the French flag, in Turkish waters. Now, how is it?"

A Methodist minister of Tennessee has written to Mr. Key that he thinks a great many of Grant's appointees have been in long enough and ought to be willing to retire. He says he would like something good—don't care about a post office, but thinks a trip abroad would be pleasant and beneficial. He closes by saying. "I would prefer one of the following consulates—Liverpool, London, Rio Janeiro or Jerusalem."

POPULAR suffrage has been put to a novel test in the village of Awa, Japan, which was harassed by a midnight robber whom nobody could detect. The head of the hamlet summoned the entire male population under his charge, and directed every man to write the name of the person whom he suspected and to deposit the ticket in a box. Fifteen ballots bore the name of Abo Tanthei, the rest being blanks. The distrusted man was so overcome with astonishment that he made a full confession and went to prison.

Announcements.

WE are authorized to announce Dr. S. S. SCOTT as a candidate for State Senator, subject, however, to the action of the Democratic party.

WE are authorized to announce Capt. L. C. NORMAN as a candidate for State Senator, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

WE are authorized to announce GRANVILLE V. ROUSE as a candidate for the office of Representative in the Legislature for the ensuing term.

WE are authorized to announce GEO. W. TERRILL as a candidate for the Legislature, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

WE are authorized to announce REUBEN CONNER, Esq. as a candidate for the Legislature, subject to the Democratic party.

WE are authorized to announce JAS. L. HENDERSON as a candidate for the Legislature.

AT a meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee for Boone County, held in Burlington on the 16th inst., it was ordered that, for the purpose of choosing a Democratic candidate for the Legislature and a candidate for the State Senate for this Senatorial District, a Primary election be held on the last Saturday before the first Monday in July next.

That a poll be opened at the place of holding the regular election in each precinct on the day above mentioned, at 6 a. m. and kept open till 7 p. m.

That no person shall be allowed a vote unless he has identified himself with the Democratic party, or (never having voted) will pledge himself to support the nominee of the convention.

That the names of the candidates for both offices shall be on the poll-books, and at the same time a voter votes for Representative he shall vote for the number of delegates his district is entitled to under the rule hereinafter laid down.

That the delegates chosen in the several districts shall meet in the Court-house in Burlington on the 2nd day of July 1877 at 1 p. m. and cast the pro rata vote of their districts, the candidate receiving a majority of all the votes cast by the delegates to be the nominee of the Democratic party for the office of County Representative.

That, after the first ballot, the hindmost candidate be dropped after each ballot till a ballot results in a nomination.

That the vote for Senator shall be cast, at the Primary election, directly for the candidates for said office, the delegates to be chosen only in the matter of candidates for the Legislature.

That the clerks of the election in each precinct shall foot up and certify the result of the vote cast and the names of the persons chosen as delegates.

That the clerk, immediately upon the closing of the polls, and in the presence of the judges, make out his certificate and seal it and the poll-book in the same package which he shall deliver to the County clerk by 10 a. m. the second day of July 1877.

That each district shall be allowed, in selecting delegates to send to the convention to nominate a candidate for the State Legislature, one delegate for every 50 votes cast for Tilden and Hendricks and one for every 25 or fraction over 25.

The following is the vote cast for Tilden and Hendricks in the several districts in the county, and upon which the number of delegates to which each district is entitled in the convention, is based:

PACKARD has not been bounced yet. The Commission sent to New Orleans to look into the matter, do not get along rapidly enough to satisfy the Republicans there. A committee waited upon the Commission the other day, and urged them to say which of the claimants should be recognized. Packard's Legislators are still deserting and going over to the Nicholls Legislature.

WADE HAMPTON now occupies the Gubernatorial chair unmolested. He now has the undisputed title to the Governorship of South Carolina.

THE New York Sun, of the 14th inst, says: "It is something to say in favor of Daniel H. Chamberlain that he spurned—as he surely did—the bribe of a foreign mission offered him by the wonderful civil service reformer who now occupies the White-House. It tends to dispose one to doubt the scandals against Chamberlain when we see him rise superior to the allurements of lofty official position set before him by Hayes. Chamberlain, today, enjoys deservedly much more of the respect of the country than falls to the lot of Hayes."

LAST week we received word to announce Capt. Geo. W. Terrill as a candidate for the Legislature just as we were locking up the forms to go to press. The Captain is well known through the county, and has heretofore represented Boone in the General Assembly to the entire satisfaction of the people. Mr. Terrill will make a strong race, and with all the other good material now in the field, we anticipate a lively campaign, but at the same time, one that will be conducted on high principles.

THE Louisville Commercial thinks if Mr. Blaine or anybody else proposes to make a row about the Southern question when Congress meets, the sooner said question is gotten out of the way the better. That is the question the entire country demands settled, and until it is done neither party will have any faith in the Hayes Administration.

THE war cloud in the east is rapidly thickening. Austria is desirous of assuming defensive neutrality, but it is thought she will not occupy this attitude any length of time. The English papers say there was never such a popular war; the war feeling of the people is intense, there being no excitement over the matter.

THE burning of the Southern Hotel, a six story building in St. Louis, last week, was a horrible affair. Several lives were lost, but the exact number is not known. This destruction of life by fire is another illustration of the great need of more than the ordinary means of exit from these large buildings in the time of danger.

THE receipts of new tobacco for the past week have been light, but the market was strong during the entire week. Mason County tobacco brought from $5@14. New Owen County tobacco sold for prices ranging from $3 85@16. Pendleton County, $2 80@10. Boone County, $3 15, $6 35, $8 and $8 75 in hhds.

IN a day or two, two hundred employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing will be dismissed. This dismissal will, at the end of the month, be followed by an additional dismissal of two hundred more, thus reducing the force in that department, in one month, four hundred.

HAYES has signified his intention to fill no more important offices until after the meeting of Congress.

LETTER FROM TEXAS.

TARRANT COUNTY, TEXAS, April 3.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

I am greatly relieved to hear indirectly of the whereabouts of "our venerable friend," F. Smith, and, since hearing, am almost confirmed in my conjectures that he is planning an egging campaign, to come off over on the Peninsula, in company with some of those "angelic" egg hunters whom he has so glowingly described. When will we have another piece from him?

My regrets that I am not in Boone to stand to Mr. Henderson, of Gunpowder, in his race. I appoint Cy Crisler to act for me. Now, Cy, see to it that friend Henderson has fair play and fair count. Have him to stump the county from South Fork to Elijah Creek, from Walton to Aurora, and if he should happen to "deaden over the line," it matters not; but on every stump let him call G. V. Rouse out on the stock law, the road law, the fish law, and every other law that modern legislation has foisted upon the people, taking away their "rights" and "liberties"—yes, the local option and the dog law—and my word for it, the sonorous voice of friend Henderson will, next winter, chime in happy unison with that of "Col. Preston, of Trimble," in Kentucky's legislative halls.

Grasshoppers are plentiful here. They have destroyed some late fields of wheat and all the early gardens. The more forward fields of wheat are beyond their reach.

The first corn was planted here the last week in February, but the bulk of it not until the middle of March. This is about the usual time to begin to plant cotton, but this work will be delayed on account of the hoppers, the departure of which, older citizens tell us, will take place as soon as they get wings sufficient to carry them.

Peach and apple trees are loaded with fruit, though there are but few trees of the latter in the country.

Farmers are beginning to work their corn. Expect to plow mine the first time next week; on "bedding" land for cotton this. By "bedding" is meant throwing four narrow furrows together, in the center of which a shallow furrow is run, in which the seed are strewn by hand or by horse drill, leaving the rows from three to three and one-half feet apart. After the cotton is of sufficient size, it is thinned in the row by "chopping out," leaving the stalks from eight to twelve inches apart.

This leaves it all with [illegible] B. HUEY.

To hold the head so that the sun will shine on it and pass the hand between the head and the sun, the hand can be distinctly seen; even the fingers can be designated.

—The prisoners in our jail have a regular organized court. As soon as a new prisoner is lodged with them, they hold court, and always manage to convict him of something and fix his punishment at from ten to twenty severe lashes, powerfully executed by the Sheriff, an old Irishman, with a leather strap. As soon as the new inmate is thus initiated, as they term it, he is then admitted into the court and is ready to practice on the next poor unfortunate.—Somerset Reporter.

Hite, of this city, has a wine glass that had been in the Dills family of Harrison County, for about 120 years, and has been used at several wedding feasts.—Paris True Kentuckian.

—At half past one o'clock yesterday morning, two convicts, Joe Wilson alias Sanders, of Louisville, and Geo. Young, of Covington, made their escape from the Penitentiary, by cutting through the roof of the cell-house and lowering themselves to liberty by means of a rope. It seems they were missed at roll-call on Sunday evening, but it was believed they were hiding in the yard, and large fires were built and kept up during the night to prevent any attempt to scale the walls. This was the natural theory, as it was not supposed possible for them to reach the open space over the cells during daylight, and in the presence of the cell-keepers and guards who were constantly passing. Exactly how it was managed is not known, but it is certain that they went through the roof, and are at large.—Frankfort Yeoman Apr. 17.

ALL of the candidates, except Mr. Henderson, were in town Monday. Buttonholing was lively, as a matter of course.

WE were compelled to slight some of our exchanges again last week. The rapid growth of our subscription list was the cause.

THE slander suit between Mr. Cave Clore and Dr. R. Kirtley was not allowed to go into court, it being compromised before court convened.

WE like to see the number of dwellings in our town increase, but when a house is fitted up in the center of the town for a negro quarters, that desire at once disappears.

WE made our first excursion on the new turnpike Friday. We took passage on the hurricane deck of a horse, and were surprised to see that the work had progressed so rapidly.

WE note the death of Mr. Thomas Huey, a wealthy citizen of the Big Bone neighborhood. He died last Monday night from an attack of paralysis which came on him the Sunday before.

SEVERAL fine horses were on exhibition, Monday. Among those attracting much attention, was the Young Denmark belonging to Mr. John D. Norris, of Petersburg. He is, beyond a doubt, a charmer.

THE sale of the personal estate of Mr. A. B. Parker, will take place at his residence near Petersburg on the 20th inst. Stock, farming implements and household and kitchen furniture make up a portion of the list of articles to be sold.

THERE was but a small acreage of wheat sown in the county last fall, but it now looks well on both bottom and hill land. The uncommonly large quantity of snow that lay on the ground during many weeks was the saviour to the wheat.

WHEN the "Literary" met last week, the order made at the last meeting, adjourning the body sine die, was reconsidered and rescinded. The society, after the mature deliberation of the members, was considered in too good health to be allowed to die at this early day. The continuance of the meetings is due, in great part, to the able speech made by Judge Foster, who opposed the sine die adjournment. After it was decided not to discontinue the society, a challenge from the Farmers' Literary Society was read by the Secretary. After some wind skirmishes, the society voted to accept the challenge, which our readers will remember we published last week. The four resident lawyers were appointed disputants on the part of the Burlington society, the Courthouse being chosen as the place and the evening of the 2d of May the time. The programme for the evening was then taken up, and was as follows: Essays by Miss Hettie Kirkpatrick, Miss Augusta Kirkpatrick and Mrs. Mary McKim; instrumental music, "Siegel's Grand March," by Miss Fannie Rice; declamations by David Blythe, Eddie Duncan and H. C. Trimble; and reading by Prof. Youmans. The question discussed was, "Affirmed, That the sale of intoxicating liquors should be prohibited by law." Prof. Thos. H. Stephenson and C. C. Conner affirmed, and Prof. Youmans and W. L. Riddell denied—John T. Craven, W. F. McKim and M. T. Garnett, Judges. Decision in favor of the negative. The meeting then adjourned in peace and harmony.

THE COURTS.

Circuit Court.

Monday was the day upon which the spring term of the Boone Circuit Court convened. Judge Drane arrived about 11 a. m. but did not open court till afternoon. The juries impaneled are as follows:

JURY NO. 1.

The first case called for trial was Gen. John Wallace vs. Joe C. Jenkins, &c. The Plaintiff claimed $399 balance of fee of $1,575 for copying the record in the Bounty Fund case when sent to the Court of Appeals. The jury gave a verdict for $200.

The Judge ordered a rule against the Justices of the county, requiring them to appear in the Circuit Court next Saturday, (the 6th day), to show cause why they refuse to execute the judgment of said court in the Bounty Fund case.

L. H. Dills, Commissioner, presented and acknowledged deeds in the divisions of the lands of Thos. Roberts and Rhoda Aylor. Deeds approved and ordered recorded.

Geo. W. Sleet was appointed administrator of the estate of Wm. McRoberts.

SPECIAL TERM, APRIL 16, 1877.

I. A. Loder qualified as Justice of the Peace, to fill the office vacated by the death of J. N. Early.

Wm. Watts resigned as Processioner for Boone County, and Milton Gaines was appointed in his stead.

The Babies.

There was quite collection of prospective belles and beaux on exhibition in the Odd Fellows' Hall, in Covington, on last Friday and Saturday evenings. These specimens of the rising generation were principally of the Covington collection, there being but few from other places. They all appeared to be on their good behavior, the whole exhibition making not more noise than two ordinary babies generally make. But then it must be remembered that they had been under training for some time, knew just how to carry their heads, just how far to step and the attitude to assume when standing. It was a pretty well trained set of youngsters. The appearance of many of the little chaps on exhibition showed that in their veins is the blood of imported stock, and that not many generations since the importation was made.

This baby show was the "biggest" thing of the kind ever known in the history of Covington, and it was decided a success, and especially by those that led away the successful competitors.

NOTES.

Colonel Milt. Hamilton took in the baby show, but the Colonel had not as many shares of stock in the show as he has in the turnpike.

Uncle Bill Sayres, of the Commonwealth, was there, and was highly pleased at the prospect for taking subscriptions from the youngsters when grown.

Dr. J. J. Dulaney was taking a view of the little ones; a wig was seen hanging out of the pocket in his coat tail—the Dr. was a Judge.

The prizes were all awarded, including the one for the ugliest baby, and none of the Judges brought to grief.

Personal Mention.

JOE WAGSTAFF, Esq., of Florence, was on the docket this week.

MISS LOUISA SOUTHGATE, of Walton, visited friends at this place last week.

MR. J. F. BLYTHE has been experiencing much pain from rheumatism for some time.

DR. L. C. COWEN drove in Monday evening and gave his many friends a hearty hand shaking.

MR. MARCUS COLLINS, of Ludlow, visited this community last week. Mark looks "as fine as a fiddle."

MRS. MATILDA WALTON, wife of J. H. Walton, has been suffering for several days with a carbuncle.

MASTER BUDDIE SMITH is again at his post in the RECORDER Office. The inhalation of Hoosier breezes had quite a recuperating effect on him.

MONDAY, C. W. Riddell, of Williamstown, was on our streets "smolin'" his smiles. Charley was so anxious to see Burlington, that when he and his comrade went to the stable at home to hire a horse and buggy, Charley told his friend to get the rig and he would walk on.

ALL the candidates for the offices of State Senator and Representative will address the people in Burlington on the 1st Monday in May, (Court day), and on the Saturday following at Union. Let there be a good attendance to hear them at each place.

THE farmers are slightly busy for the candidates to attack. They are all in the field, but for other purposes.

THERE is an almost constant stream of hands going to and coming from the work on the turnpike.

Tributes of Respect.

SPEEDWELL GRANGE NO. 487, }
BOONE CO., KY., March 12, 1877. }

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Great Master to remove from our midst our respected Sister, Pauline Conrad,

Resolved, That, although we can not understand why, in the dispensation of an All-wise Providence, she was called away, yet we bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well.

Resolved, That although our Sister is gone, and the places that knew her here on earth shall know her no more forever, yet shall her memory ever remain fresh in our hearts; and may her fidelity to the Grange so stimulate us to act and live that when our labors here on earth are ended, we may meet her again in the Order above, where parting is no more.

Resolved, That our charter be draped in mourning for thirty days; that these resolutions be placed on the minutes of the Grange, and a copy be sent to the Cincinnati Grange Bulletin and Burlington RECORDER for publication.

MRS. ANNIE E. CRISLER,
MRS. SARAH W. CRISLER,
MRS. M. C. UNDERHILL,
Committee.

THE following resolutions of respect were passed by the order of I. O. O. F. at Petersburg, as a tribute to the memory of J. N. Early, deceased:

WHEREAS, by the hand of Death our beloved brother, Past Grand J. N. Early, has been removed from our midst and transplanted from this world of care and suffering to one of lasting life,

Resolved, That, in mourning his loss, we deeply feel the impossibility of filling the place in our midst so lately made vacant.

Resolved, That during his membership of twenty-four years in our lodge, he has ever been a most worthy brother and faithful member.

Resolved, That, as an officer of our Lodge, in each one of it various offices, he has ever shown a kindly zeal in the discharge of his official duties.

Resolved, That our sympathies as a Brotherhood extend to and include the friends and family of our beloved Brother in this sad bereavement.

Resolved, That we wear the customary badges of mourning for thirty days.

By order of the Lodge.

CYRUS SCHRADER, Secretary.

THE following resolutions are from Excelsior Grange—a tribute to the memory of Harrison Booth:

WHEREAS, In the wise dispensation of Almighty God, it has pleased Him to remove from our midst by death our much esteemed Brother, Harrison Booth, who died at his home, in Boone County, Ky., April 2, 1877,

Resolved, That while we deeply lament his death, we meekly bow to the dictates of God; and that we recognize in his death that the Order has lost a true Patron and Excelsior Grange a faithful and devoted member, the community an honest, peaceable citizen, and his family a kind husband and parent.

Resolved, That while our hearts are saddened by this event, and a gloom cast over our Grange and neighborhood, we are not unmindful that it becomes us humbly to submit to the will of God, for He doeth all things well.

Resolved, That we tender our sincere sympathies to the bereaved family and relatives of the deceased in their sorrow and affliction.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon our records and a copy furnished to the family of the deceased, and also to the Boone County RECORDER, Cincinnati Grange Bulletin and the Commonwealth for publication.

J. W. WOODWARD,
O. F. GLACKEN,
L. W. LASSING,
Committee.

AT Mt. Pleasant Grange, April 7th, 1877, Wm. Watts said:

I arise, Brothers and Sisters, to pay a last tribute of respect to the memory of our late Brother John T. Riley. He died at home March 23d, 1877, in the 68th year of his age, having followed the pursuits of agriculture the greater part of his life, which proved to him a success. He was buried by the members of our Order at Bullittsburg Cemetery. The [illegible] was [illegible] the vicissitudes of life—in all the changing scenes from youth to manhood, from manhood to mature age—and for more than half the period of life allotted man we were [illegible] by the ties of an unceasing friendship; and, as we are all our members, it is a consolation to know that friends, wife and children all contributed to cheer and mitigate his sufferings in the last days and hours of his life. There is no place, to those who suffer, like home—no hand to minister, no voice to cheer like that of an affectionate wife. Stricken with a disease which baffled all medical skill and defied the affectionate care of wife and friends, on the 23d of March, without a struggle, his spirit took its flight to the better land. We shall not see his manly form move up and down this hall again. We shall hear his voice no more. We followed him to the grave, where we met brethren, neighbors and friends gathered sorrowfully around his bier to pay their last tribute—there to gaze for the last time upon that form, once so full of life and action. But it was cold and motionless. His eye, which had so often beamed upon us, was rayless and closed. Sadly we bore his remains to the grave, and softly laid them down to sleep until the morning of the resurrection, and "Peace to his ashes" was our prayer. Our brother is gone—gone on to that bourne from which no traveler returns. So we say, Brother, farewell!

Resolved, That this Grange has heard with deep regret the death of Brother John Riley, a member of this Grange, which occurred March 23d, 1877.

Resolved, That, in memory of our deceased Brother, the officers and other members of this Grange wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That the resolutions and preface be entered upon our minutes, and a copy sent to the family of the deceased, also, to the Covington Commonwealth, the Cincinnati Grange Bulletin and the BOONE COUNTY RECORDER for publication.

F. L. GORDON,

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Bulletsville.

E. H. Howard, the Nimrod of Boone, is collecting a menagerie of curiosities. He has a puppy, a ferret, a short-neck pony and a five-legged cow. We understand he is negotiating with Dr. Crisler for his Green River cattle and thin-rind sow, when he proposes to procure the services of a suitable gate-keeper—say Lillard, for instance, and embark in the show-business. Announce him for Burlington the 1st Monday in May.

We hear that our friend, Wm. O. Kirtley, who lives on the Ohio, near North Bend, finds it most convenient when going to Cincinnati to go via. Aurora. What does this mean Billy?

M. T. Graves has a bright new buggy, just from the shop of the Pfalzgraf Bros., Lawrenceburg. This is the last great effort. Ladies of forty summers, take notice.

Bellevue.

The school at this place is now being taught by Miss Ella Baker. At Willoughby, the young idea is being instructed by Miss May Parker, of Rising Sun.

Our debating society is progressing finely. At the last meeting the question discussed was, "Affirmed that foreign emigration should be prohibited." Dr. H. H. Grant and E. L. Grant, jr., affirmed. D. M. Snyder and Orlando Snyder denied—decided in favor of the affirmative. There were also a splendid essay by Miss Susie Arnold and declamations by Lillie and Katie Arnold.

The farmers are about done plowing for corn and are planting potatoes.

Preparations are being made to plant a large acreage of tobacco in this neighborhood.

Last Sunday, our citizens were entertained (?) by a band of marble players that occupied the streets a considerable portion of the day, seemingly indifferent as to the disgusting spectacle such performances on the streets on the Sabbath, present. Boys, engage in something more profitable.

Rabbit Hash.

The tobacco business is quite brisk here now. From two to ten loads per day are received. Dad Yonnell and B. C. Calvert are buying for Ben Calkins.

The farmers are about done planting potatoes, and are busy plowing for corn. There has been some corn planted in this vicinity.

There was a fine lot of hogs shipped from this place last week. Price realized, $5 15 per hundred.

Last Thursday, Mr. Henry Bassinger, of this neighborhood, was married to Miss Sarah Robinson, of Indiana.

Several of our young men attended a social hop at Mr. Solon Rice's, Thursday night, and returned well pleased with the young folks they met.

It is to be hoped that the newly appointed Road Overseers will take more interest in the roads than some did in the past. Some of our roads are in a deplorable condition. The only good road we have leading to this place is under the supervision of James A. Wilson.

We understand that there will be an effort made to build a turnpike from Rabbit Hash to Bellevue, but we are afraid that all that will be made will be the effort.

B. H. Stephens, School Trustee for District No. 19, reports a school-house valued at $25, and 88 white children between the ages of 6 and 20. Of this number there are—

Age.	No.	Age.	No.	Age.	No.
19.....	5	15.....	8	11.....	7
18.....	4	14.....	10	10.....	6
17.....	5	13.....	3	9.....	8
16.....	4	12.....	6	8.....	7

7	5
6	10
7	88

Of this number, 45 are males, and 43 females. What we need is a good school-house.

Milt Kirtley has eight acres of corn planted. Early bird, you know.

What Rabbit Hash needs is a Literary Society; then she will be perfect. Now, forward, young men, and see what you can do for it.

Born—To Gus Ryle and wife, April 7th, a girl. Also, to Mrs. Susan Mitchell, April 10th, a girl. Also, to Zack Kelley and wife, April 11th, a boy. Also, to Rigby Douglass and wife, April 12th, a boy.

Personal—Miss Bettie Goss is teaching school at the Maple Hill "tumble-down" school-house.....Mr. John Smith has rented his farm out, and will move to Cincinnati next week..... Miss Lizzie Hagerty, of Ludlow, Ky., is visiting Miss Millie Perkins.....Miss Annie Streeper has returned from a visit to Ohio.

MICKEY.

Petersburg.

The Returning Board Committee, having examined the law and heard evidence in regard to our late municipal election, have decided not to go behind the returns, but, on the face of the returns one fraudulent vote is found, but it does not alter the result; that there was some intimidation practiced, but that, generally speaking, the election was a fair and impartial one, and must be taken as a full expression of the voice of the people. Long live the Returning Board!

Some men undertook to dig a fox out of his den in a high, steep bank on the farm of Dr. E. L. Grant, last Sunday, but, after working until about 1 o'clock, they gave it up. The fox has been reported as having lived high in two senses of the word, and has all sorts of appetites, for the men found the remains of 14 lambs, 39 rabbits, some rats, 2 quails, several moles, a goose egg, and some chicken feathers in his den, and as they did not get to the bottom, the presumption was that the half was not told.

Our old friend, Capt. G. W. Terrill, has yielded to the pursuasion of his friends at last, and has consented to make the race for the Legislature. The many services he has rendered the people of Boone in various capacities, almost insure his election, and the most of precinct of Pete. will, as usual, be solid for him in the coming race.

It is a cherished prerogative of defeated candidates to cast dark insinuations of imperfection of character into the teeth and over the heads of successful competitors; so now comes Porter to the front with the very fresh bit of news that already three out of five of the newly elected fathers of our city laws, have bought new hats, and upon the heels of this information he wants to know, you know, if the salary and perquisites of the office will justify the expense. All answers to the above inquiry must be addressed to Porter, as he is the one interested in the solution of the little conundrum.

Every lady in town who has the good fortune to have a nice little 8x10 front yard may be seen any fair day now with sun bonnet and apron on, wrong side out, armed with rake, hoe and broom, industriously engaged in laying the aforesaid yard off in the most tasteful and elegant manner, each vieing with the other in their ambition to excel. So now the old boot or shoe, the discarded bones, hoopskirts, hairpins, &c., relics of bygone lash, come sailing over the fence in one long drawn out shower, to the endangering of life to the occasional passerby, and the terror of the little dogs, who go by like a "greasy streak" on three legs, as an old boot hurled by the careless feau comes whizzing over his sinful little head and threatens annihilation.

THE little lambs are skipping about on the green.

TIME TO ME.

Time to me this truth has taught—
'Tis a truth that's worth revealing—
More offend from want of thought
Than from any want of feeling.

If advice we would convey,
There's a time we should convey it;
If we've but a word to say,
There's a time in which to say it!

Many a beauteous flower decays,
Though we tend it e'er so much;
Something secret on it preys,
Which no human aid can touch!

So, in many a loving breast,
Lies some canker-grief concealed,
That, if touched, is more oppress'd;
Left unto itself—is healed.

Oft, unknowingly, the tongue
Touches on a chord so aching,
That a word, or accent wrong,
Pains the heart almost to breaking.

Many a tear of wounded pride,
Many a fault of human blindness,
Had been soothed, or turned aside,
By a quiet voice of kindness.

Time to me this truth has taught—
'Tis a truth that's worth revealing—
More offend from want of thought
Than from any want of feeling.

An English View of American Manufactures.

It is incumbent upon the manufacturers of the United Kingdom to show the world at Paris next year that they have not fallen behind the position they once occupied. The competiton at Philadelphia was not altogether satisfactory to us.

It is true that every nation has an advantage in exhibitions held within its own area; but the products of the industry of the United States surpassed our own oftener than can be explained by this circumstance. It appeared as if there was a greater economy of labor habitually practised in the States, and in conjunction with this there was evidence of the more constant presence of a presiding mind superintending every process of industry. The best machine in the world will fail to give satisfaction if there is not an intelligent human being at hand to watch it, to take care of it, to detect the smallest failure in its working as soon as it is developed, and to suggest and supply the means of correcting any miscarriage of its functions.

A steam engine dropped from heaven in the middle of Africa might be adored, but could not be put to any use. The failure of many of our industrial enterprises in foreign parts can be traced to the difficulty in procuring agents and assistants that can be taught to use the machines committed to their care.

Much of the mechanical work shown at Philadelphia was executed with a fineness that could not have been exceeded if every man who had any share in its production had originally conceived it and had been solely interested in its success. There was evidence of personal care and personal anxiety; every stage must have been watched with intelligence and with zeal. In comparing the results with our own, we are painfully suspicious that they revealed the application of more brains than we always have at our command.—London Times.

It is a bad plan to punish a horse by striking him with a whip every time he shies. Whenever he directs the points of his ears in a certain direction, as though distrustful or afraid, the reins should be pulled in another direction, thus diverting his attention of the animal from his object causing the pertubation. If, on the other hand, force or harsh means are used to compel an acquaintance with the object feared, the horse will be doubly excited, if not unmanegable. In cases of shying or halting at real or fancied objects of danger, stopping the horse and using soothing language answers a very good purpose. If the object is stationary, the horse after a short time will most usually advance in the direction of it, approaching cautiously until satisfied that no danger is to be apprehended, when he will resume his way in a quiet mood. But if chastised for shying, he will have two objects of fear instead of one, and become more confirmed in the habit of distrustfulness.

The position of General Hampton promises to be anything but a pleasant and easy one. Hampton has shown little administrative or business capacity. He is a soaring politician, a genial man, apt at electioneering, with as little appreciation of the great influences and forces which develop society as Mr. Toombs has. General Hampton seems to be sincerely persuaded that he can elevate his State by repeating threadbare party platitudes. He might as well try to build a locomotive by singing "Old Black Joe." There is probably nothing but failure in store for him. The government of a people demands more than blowing a horn or beating a drum.—Louisville Commercial.

Although the Democrats of South Carolina are glad to be rid of Chamberlain, it is curious that not one of them can be found to say aught concerning him, personally, but in the most respectful terms. His associates in the States government are loaded with opprobrium, and vilified in profuse and choice Billingsgate; but all agree that Chamberlain is a gentleman and an honest man.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

About Women.

Here are a few things that men have said for and against women: Hippomax, the Greek, says: "A woman gives her husband two days of happiness—that on which he marries her, and that on which he buries her." Codrus, a Latin writer, says: "There are fewer stars in heaven than trickeries in woman's heart." Chanfort, the French satirist, says: "Marriage follows love, like smoke after fire." Alphonse Karr writes: "The friendship of two women is never more than a plot against a third." Madame de Girardin says: "The rarest thing in France, next to a stupid woman, is a generous one." Shakespeare says: "A woman's fitness comes by fits." Pope's familiar line reads: "Every woman is at heart a rake." Emerson says: "Women see through Claude Lorraines." Rochefoucauld declares: "Women can less easily surmount their coquetry than their passions." Let us take from the mouth the bitter taste left by the foregoing aloes by a few more polite quotations: "There are but two fine things in the world," says Malherbe, "women and roses." Lessing exclaims: "Woman is the masterpiece of the universe." Bourdon says: "The pearl is the image of purity, but woman is purer than the pearl." Thackery writes: "A good woman is the loveliest flower that blooms under heaven." Balzac says: "Even the errors of woman spring from her faith in the good." Voltaire declares: "All the reasonings of men are not worth one sentiment of women." Lamartine asserts that "Women have more heart and more imagination than men." Otway exclaims: "O, woman! lovely woman! Nature made thee to temper man; we had been brutes without you." To which Mark Twain adds, "But for you we should be nothing, for we should not be here."

High Heels and Crooked Shins.

It is worthy of note that while a malignant hatred of Chinese individuality is fomented under cover of hospitality to the immigration, our females have fallen in love with Chinese costumes and customs in some respects, and accepted them as models. The pictures of Chinese ladies to which one has been accustomed for many years bear a close resemblance to the American belle of the present day. The repulsive hump, the crippled feet, and the mincing gait of our women, if they do not fortify the Darwinian theory of the origin of the species from monkeys, at least give the appearance of retrograding monkeyward. The dress, uncouth and deformed as it is, would not itself deserve notice; but the high heels, crippling the feet, and distorting the limbs, are an outrage on grace, on anatomy, on humanity, entitling the authors, could they be detected, to criminal responsibility. A convention of corn doctors in the interest of their trade could not devise a better scheme for good times. Women whose pedals are solidified may escape with only corns, of which we hope and pray they may have a full and tender crop. But that a whole generation of little girls should have their toes jammed into the toes of their boots, to do the work of heels, and that their legs should be thrown out of the natural balance and the pliant bones bent into semi-circles, is a sacrifice to fashion which would disgrace a nation of Hottentots.—Pacific Medical Journal.

A New Rule to Apply in the Appointment of Officers.

In making appointments, the President has adopted a general rule that where an officer has served for four years in a satisfactory manner, the character of his official services will stand as a recommendation for reappointment, unless there be well sustained objections to the personal or moral character of the incumbent. Where, however, an officer has served for eight consecutive years, his period of service will operate against his reappointment, the President holding to the opinion that eight years is the maximum term which a man should be retained in public service, provided an equally competent and meritous person is applicant for the place. This rule is to be specially applied to the appointment of Postmasters whose salaries exceed one thousand dollars per annum, and who are commissioned by the President. The rule will not be applied with the same rigor to Postmasters whose salaries are below one thousand dollars per annum, and who are appointed, under the law, by the Postmaster-General, as to those Postmasters who are commissioned by the President. There are about 1,600 Postmasters who are required by the law to be commissioned by the President and over 38,000 who are appointed by the Postmaster-General.—Washington Special to Indianapolis Journal.

There is a rumor that Mr. Blackburn, of Kentucky, has aspirations for the Speakership. The only objections to gratifying Mr. Blackburn that we can think of are connected with his eloquence. He speaks so well and copiously that if he should take a notion to assign the floor to himself for a few weeks, we do not see what the House could do about it.—Cincinnati Commercial.

It is said that eyes that are brown or dark colored are weaker and more susceptible to injury from various causes than gray or blue eyes. Light blue eyes are generally the most powerful, and next to those are gray. The lighter the pupil the greater and longer continued is the degree of tension which the eye can sustain.

THE LYRE HATH MUSIC STILL.

The lyre hath music still—though love
No longer bids its notes unfold;
Though harsher hands its numbers move
To ruder themes and cold;
Yet is there something in its tone
Which bends not to the coarser will—
A beauty undefined, unknown:
The lyre hath music still.

The hand that once was wont to fling
Enchantment o'er its trembling frame
Is cold; yet will its pathos bring
Remembrance of her name;
Of hers whose gentle fingers taught
Its yielding string their wonderous skill—
A magic yet from memory caught:
The lyre hath music still.

From Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.]

MY BRIEF ROMANCE.

CHAPTER III.

MARIA DAMAR'S STORY.

When the morrow came, I felt that it would be a relief not to see her come at all, or to hear some disjointed story, that would, in itself, put to flight the thought of unlawful detention; and yet I found that the only fear I had was, that the beautiful girl should prove to be not of sound mind.

I was punctually at the appointed place, and had taken care to dismiss my gardener and working force for the day. With equal punctuality she came.

No mental aberration could I detect, and, in the quiet, self-possessed lady who talked to me of her own history, and manifested no excitement save an occasional expression of self-pity, or a slight curl of the lip as she spoke of deceptions sanctioned by law, I could not but recognize a mental equal and a spiritual superior. As St. Paul wishes his judges to be altogether such as he was, "except the chain," so I felt that many whose sanity was never doubted might make a profitable change with her, of all save liberty.

Her story was simply this:

She had been reared from infancy in the family of two people whom she had always called father and mother. She had never been healthy in girlhood, and had been given to somnambulism. Once she remembered that exposure to out-door cold, when she had left her room in this condition, had resulted in convulsions, followed by lethargy. All this gave her the reputation of a queer girl, and paved the way for the result. At thirteen years old she was visiting at a distance from home, and met with a gentleman who became interested in her strong resemblance to a lady he had known, and who asked her many questions. The chance acquaintance resulted in the discovery that the man and woman with whom she lived never had any children of their own, but had taken her on the death of a brother, who was her real father, and of his wife, who was her real mother. These had died suddenly of yellow fever in New Orleans, and the property now held by the uncle and aunt as their own, was the property of her parents, and her own just inheritance.

All this was proven by letters of friendship which her new acquaintance held, and by reference to places of record of deeds to her father, and also of the registry of the marriage of her parents, and of her own birth. Armed with copies of court records and of church registers, the child had returned home and asserted her rights. The result was, that she was subjected to corporal punishment, and all the gossip of the neighborhood was silenced by the assertion that she was of weak mind. The papers were destroyed. Her own conviction of the truth that her parents were dead, and that the claim to her rested only on the avarice of the uncle and aunt, remained unchanged, and she attempted to secure a lawyer to procure justice for her. She also wrote letters to the town where she had been on the visit. These letters were intercepted, and her interviews with the lawyer were detected.

Again and again was she cruelly punished, and confined to her room on bread and water, while all visitors were excluded, and the talo of her mental malady spread wide. Then doctors came and went, women came to talk to her, and shook their heads and went away; and at last she was taken before a court on a formal writ of lunacy. The record of a family Bible was accepted as evidence of her birth. People swore to her parentage from general and current report. Teachers and friends testified that she was "always queer," and by solemn judgment of the jury she was pronounced insane. Then came the journey to the madhouse, her reception by the State as a private patient, to be paid for, and a life of dull monotony which was better than the home she had left, in spite of the bolt and bars, the grated, whitewashed cell, and the company of idiots and mad people.

I listened calmly, and weighed the words carefully. There seemed to be but two weak points in her story.

First. Why did not the gentleman who felt such interest in her as to unvail the mysteries of her birth and childhood, continue this interest to some definite end? And as, in default of interested or disinterested relatives, the law gives the same rights to any one who will claim to be the "next friend," to a minor, why did he not sue her guardians in this capacity?

Second. As the uncle and aunt had no children, and she, as their acknowledged child, would inherit the property from them at all events, what motive could they have to insist on more than the rights of guardians, or dispute a title which, under any circumstances, would ultimately vest in her?

Her reply was, to me, perfectly satisfactory. She said that her friend had neither charged, nor seemed to suspect, any criminal intent on the part of her surviving relatives; but had only blamed them for treating her as a child too long, and withholding facts which she was old enough to know. Her own motives in securing copies of papers, was rather to have a girlish triumph in the unraveling of a well-kept secret, than from much appreciation of its value. Then, they had always been harsh and severe with her, and she thought the paper gave emancipation and safety. Then, too, this kind gentleman was not rich, but only a traveling agent for some great dry goods house, and she had met him in the two weeks' rest which she had in the dull season of Summer. Beyond that season of rest, he might be wandering in almost any section of the Union; and the letters that were intercepted were those of injury after him.

As to the motives of her uncle and aunt, she could only conjecture that if they had really been her father and mother, enjoying property rightfully earned by themselves, such property never could have been taken from them by her while they lived, and even in death they could not divert it from her by will, if they chose. Whereas, if it was hers, and not theirs—hers, not by will of her parents, but as next of blood—they would be be accountable for its use when she came of age, and lose it absolutely in case of her marriage.

It was not yet a question of inheritance, but of possession; and if she should die in a lunatic asylum, the secret was probably buried. Should it escape the grave, they had destroyed no will—the testimony in court was that of others, who were not suborned of purjury, but only mistaken—and the matter of insanity rested on the verity of a record.

I was astounded by her clear views of the case, so logical and concise, and I asked only one more question: "Do you think that the resident physician could have been bribed to take part in this inquiry?"

She replied, decidedly:

"No! He is a gentleman, and could not be bribed, out of a moderate estate. You read of such things in books, but they are only possible in private lunatic asylums, and never in great public institutions. He takes my story as a part and evidence of my malady, and only feels sympathy for the poor parents who are denied by their crazy child. Crocodiles are said to weep, and these wept in court till others cried for sympathy with them."

CHAPTER IV.

THE HOLE UNDER THE WALL.

My only feeling now was shame that I had delayed and hesitated so long in so plain a duty. It would not do to wait, and make it a legal matter, for it would take months to get up the evidence and work it through the tedious machinery of the courts. In the interval, she would still be in the power of her pretended parents, with public opinion and a formal judgment to sustain them; and, even if that hedious mockery of justice, called law, did not grind out her condemnation from its millstones and precedent and form, she might not survive the hope long delayed, and the hourly contact with brains diseased. That I was a young man, who met a young girl, and made a plot through a hole in the wall, was also against me. What had courts to do with romance?

In a few brief words I explained to her that I should accomplish her release, and how. My plan of two ladders was not practical, for all the patients were locked up at night, and an escalade in broad daylight was certain discovery. I would summon my gardener that afternoon, and have a deep hole, with slanting side, dug close to the wall. Then, at night, I would undermine the wall by a narrow tunnel, and trust to the firm cement and the earth at the sides that it would not fill, but stand like an arch, until the patients were let out the next morning for the day. The few who were mild enough to let out at all seldom came that way, as the asylum grounds were large.

She laughed gleefully at the novel idea, and said:

"I am not afraid of holes in the ground, for once while my home troubles were progressing, I was sent for three months to a convent; and while I was there I got permission to go down a new well, in the bucket, with the well-digger."

I remarked:

"The convent was about as safe as the asylum, and I wonder you were not kept there!"

"Ah!" said she, "I expected that, and would gladly have taken the vail; but, then, I could have willed my property to the Church when I came of age."

That was plain enough; but we had talked much too long for safety, and telling her to replace the brick and mortar on her side, as best she could, I did the same on mine.

The trench by the wall was completed to my entire satisfaction, with no unnecessary conjecutres as to its use; and long before daylight in the morning I began my task with pick and spade. The soil was firm, but not stony, and I succeeded in getting a place two feet wide, and as many deep, under the foundation, which did not extend over eighteen inches below the surface. Then, as the moisture of the ground had softened the mortar, I worked out bricks so as to make a triangular opening almost to the surface of the ground; and saw with satisfaction that a slight stamp of the foot on the crust left on the other side would cave it in, and leave the space I wanted.

Then came the hardest task of all—to keep my own servants out of sight of that part of the grounds. I succeeded, by devising some unprecedented errands at unprecedented hours, and had all clear, and yet my gardener within call. Time never seemed so long as when I listened to the sounds from the great brown walls of the State charity, which betokened rising, breakfast, and the opening of doors to the mildly insane. At last came a light foot-step, and I cautioned her of the pit-fall, and how to break in the crust of earth.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Little Things.

A serpent's fang is a little thing, but death is its victory.

A baby is a wee little thing, but a constable was once a baby.

A lap dog is a little thing, but he is a very silly thing besides.

The tongue is a little thing, but it fills the universe with trouble.

A cross word is a little thing, but it is what stirs up the elephant.

A star is a little thing, but it can hold this great world in its arms

An egg is a little thing, but the huge crocodile creeps into life out of it.

A hornet's sting is a little thing, but it sends the schoolboy home howling.

An oath is a little thing, but it is recorded in the great ledger in heaven.

An orange peel on the sidewalk is a little thing, but it has upset many a giant.

A spark is a little thing, but it can light a poor man's pipe or set the world to burning.

A word is a little thing, but one word has been man's a man's destiny for good or for evil.

A kind word is a little thing, but it is just what sootheth the sorrows of a setting hen.

A kiss is a very little thing, but it betrayed the Son of God.

The acorn is a little thing, but the black bear and his family live in the oak that springs from it.

Life is made up of little things. Life itself is but a little thing; one breath less then comes a funeral.

A penny is but a very little thing, but the interest on it from the days of Cain and Abel would buy out the globe.

The Gulf Stream.

The great "river in the ocean," known as the Gulf Stream, from the Gulf of Mexico to the Azores, is three thousand miles in length, and its greatest bredth is one hundred and twenty. At first its speed is four miles an hour; but this gradually declines as it becomes diffused. In the State of Florida its temperature is eighty-three degrees or nine degrees above the surrounding waters; and off Newfoundland, in winter, it is twenty-five or thirty degrees warmer than the neighboring seas, thus causing the dense fogs of that region. It is great dispenser of heat and moisture in its course. To its influence is owing the verdure of the Emerald Isle, and the mildness of the climate of the Western Europe compared with the countries elsewhere of corresponding latitudes. It arrests the chilling Arctic icebergs, which melt away in its tepid waters. It is of a deep indigo blue as long as its current is deep and narrow; and the line of demarkation between it and the adjacent waters is so marked that a vessel may be seen floating one-half in the Gulf Stream and the other in common waters of the sea; and two buckets let down, one at the bow, and the other at the stern, will draw up water differing in temperature by no less than thirty degrees.

"How many genders are there?" asked a schoolmaster. "Three, sir!" replied a little blue-eyed girl, "masculine, feminine and neuter." "Pray give me an example of each," said the master. "Why, you are masculine because you are a man, and I am feminine because I am a girl." Very well, proceed." "I don't know," said the little girl, "but I fancy Mr. Jones is a neuter, as he is an old bach——"

A FINAL report—the crack of doom.

How the Ladies Fish.

There are generally about six of them in the bunch, with light dresses on, and they have three poles, with as many hooks and lines among them. As soon as they get to the river they look for a good place to get down on the rafts, and the most venturesome one sticks her boot-heels in the bank and makes two careful steps down—then suddenly finds herself at the bottom, with both hands in the water, and a feeling that everybody in this wide world is looking at her, and she never tells anybody how she got there. The other girls, profiting by her example, turn round and go down the bank on their hands and toes, backward. Then they scamper over the rafts until they find a shallow place, where they can see the fish, and shout:

"Oh, I see one!"

"Where?"

"There."

"Oh, my! so he is."

"Let's catch him."

"Who's got them baits?"

"You lazy thing; you're sitting on my pole!"

All these exclamations are gotten off in a tone that awakens every echo within a mile around, and sends every fish that hears it into the "galloping hysteries."

Then the girls by suporhuman exertions, manage to get a worm on the hook, and throw it with a splash like the launching of a wash-tup, and await the result. After awhile the feeble-minded sun-fish contrives to get fastened on the hook of a timid woman, and she gives vent to her tongue: "Oh, somethin's got my hook!"

"Pull up, you little goose?" shout five excited voices, as poles and hooks are dropped and they rush to the rescue.

The girl with the bite gives a spasmodic jerk, which sends the unfortunate "sunny" into the air the full length of the line, and he comes down on the nearest curly head with a damp flop that sets her to clawing as though there were bumble-bees in her hair.

"Oh, murder! take it away! Ugh, the nasty thing!"

Then they hold up their skirts and gather about that fish as it skips over the logs, one all the time holding the line in both hands with her foot on the pole as though she had an evil disposed goat at the other end. Then they talk over it:

"How will he ever get off?"

"Ain't he pretty?"

"Wonder if it ain't dry?"

"Poor little thing; let's put it back!"

"How will we get the hook from it!"

"Pick it up," says a girl who dacks rapidly out of the circle.

"Good gracious, I'm afraid of it! Ugh, look there, it's opening its mouth at me."

Just then the "sunny" wiggles off the hook and disappears between two logs in the water, and the girls try for another bite. But the sun comes down and fries the back of their necks, and they get three headaches in the party, and they all get cross and scold at the fish like so many magpies. If an unwary chub dares to show himself in the water they poke at him with poles, much to his disgust.

Finally they get mad all over and throw their poles away, hunt the lunch-basket, climb up into the woods, where they sit around on the grass and eat enough of dried beef and rusks and hard boiled eggs to give a wood-horse the night-mare; after which they compare notes about their beaux till sundown, when they go home and plant envy in the hearts of all of their muslin-de-laine friend, by telling what "just a splendid time" they had.

A JUDGE in Nevada has been using blue glass, and tells a reporter all about it: "It's my deliberate non-judicial opinion that blue glass is a humbug. I've tried it two or three weeks now, and am able to discern no perceptible effect. When the sun shines, that glass up there makes a big blue spot in the center of the room, and I make my wife sit there two hours a day. I thought it would curb her desire for luxuries, fineries and worldly things; but it worked the opposite. After the first week she came in one day and remarked: 'My dear, this blue glass ray is inspiring in my mind an exalted taste for the beautiful. You can take back that $30 bonnet to the milliner's and get that $60 one I was looking at.' Looking at the matter from a scientific standpoint, I was considerably astonished, and am anxious to know what color of glass will counteract the effect of the blue."

WHEN I see a young fellow standing on a corner with a far-away look in his eyes, and a bit of yarn on the first two fingers of his hand, you may be tolerably sure that he has just begun keeping house, and that he is muttering to himself, "Chopping bowl, eggs, clothes line—that's the thumb and first two fingers. Now, what did she want on the other two fingers?"

"JAMIE, why do you not be after getting the life of you insured?" "An' why should I, my honey?" "Ah, indade, that after you are dead and gone you may be sure of a comfortable subsistence for yourself and family."

TIME TO ME.

Time to me this truth has taught—
'Tis a truth that's worth revealing—
More offend from want of thought
Than from any want of feeling.

If advice we would convey,
There's a time we should convey it;
If we're but a word to say,
There's a time in which to say it!

Many a beauteous flower decays,
Though we tend it e'er so much;
Something secret on it preys,
Which no human aid can touch!

So, in many a loving breast,
Lies some canker-grief concealed,
That, if touched, is more oppress'd;
Left unto itself—is healed.

Oft, unknowingly, the tongue
Touches on a chord so aching,
That a word, or accent wrong,
Pains the heart almost to breaking.

Many a tear of wounded pride,
Many a fault of human blindness,
Had been soothed, or turned aside,
By a quiet voice of kindness.

Time to me this truth has taught—
'Tis a truth that's worth revealing—
More offend from want of thought
Than from any want of feeling.

An English View of American Manufactures.

It is incumbent upon the manufacturers of the United Kingdom to show the world at Paris next year that they have not fallen behind the position they once occupied. The competiton at Philadelphia was not altogether satisfactory to us.

It is true that every nation has an advantage in exhibitions held within its own area; but the products of the industry of the United States surpassed our own oftener than can be explained by this circumstance. It appeared as if there was a greater economy of labor habitually practised in the States, and in conjunction with this there was evidence of the more constant presence of a presiding mind superintending every process of industry. The best machine in the world will fail to give satisfaction if there is not an intelligent human being at hand to watch it, to take care of it, to detect the smallest failure in its working as soon as it is developed, and to suggest and supply the means of correcting any miscarriage of its functions.

A steam engine dropped from heaven in the middle of Africa might be adored, but could not be put to any use. The failure of many of our industrial enterprises in foreign parts can be traced to the difficulty in procuring agents and assistants that can be taught to use the machines committed to their care.

Much of the mechanical work shown at Philadelphia was executed with a fineness that could not have been exceeded if every man who had any share in its production had originally conceived it and had been solely interested in its success. There was evidence of personal care and personal anxiety; every stage must have been watched with intelligence and with zeal. In comparing the results with our own, we are painfully suspicious that they revealed the application of more brains than we always have at our command.—London Times.

It is a bad plan to punish a horse by striking him with a whip every time he shies. Whenever he directs the points of his ears in a certain direction, as though distrustful or afraid, the reins should be pulled in another direction, thus diverting his attention of the animal from his object causing the pertubation. If, on the other hand, force or harsh means are used to compel an acquaintance with the object feared, the horse will be doubly excited, if not unmanegable. In cases of shying or halting at real or fancied objects of danger, stopping the horse and using soothing language answers a very good purpose. If the object is stationary, the horse after a short time will most usually advance in the direction of it, approaching cautiously until satisfied that no danger is to be apprehended, when he will resume his way in a quiet mood. But if chastised for shying, he will have two objects of fear instead of one, and become more confirmed in the habit of distrustfulness.

The position of General Hampton promises to be anything but a pleasant and easy one. Hampton has shown little administrative or business capacity. He is a soaring politician, a genial man, apt at electioneering, with as little appreciation of the great influences and forces which develop society as Mr. Toombs has. General Hampton seems to be sincerely persuaded that he can elevate his State by repeating threadbare party platitudes. He might as well try to build a locomotive by singing "Old Black Joe." There is probably nothing but failure in store for him. The government of a people demands more than blowing a horn or beating a drum.—Louisville Commercial.

Although the Democrats of South Carolina are glad to be rid of Chamberlain, it is curious that not one of them can be found to say aught concerning him, personally, but in the most respectful terms. His associates in the States government are loaded with opprobrium, and vilified in profuse and choice Billingsgate; but all agree that Chamberlain is a gentleman and an honest man.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

About Women.

Here are a few things that men have said for and against women: Hipponax, the Greek, says: "A woman gives her husband two days of happiness—that on which he marries her, and that on which he buries her." Codrus, a Latin writer, says: "There are fewer stars in heaven than trickeries in woman's heart." Chanfort, the French satirist, says: "Marriage follows love, like smoke after fire." Alphonso Karr writes: "The friendship of two women is never more than a plot against a third." Madame de Girardin says: "The rarest thing in France, next to a stupid woman, is a generous one." Shakespeare says: "A woman's fitness comes by fits." Pope's familiar line reads: "Every woman is at heart a rake." Emerson says: "Women see through Claude Lorraines." Rochefoucauld declares: "Women can less easily surmount their coquetry than their passions." Let us take from the mouth the bitter taste left by the foregoing aloes by a few more polite quotations: "There are but two fine things in the world," says Malherbe, "women and roses." Lessing exclaims: "Woman is the masterpiece of the universe." Bourdon says: "The pearl is the image of purity, but woman is purer than the pearl." Thackery writes: "A good woman is the loveliest flower that blooms under heaven." Balzac says: "Even the errors of woman spring from her faith in the good." Voltaire declares: "All the reasonings of men are not worth one sentiment of women." Lamartine asserts that "Women have more heart and more imagination than men." Otway exclaims: "O, woman! lovely woman! Nature made thee to temper man; we had been brutes without you." To which Mark Twain adds, "But for you we should be nothing, for we should not be here."

High Heels and Crooked Shins.

It is worthy of note that while a malignant hatred of Chinese individuality is fomented under cover of hospitality to the immigration, our females have fallen in love with Chinese costumes and customs in some respects, and accepted them as models. The pictures of Chinese ladies to which one has been accustomed for many years bear a close resemblance to the American belle of the present day. The repulsive hump, the crippled feet, and the mincing gait of our women, if they do not fortify the Darwinian theory of the origin of the species from monkeys, at least give the appearance of retrograding monkeyward. The dress, uncouth and deformed as it is, would not itself deserve notice; but the high heels, crippling the feet, and distorting the limbs, are an outrage on grace, on anatomy, on humanity, entitling the authors, could they be detected, to criminal responsibility. A convention of corn doctors in the intercst of their trade could not devise a better scheme for good times. Women whose pedals are solidified may escape with only corns, of which we hope and pray they may have a full and tender crop. But that a whole generation of little girls should have their toes jammed into the toes of their boots, to do the work of heels, and that their legs should be thrown out of the natural balance and the pliant bones bent into semi-circles, is a sacrifice to fashion which would disgrace a nation of Hottentots.—Pacific Medical Journal.

A New Rule to Apply in the Appointment of Officers.

In making appointments, the President has adopted a general rule that where an officer has served for four years in a satisfactory manner, the character of his official services will stand as a recommendation for reappointment, unless there be well sustained objections to the personal or moral character of the incumbent. Where, however, an officer has served for eight consecutive years, his period of service will operate against his reappointment, the President holding to the opinion that eight years is the maximum term which a man should be retained in public service, provided an equally competent and meritous person is applicant for the place. This rule is to be specially applied to the appointment of Postmasters whose salaries exceed one thousand dollars per annum, and who are commissioned by the President. The rule will not be applied with the sama rigor to Postmasters whose salaries are below one thousand dollars per annum, and who are appointed, under the law, by the Postmaster-General, as to those Postmasters who are commissioned by the President. There are about 1,600 Postmasters who are required by the law to be commissioned by the President and over 38,000 who are appointed by the Postmaster-General.—Washington Special to Indianapolis Journal.

There is a rumor that Mr. Blackburn, of Kentucky, has aspirations for the Speakership. The only objections to gratifying Mr. Blackburn that we can think of are connected with his eloquence. He speaks so well and copiously that if he should take a notion to assign the floor to himself for a few weeks, we do not see what the House could do about it.—Cincinnati Commercial.

It is said that eyes that are brown or dark colored are weaker and more susceptible to injury from various causes than gray or blue eyes. Light blue eyes are generally the most powerful, and next to those are gray. The lighter the pupil the greater and longer continued is the degree of tension which the eye can sustain.

THE LYRE HATH MUSIC STILL.

The lyre hath music still—though love
No longer bids its notes unfold;
Though harsher hands its numbers move
To nobler themes and cold;
Yet is there something in its tone
Which bends not to the coarser will—
A magic yet from memory caught:
The lyre hath music still.

The hand that once was wont to fling
Enchantment o'er its trembling frame
Is cold; yet will its pathos bring
Remembrance of her name;
Of hers whose gentle fingers taught
Its yielding string their wonderous skill—
A magic yet from memory caught:
The lyre hath music still.

MY BRIEF ROMANCE.

CHAPTER III.

MARIA DAMAR'S STORY.

When the morrow came, I felt that it would be a relief not to see her come at all, or to hear some disjointed story, that would, in itself, put to flight the thought of unlawful detention; and yet I found that the only fear I had was, that the beautiful girl should prove to be not of sound mind.

I was punctually at the appointed place, and had taken care to dismiss my gardener and working force for the day. With equal punctuality she came.

No mental aberration could I detect, and, in the quiet, self-possessed lady who talked to me of her own history, and manifested no excitement save an occasional expression of self-pity, or a slight curl of the lip as she spoke of deceptions sanctioned by law, I could not but recognize a mental equal and a spiritual superior. As St. Paul wishes his judges to be altogether such as he was, "except the chain," so I felt that many whose sanity was never doubted might make a profitable change with her, of all save liberty.

Her story was simply this:

She had been reared from infancy in the family of two people whom she had always called father and mother. She had never been healthy in girlhood, and had been given to somnambulism. Once she remembered that exposure to out-door cold, when she had left her room in this condition, had resulted in convulsions, followed by lethargy. All this gave her the reputation of a queer girl, and paved the way for the result. At thirteen years old she was visiting at a distance from home, and met with a gentleman who became interested in her strong resemblance to a lady he had known, and who asked her many questions. The chance acquaintance resulted in the discovery that the man and woman with whom she lived never had any children of their own, but had taken her on the death of a brother, who was her real father, and of his wife, who was her real mother. These had died suddenly of yellow fever in New Orleans, and the property now held by the uncle and aunt as their own, was the property of her parents, and her own just inheritance.

All this was proven by letters of friendship which her new acquaintance held, and by reference to places of record of deeds to her father, and also of the registry of the marriage of her parents, and of her own birth. Armed with copies of court records and of church registers, the child had returned home and asserted her rights. The result was, that she was subjected to corporal punishment, and all the gossip of the neighborhood was silenced by the assertion that she was of weak mind. The papers were destroyed. Her own conviction of the truth that her parents were dead, and that the claim to her rested only on the avarice of the uncle and aunt, remained unchanged, and she attempted to secure a lawyer to procure justice for her. She also wrote letters to the town where she had been on the visit. These letters were intercepted, and her interviews with the lawyer were detected.

Again and again was she cruelly punished, and confined to her room on bread and water, while all visitors were excluded, and the tale of her mental malady spread wide. Then doctors came and went, women came to talk to her, and shook their heads and went away; and at last she was taken before a court on a formal writ of lunacy. The record of a family Bible was accepted as evidence of her birth. People swore to her parentage from general and current report. Teachers and friends testified that she was "always queer," and by solemn judgment of the jury she was pronounced insane. Then came the journey to the madhouse, her reception by the State as a private patient, to be paid for, and a life of dull monotony which was better than the home she had left, in spite of the bolt and bars, the grated, whitewashed cell, and the company of idiots and mad people.

I listened calmly, and weighed the words carefully. There seemed to be but two weak points in her story.

First. Why did not the gentleman who felt such interest in her as to unvail the mysteries of her birth and childhood, continue this interest to some definite end? And as, in default of interested or disinterested relatives, the law gives the same rights to any one who will claim to be the "next friend," to a minor, why did he not sue her guardians in this capacity?

Second. As the uncle and aunt had no children, and she, as their acknowledged child, would inherit the property from them at all events, what motive could they have to insist on more than the rights of guardians, or dispute a title which, under any circumstances, would ultimately vest in her?

Her reply was, to me, perfectly satisfactory. She said that her friend had neither charged, nor seemed to suspect, any criminal intent on the part of her surviving relatives; but had only blamed them for treating her as a child too long, and withholding facts which she was old enough to know. Her own motives in securing copies of papers, was rather to have a girlish triumph in the unraveling of a well-kept secret, than from much appreciation of its value. Then, they had always been harsh and severe with her, and she thought the paper gave emancipation and safety. Then, too, this kind gentleman was not rich, but only a traveling agent for some great dry goods house, and she had met him in the two weeks' rest which she had in the dull season of Summer. Beyond that season of rest, he might be wandering in almost any section of the Union; and the letters that were intercepted were those of injury after him.

As to the motives of her uncle and aunt, she could only conjecture that if they had really been her father and mother, enjoying property rightfully earned by themselves, such property never could have been taken from them by her while they lived, and even in death they could not divert it from her by will, if they chose. Whereas, if it was hers, and not theirs—hers, not by will of her parents, but as next of blood—they would be be accountable for its use when she came of age, and lose it absolutely in case of her marriage.

It was not yet a question of inheritance, but of possession; and if she should die in a lunatic asylum, the secret was probably buried. Should it escape the grave, they had destroyed no will—the testimony in court was that of others, who were not suborned of purjury, but only mistaken—and the matter of insanity rested on the verity of a record.

I was astounded by her clear views of the case, so logical and concise, and I asked only one more question: "Do you think that the resident physician could have been bribed to take part in this inquiry?"

She replied, decidedly:

"No! He is a gentleman, and could not be bribed, out of a moderate estate. You read of such things in books, but they are only possible in private lunatic asylums, and never in great public institutions. He takes my story as a part and evidence of my malady, and only feels sympathy for the poor parents who are denied by their crazy child. Crocodiles are said to weep, and these wept in court till others cried for sympathy with them."

CHAPTER IV.

THE HOLE UNDER THE WALL.

My only feeling now was shame that I had delayed and hesitated so long in so plain a duty. It would not do to wait, and make it a legal matter, for it would take months to get up the evidence and work it through the tedious machinery of the courts. In the interval, she would still be in the power of her pretended parents, with public opinion and a formal judgment to sustain them; and, even if that hedious mockery of justice, called law, did not grind out her condemnation from its millstones and precedent and form, she might not survive the hope long delayed, and the hourly contact with brains diseased. That I was a young man, who met a young girl, and made a plot through a hole in the wall, was also against me. What had courts to do with romance?

In a few brief words I explained to her that I should accomplish her release, and how. My plan of two ladders was not practical, for all the patients were locked up at night, and an escalade in broad daylight was certain discovery. I would summon my gardener that afternoon, and have a deep hole, with slanting side, dug close to the wall. Then, at night, I would undermine the wall by a narrow tunnel, and trust to the firm cement and the earth at the sides that it would not fall, but stand like an arch, until the patients were let out the next morning for the day. The few who were mild enough to let out at all seldom came that way, as the asylum grounds were large.

She laughed gleefully at the novel idea, and said:

"I am not afraid of holes in the ground, for once while my home troubles were progressing, I was sent for three months to a convent; and while I was there I got permission to go down a new well, in the bucket, with the well-digger."

I remarked:

"The convent was about as safe as the asylum, and I wondor you were not kept there!"

"Ah!" said she, "I expected that, and would gladly have taken the vail; but, then, I could have willed my property to the Church when I came of age."

That was plain enough; but we had talked much too long for safety, and telling her to replace the brick and mortar on her side, as best she could, I did the same on mine.

The trench by the wall was completed to my entire satisfaction, with no unnecessary conjecutres as to its use; and long before daylight in the morning I began my task with pick and spade. The soil was firm, but not stony, and I succeeded in getting a place two feet wide, and as many deep, under the foundation, which did not extend over eighteen inches below the surface. Then, as the moisture of the ground had softened the mortar, I worked out bricks so as to make a triangular opening almost to the surface of the ground; and saw with satisfaction that a slight stamp of the foot on the crust left on the other side would cave it in, and leave the space I wanted.

Then came the hardest task of all—to keep my own servants out of sight of that part of the grounds. I succeeded, by devising some unprecedented errands at unprecedented hours, and had all clear, and yet my gardener within call. Time never seemed so long as when I listened to the sounds from the great brown walls of the State charity, which betokened rising, breakfast, and the opening of doors to the mildly insane. At last came a light foot-step, and I cautioned her of the pit-fall, and how to break in the crust of earth.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Little Things.

A serpent's fang is a little thing, but death is its victory.

A baby is a wee little thing, but a constable was once a baby.

A lap dog is a little thing, but he is a very silly thing besides.

The tongue is a little thing, but it fills the universe with trouble.

A cross word is a little thing, but it is what stirs up the elephant.

A star is a little thing, but it can hold this great world in its arms

An egg is a little thing, but the huge crocodile creeps into life out of it.

A hornet's sting is a little thing, but it sends the schoolboy home howling.

An oath is a little thing, but it is recorded in the great ledger in heaven.

An orange peel on the sidewalk is a little thing, but it has upset many a giant.

A spark is a little thing, but it can light a poor man's pipe or set the world to burning.

A word is a little thing, but one word has been man's a man's destiny for good or for evil.

A kind word is a little thing, but it is just what sootheth the sorrows of a setting hen.

A kiss is a very little thing, but it betrayed the Son of God.

The acorn is a little thing, but the black bear and his family live in the oak that springs from it.

Life is made up of little things. Life itself is but a little thing; one breath less then comes a funeral.

A penny is but a very little thing, but the interest on it from the days of Cain and Abel would buy out the globe.

The Gulf Stream.

The great "river in the ocean," known as the Gulf Stream, from the Gulf of Mexico to the Azores, is three thousand miles in length, and its greatest bredth is one hundred and twenty. At first its speed is four miles an hour; but this gradually declines as it becomes diffused. In the State of Florida its temperature is eighty-three degrees or nine degrees above the surrounding waters; and off Newfoundland, in winter, it is twenty-five or thirty degrees warmer than the neighboring seas, thus causing the dense fogs of that region. It is great dispenser of heat and moisture in its course. To its influence is owing the verdure of the Emerald Isle, and the mildness of the climate of the Western Europe compared with the countries elsewhere of corresponding latitudes. It arrests the chilling Arctic icebergs, which melt away in its tepid waters. It is of a deep indigo bluo as long as its current is deep and narrow; and the line of demarkation between it and the adjacent waters is so marked that a vessel may be seen floating one-half in the Gulf Stream and the other in common waters of the sea; and two buckets let down, one at the bow, and the other at the stern, will draw up water differing in temperature by no less than thirty degrees.

"How many genders are there?" asked a schoolmaster, "Three, sir!" replied a little blue-eyed girl, "masculine, feminine and neuter." "Pray give me an example of each," said the master. "Why, you are masculine because you are a man, and I am feminine because I am a girl." Very well, proceed." "I don't know," said the little girl, "but I fancy Mr. Jenkins is neuter, as he is an old bachelor."

An Omaha man is doubly in trouble. He deserted his wife to elope with a girl, and the wife is chasing him. Then he deserted the girl and she is chasing him. The chasers have joined in the pursuit, and he fears the worst if they catch him.

A final report—the crack of doom.

How the Ladies Fish.

There are generally about six of them in the bunch, with light dresses on, and they have three poles, with as many hooks and lines among them. As soon as they get to the river they look for a good place to get down on the rafts, and the most venturesome one sticks her boot-heels in the bank and makes two careful steps down—then suddenly finds herself at the bottom, with both hands in the water, and a feeling that everybody in this wide world is looking at her, and she never tells anybody how she got there. The other girls, profiting by her example, turn round and go down the bank on their hands and toes, backward. Then they scamper over the rafts until they find a shallow place, where they can see the fish, and shout:

"Oh, I see one!"
"Where?"
"There."
"Oh, my! so he is."
"Let's catch him."
"Who's got them baits?"
"You lazy thing; you're sitting on my pole!"

All these exclamations are gotten off in a tone that awakens every echo within a mile around, and sends every fish that hears it into the "galloping hysterics."

Then the girls by superhuman exertions, manage to get a worm on the hook, and throw it with a splash like the launching of a wash-tub, and await the result. After awhile the feeble-minded sun-fish contrives to get fastened on the hook of a timid woman, and she gives vent to her tongue: "Oh, somethin's got my hook!"

"Pull up, you little goose?" shout five excited voices, as poles and hooks are dropped and they rush to the rescue.

The girl with the bite gives a spasmodic jerk, which sends the unfortunate "sunny" into the air the full length of the line, and he comes down on the nearest curly head with a damp flop that sets her to clawing as though there were bumble-bees in her hair.

"Oh, murder! take it away! Ugh, the nasty thing!"

Then they hold up their skirts and gather about that fish as it skips over the logs, one all the time holding the line in both hands with her foot on the pole as though she had an evil disposed goat at the other end. Then they talk over it:

"How will he ever get off?"
"Ain't he pretty?"
"Wonder if it ain't dry?"
"Poor little thing; let's put it back!"
"How will we get the hook from it?"
"Pick it up," says a girl who dacks rapidly out of the circle.

"Good gracious, I'm afraid of it! Ugh, look there, it's opening its mouth at me."

Just then the "sunny" wiggles off the hook and disappears between two logs in the water, and the girls try for another bite. But the sun comes down and fries the back of their necks, and they get three headaches in the party, and they all get cross and scold at the fish like so many magpics. If an unwary club dares to show himself in the water they poke at him with poles, much to his disgust.

Finally they get mad all over and throw their poles away, hunt the lunch-basket, climb up into the woods, where they sit around on the grass and eat enough of dried beef and rusks and hard boiled eggs to give a wood-horse the night-mare; after which they compare notes about their beaux till sundown, when they go home and plant envy in the hearts of all of their muslin-de-laine friend, by telling what "just a splendid time" they had.

A Judge in Nevada has been using blue glass, and tells a reporter all about it: "It's my deliberate non-judicial opinion that blue glass is a humbug. I've tried it two or three weeks now, and am able to discern no perceptible effect. When the sun shines, that glass up there makes a big blue spot in the center of the room, and I make my wife sit there two hours a day. I thought it would curb her desire for luxuries, fineries and worldly things; but it worked the opposite. After the first week she came in one day and remarked: 'My dear, this blue glass ray is inspiring in my mind an exalted taste for the beautiful. You can take back that $30 bonnet to the milliner's and get that $60 one I was looking at.' Looking at the matter from a scientific standpoint, I was considerably astonished, and am anxious to know what colored glass will counteract the effect of the blue."

When you see a young fellow standing on a corner with a far-away look in his eyes, and a bit of yarn on the last two fingers of his hand, you may be tolerably sure that he has just begun keeping house, and that he is muttering to himself, "Chopping bowl, eggs, clothes line—that's the thumb and first two fingers. Now, what did she want on the other two fingers?"

"Jamie, why do you not be after getting the life of you insured?" "An' why should I, my honey?" "Ah, indade, that after you are dead and gone you may be sure of a comfortable subsistence for yourself and family."

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL,
Editor and Proprietor.

BURLINGTON, KY., APRIL 26.

PACKARD is let out.

How much will it take to keep Packard from letting the cat out of the wallet?

THE St. Louis cremation horror has been investigated by the Coroner. The investigation attaches to the proprietors of the Southern Hotel considerable blame for the destruction of human life by the burning of that building.

IF reports be correct, the crops throughout the State are in good condition. The wheat crop especially presents a promising appearance. The farmers have accomplished about the customary amount of spring work, notwithstanding last month was noted for bad weather.

IN North Carolina, efforts are being made by the friends of "moonshiners" recently arrested in that State, to prevent the revenue officers appearing against them as witnesses. The officers who made the arrest are preparing to stand to the duties required of them and be in court ready to testify.

JAMES BLAINE, of Maine, is suspected of desiring to open up the Presidential question at the call Session of Congress, and having the matter considered by a tribunal composed of one member of the Supreme Court in each State. The prospects are that Mr. Hayes will have a four years wrangle with the leading politicians of the country. He is a fit person to be watched by both parties.

THE first passenger train went "snorting" over the Southern Railroad as far as the Kentucky River, on last Friday. The train consisted of five coaches passengered by the Trustees of the road and other distinguished persons desirous of witnessing the testing of the bridge across the Kentucky River. The bridge was subjected to a severe test, which resulted in great satisfaction to all interested.

THE President ordered the troops withdrawn from the vicinity of the St. Louis Hotel, in New Orleans, Tuesday at noon. This order met the hearty sanction of the majority of the business men of that city. So soon as it became evident that the troops would be withdrawn, a stampede was created among the members of the defunct Packard Legislature, they moving in a confused body to the Nicholls Assembly, where several of them were seated, leaving Packard in the State House, meditating upon past events. All that now remains for Packard to do is to pack his carpet-bag back to Maine and aid James Blaine in waging a "wind war" upon Hayes and his policy.

KANSAS LETTER.

CLAY CENTER, KANSAS, April 16, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

We, of this "garden of Gods," are favored with quite an early opening of spring. The main stress of the past winter was upon us in the early part of it, and the "hoary headed old cuss" so exhausted his resources then that he had but little power left to sustain his usual character of "lingering in the lap of spring," and was laid to rest late in the month of February, when the icy shackles of nature were loosened. Everything has the appearance of returning spring. The prairies are beginning to show small spots of green, where but a short time ago was naught but a blackened and scorched waste, caused by the extensive fires which have swept over them during the last few weeks. The prairie chickens are celebrating the dawn of each morning with their indescribable cries, which resound from every quarter. The wheat fields growing green; the farmer busy planting spring grains; the merchant having a good time to rest, &c., &c., not to mention such things as spring fever, loafers, ague, &c., and—and—oh! I guess that will do for the fair maiden who continually persists in "arraying her beauties in the garb of innocence," and being decked, as to her head, with the bright blossoms of the joyful May-time. Don't it?

The 12th inst. was appointed by our Mayor (didn't you know we had a Mayor?) as "Arbor Day" for the purpose of ornamenting the "Public Square," and the street sides with trees. A great number of trees of different varieties—fruit, forest and grove—were set out that and several succeeding days, and when the foliage is full the "Public Square" will indeed be a "thing of beauty," and we hope will remain a "joy forever."

We have had quite a rain to-day—commencing heavily this morning about 7½ o'clock and continuing two hours. All the streets and ravines [illegible] rivers and rushing mountain torrents. Now, at 2 o'clock p. m., Fifth street is dry, and in a few hours will be dusty. Such is Kansas, at least such are the streets of Clay Center. The plowed land should the moisture better, I believe, than the "clay" of Ky. (docs).

The young hoppers have been hatching by the million, and are lively little imps, without a doubt. But I think the rain this morning which was accompanied by heavy hail, has "done the business" for most of them. Prospects for crops both of fruit and grain are at present quite flattering.

The Presbyterean Church of his city, which, for the past two years, has been in almost a dying condition, has at last secured a pastor who is worthy of his calling. Rev. W. S. Davis, of Leavenworth City, Kansas, a young man, a good man, a thorough and classical scholar, a fine orator, and with a fervor and sincerity which must be effective. The church now promises to be prosperous. They have on trial an Estey Organ, of great power, which they will likely purchase. Their choir has just organized and promises well.

—A man by the name of Griffin, workman on the Kentucky River bridge, fell from the structure 275 feet, killing him instantly.

—A little child of John H. Wilson, at Maysville, was burned to death on the 16th. It was left alone in a room where there was a fire.

—The grand jury in the Knox County Circuit Court, at its last session, found 105 indictments. The County Court was indicted for not providing a suitable jail.

—The Woodford Weekly says: Some of our farmers will this season plant their corn by a machine that drops one grain at a time twelve or fourteen inches apart. It is said that eighteen or twenty barrels per acre can be raised on ordinary land by this method.

—Bath County News: Mrs. Gardener, the wife of Mr. William Gardener, a well known gentleman living about five miles from this place, committed suicide by drowning, last Tuesday morning. Without any known cause, and without the slightest warning to anyone, she deliberatly threw herself into a deep place in Slate Creek, which runs near by her home, and drowned before assistance could be had.

—At Bowling Green, Sunday night, about 9 o'clock, a meteor was seen about the size of a large sky-rocket. It was seen rising to the southward, and moving slowly in its curve of fire, high above and across the city, to the northward. It was watched till it passed the city beyond the river and lightly descended on Baker's hill, where it was seen to burst, as it were, into a thousand sparks resembling ærolites, sprinkling themselves for quite a distance around.

—Stanford Journal: A little child of Thomas Chaplin, near Crab Orchard, in this county, was born with a perfectly developed head and body, and two flat and ill-shaped legs, one of which began, about a week after its birth, to slough off, continuing nearly up to the body, and now has commenced to heal. The other leg is of little or no use, and the foot has six toes. Otherwise the child appears remarkably healthy and sprightly. This is the fifteenth child, all the others being healthy and well-developed children.

—Falmouth Independent: The organization of committees in this county seems to be the order of the day. The Committee of Safety have but lately commenced a good work when another organization appears in our midst, styling itself the Matrimonial Committee, and asks that its objects may be presented to the people. Furnishing homes for, and thereby bettering the condition of, old bachelors, appears to be the principal purpose of this benevolent organization. The first great sale of bachelors, to which the attention of marriageble ladies is especially directed, will take place on the first Monday in May.

New York Life Insurance Company—Time Tests All Things.

This sterling old company is popular with Kentuckians, as is evidenced by the liberal patronage the company has received in the State.

Commencing business in Louisville thirty-two years ago, it has extended its lines throughout the State till its name is a household word at nearly every fireside.

Policy No. 248 is still held by a citizen of Louisville. Wm. Prather, Esq., the first agent the company had in Kentucky, held at the time of his death (last September) Policy No. 460.

Many of the oldest and largest policy-holders in the State increased the amounts held in this company last year.

In the mortuary list of the New York Life for this State are the names of many of Kentucky's noblest sons, one of the last being that of gallant young Crittenden, who fell with brave Custer and his ill-fated band last August.

The company has paid nearly three hundred death losses in the State, covering almost one million dollars.

Although being in the State almost an entire generation, the New York Life has resisted the payment of no losses—a point worthy of note to those intending to take new life policies.

Notwithstanding the hard times last year the company increased the volume of new business in Kentucky and throughout its entire agencies. This speaks for the confidence the insuring public have in the old New York Life.

The past ten years the interest receipts of the company have been more than sufficient to pay all death losses during that time.

Commencing without capital, the increase has been steady with the advancing years of the company. In 1872 the capital was twenty-one millions; in 1873, twenty-four millions; in 1874, twenty-seven millions; in 1875, thirty millions; and in 1876 thirty-three millions, and the end is not yet.

The interest receipts last year were nearly two million dollars—almost half a million more than was required to pay the death losses.

The New York Life might safely decline all new business and pay all deaths from interest receipts alone.

The company loaned more on bond and mortgage last year than any other New York company except one. The loans of January, 1877, were over a quarter of a million dollars. This unparallelled success has been attained in the time of great financial depression during the past four years.

The steady increase of capital—the increase of new business (6,514 new policies being written in 1876, covering $20,062,111), shows the tenacity with which old members cling to their policies and the confidence the insuring public have in the company.

To attain this standard of excellence has required great financial ability, prudence and foresight in making investments, and judicious care and discrimination in the selection of new lives.

The New York Life has a reputation for fair and honorable dealing in the settlement of death-losses that is unsullied and not surpassed by any other of the large American life companies. The company guarantee to pay all losses that are equitable, whether legal or not.

To make assurance doubly sure, the Company keeps a surplus of over five and a half million dollars above what the States of New York and Kentucky require. By a careful analysis of the thirty-second balance sheet, published in this paper to-day, it will be remarked that every item is brought down to a gold basis—there is no effort made to inflate. Even Government and State bonds are valued at $200,000 less than last year—same amount—face value.

Those holding policies in Kentucky or elsewhere are extremely fortunate. Those proposing to take life policies can find no better or stauncher company in the world, and those who are disturbed by the failure and mismanagement of weak and tottering concerns need have no fears of the Old Reliable New York Life.

The company, throughout its thirty-two years of past history, has never swerved from the straight path of prudence and safety, and the best guarantee for the future is the record of the past.

It does not promise so much what it is going to do, as it points to what it has done.

Its agencies are wide-spread, covering all the American States, Territories and provinces, the British Islands, France, Belgium and the German Empire, so that the best possible average mortality is obtained.

In drawing a moral from these potent facts, we would remind our readers of the sower and the seed. He who enters upon life insurance, and wishes to profit by his prudence, must not cast his seed upon a sterile soil, but, like a wise husbandman, upon ground where it will vegetate and bring forth the needed fruit. Then he will find life insurance to be infallible.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

ST. LOUIS, MO., April 21st, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

We believe it has been about three weeks since we sent you a line, and we don't know that we would write now, but that we have thought you might conclude we were burnt up in the Southern Hotel. The fact is, there has been so much excitement with us, and so much to write about, we hardly know where to begin or where to leave off.

To come to the point and be as short as possible, we will say our election came off as promised, and the Hon. Henry Overstolz was cleeted Mayor by a majority of 10,464. "That's all." Some few patriots are in favor of having a new election, and making it unanimous, but the Hon. N. C. Hudson, his opponent, says the majority is large enough.

Our daily newspapers, each and every one, have had from three to five columns per day since the fire and are not done talking about it yet. Now, all there is of it, the Southern Hotel is burnt, and about twenty lives lost, and about two hundred men and women thrown out of employment, the women being what are termed Irish servant girls. But there is one feature of this terrible calamity that strikes us with considerable force, and arouses our curiosity. We simply allude to the sympathy manifested in behalf of the poor Irish girl. There were about 100 of this class employed in the hotel at the time of the fire, and nearly all of them got out with their lives and most of their worldly goods. But every theater in the city has given them a benefit, and nearly every church and organization in the city has taken up a collection for their benefit. The peculiarity of the matter is there are hundreds of poor Irish girls in the city, all the while seeking employment, and neither pastor, laymen or anybody else seem to care whether they find it or not, and most people would see them starve in the streets before they would give them a nickel. But the Southern Hotel girls have all the sympathy and money given them they could possibly desire. Possibly the fire has done good after all by opening the hearts of so many of our citizens. It was a terrible fire, and there is, undoubtedly, carelessness somewhere, and there is a jury investigating the affair, but as yet have arrived at no definite conclusion as to the cause, though they have been at it for a week. We have had nothing but excitement on Change for the past two weeks.

The European war news has turned almost every man a speculator, and wheat to-day is from 40@45c. per bushel higher than when we last wrote. Corn has also advanced about 10c. per bushel within the past two weeks. Should there come a telegram across the ocean within the next ten days, announcing it as a fact there is to be no war, about 50 per cent. of our grain dealers are broke or bursted.

We are having pretty spring weather, and we have encouraging accounts from all quarters concerning crops. It is almost a conceded fact that the grasshopper eggs, that the Kansas farmer feared so much, won't hatch this year, so the farmers of that State are jubilant and promise almost a double crop this year. So mote it be. We can then let all Europe fight, and will feed them and get rich.

Yours truly, BOB A. LONG.

THE farmers were never known to attack spring work more willingly than they have this spring. Nearly every farmer in the county is preparing to cultivate a large crop of some of the staple articles of this section, and with a favorable season there will be an uncommonly large amount of produce for sale in Boone next fall.

THE war upon the finny tribe has commenced. Last week was a good time to go fishing, but did not prove to be a good time for catching. About forty-seven men and boys of this place gave that branch of industry particular attention, Friday and Saturday, but the only bite of consequence gotten by any of them was at the table at night when they returned home.

"Greater Love Hath no Man than This."

Sunday evening, about 7 o'clock, Mr. Dillon Bradley, of Petersburg, was drowned at the wharf at that place. The particulars, as we get them, are as follows: Mr. Bradley was coming from Aurora in a skiff, in which were himself, a boy and five ladies. Upon arriving at Petersburg, he was attempting to pass around a steamboat lying at the wharf, while another steamer was passing the landing, but no nearer than the channel. The waves from the passing steamer, assisted by the current, capsized Bradley's skiff. Fortunately, some men were at the wharf, and at once commenced the rescue of the party, one of them going to Bradley, who was holding to the side of the steamer lying at the wharf. Bradley told the man to assist in saving the ladies first, and was left holding to the boat. After the boy and the ladies were taken out, attention was again directed to the place where Bradley was left, but, to the horror of the entire party, he had disappeared beneath the waves, and a watery grave was his. It is supposed that he took the cramp, lost his hold and went down before he could give the helping hands warning of his danger. Mr. Bradley was an aged and highly respectable citizen of Petersburg, and a man who had had much experience with water craft on the stream in which at last he found his grave. The last accounts we have from Petersburg say the body has not been found. Among the ladies in the skiff was a Mrs. McNealy, a very corpulent lady, who remained in an unconscious condition for several hours after she was rescued. The sudden and unexpected taking off of Mr. Bradley cast a deep gloom over the little town of which the deceased was a citizen.

THE COURTS.

Circuit Court.

Since the criminal business has been taken from this court, it seems to have no attraction for others than parties litigant. It is attended by few except those who are directly interested in some cause pending, and the consequence is it passes quietly by, not attended with the excitement and flurry that accompanies Criminal Court.

Last week but few attended court, but Judge Drane was as busily engaged as had there been thousands of persons about. Several long and tedious records were explored and decisions rendered by his Honor, there being but one cause submitted to the jury during the entire term of the court, although the jurors were held in readiness till about noon of the third day of court, when they were finally discharged, paid off and let go their way rejoicing. It seems that jury trials are becoming less popular, there being fewer cases submitted to juries now than there were a few years since.

Last week we mentioned the rule against the County Judge and Justices of the Peace, requiring them to appear last Saturday morning and show cause why they did not execute the judgment in the Bounty Fund case. Judge Phelps, Esquires M. B. Green, T. J. Akin, John A. Kendall, Oscar Gaines, Cy Riddell, A. B. Whitlock, Thos. N. Stephens, John S. Huey, Abs. Conner, Geo. W. Baker and H. Bannister appeared in obedience to the summons. They held a meeting in the grand jury room, and decided to employ J. M. Collins and Judge Geo. R. McKee to assist the County Attorney in defending their answer to the rule. Esquire Geo. W. Baker, however, elected to answer for himself, which he did, stating that he is ready and willing to act. The County Judge and remaining Justices filed a voluminous response, in which they came near denying the existence of anything pertaining to the bounty fund tax. The response being in, arguments were in order. The afternoon Saturday was occupied by J. M. Collins and Judge James M. Pryor for the defense of the response. At the conclusion of their speeches, court adjourned till Monday.

Monday the argument was resumed, Col. Landram and Judge O'Hara against, and R. C. Green and Judge Geo. R. McKee for the response of the Justices. The arguments, which were very elaborate on both sides, were not concluded till a late hour Monday night, Judge O'Hara making the closing argument. Judging from the number of points reviewed in the arguments, there is not one in the case that did not receive a passing knock. This case has been on the docket for twelve years, made a number of trips to the Court of Appeals, and bids fair to make its appearance before that tribunal again. Tuesday morning the Court took the response, a paragraph at a time, and disposed of it, overruling the entire response, but not holding the County Court sufficiently in contempt to be fined. An order was made directing the County Court to appoint a Collector and Receiver, proceed to collect the tax as assessed by them in 1872, and report to the Circuit Court at its next term. The rule was not discharged as to any of the Justices.

The famous Coffman-Wagstaff trial was compromised while in the last agonies of trial.

The court completed its business and adjourned Tuesday afternoon. In a few hours the attorneys from abroad took their leave, and the town soon returned to its natural equilibrium.

County Court.

APRIL 18th.—T. J. Roberts was appointed administrator of the estate of Artamecia Sleet, with J. M. Collins on his bond.

James Woodward was appointed Supervisor of roads in District No. 3 in the Walton District, Wm. H. Senior declining to act.

Jiddy Brooks, colored, was allowed $20 for keeping Henry Coleman, colored.

Samuel Dobbins, being over 50 years of age, was released from paying the $2 poll tax for road purposes. Daniel Bedinger, being School Trustee, was released from same.

Wm. T. Winston, G. W. Anderson, J. H. Walton, T. J. O'Neal and Alonzo Gaines were incorporated under the name and style of the Minneola and Anderson Ferry Turnpike Road Company.

John G. Cox and Jas. H. Walton filed their reports as Road Supervisors.

APRIL 21.—J. M. Collins and Judge Geo. R. McKee were retained as counsel to assist the County Attorney in defending the response to the rule issued against the Justices and County Judge by the Circuit Judge, requiring them to show cause why they do not execute judgment in the Bounty Fund case.

John Whitaker was appointed Supervisor of Roads in District No. 1 in the Petersburg District, in place of Jno. Hawkins, resigned.

Personal Mention.

S. E. CALVERT has been "clinging ink" in the County Clerk's office at intervals for the past two weeks.

MR. R. C. HOWE, of Louisville, and General Agent for the New York Life Insurance Company, was among us last week.

GEO. W. SLEET took his leave Tuesday evening, after ten days' sojourn in Burlington. As George passed out of town, he looked back and seemed to say, "Fare-you-well-Brother Watkins-ah!"

MR. J. F. BLYTHE, who has been confined to his bed for several weeks suffering excruciating pain from inflammatory rheumatism, we are glad to see again able to be out, although but for a few moments at a time.

COL. J. M. COLLINS, of Crittenden, favored us with a call Tuesday. The Colonel reports but little business done in the Grant Criminal Court last week. The grand jury, however, was finding quite a number of indictments, and was still in session Monday.

SUNDAY was an inviting day and the rambler rambled in every direction.

SHADE is somewhat in demand.

Louisville Trade Gossip.

Special Correspondence to the Recorder.

The market in mules and horses was decidedly active last week. There is a strong demand and prices are bracing up accordingly. The auction sales were only about 100 mules and 150 horses, but the private sales were larger than usual. Horses of good size and color brought from $100 upward. Plugs went off from $15@40. Good mules are in brisk demand at from $60@100. There is every prospect of a strong trade with good prices.

Cattle receipts were lighter than for several weeks before, and in consequence prices advanced somewhat. Common, from $3@4; good, from $4@4 50; extra, from $4 50@5 25.

Hogs came in largely; prices held up from $4 50@5 50 for good lots.

There was a great demand for spring lambs; $5 a piece was readily paid for those weighing 25@30 pounds.

There was a slight falling off in the egg receipts; only about 15,000 dozen were received; prices from 12@13c. per dozen.

Butter in abundance at from 15@22c.

Rhubarb, lettuce, onions and radishes are rushing into the market and go off like hot cakes at good prices.

New potatoes and new cabbage from the South have put in an appearance, and are grabbed up by eager buyers to whom money is no object, new potatoes bringing $12 per barrel. The receipts of old potatoes were light—prices from $3 25@4.

In view of the warlike outlook in Eastern Europe, pork, bacon and cured meats generally are firm and advancing, and there is every probability that farmers who devote considerable attention to pork raising this season will be amply rewarded for their labor.

The wheat receipts last week were light; barely enough coming in to keep the local mills at work. Prices have advanced in consequence of a general disposition on the part of holders to wait for still higher figures. White ranges from $1 55@1 65; red, about 5c. under these rates. Oats, prices solid from 38@48.

NATURE is rapidly donning its robe of green.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Willow Vale.

Business is thriving in our vicinity now. The ground being too wet, last week, for the farmers to plow, they turned their attention to fox hunting. They succeeded in capturing one, last week. Will Rich passed the mill with one, tenderly wrapped in an old coat.

We are pained to announce the death of Thomas Huey, which occurred on the 16th inst. Mr. Huey was an aged and esteemed citizen of this community, and a member of Big Bone Church for many years, and showed, by a well ordered life and godly conversation, that there is a divine reality in the Christian religion. His funeral sermon was preached by the Rev. Jas. A. Kirtley, and he was laid to rest in Big Bone Cemetery. Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord.

Everyone is crying out about tramps, and Big Bone school house is a regular stopping-place for any amount of those roving vagrants; and woe betide the chicken roosts and smoke-houses of the neighborhood if they are not securely locked. We think the Trustees should provide a lock for the house and keep them out. DON JUAN.

Petersburg.

The old steam ferry boat, Bessie Pearl, has come home again, and is now hunting a paying business between Rising Sun and Cincinnati. It is another case of looking for the needle in the hay stack. She is under the command of Capt. N. B. McNealy, and has shipped, as supercargo, the only member of the Board of City Fathers, who has not bought a new hat since his election. Business is rather dull for the new enterprise and for divers reasons. In the first place, onetly, times is hard and money are scarce, and in the second place, lastly, she (the B. P.) is not surprisingly swift in her movements. She is a tri-weekly concern—comes down one week and tries to go back the next. She and the Water Witch had a spirited race race from here to Aurora one beautiful day last week, (two miles of long weary down-stream distance), and for the first hour or two the suspense was terrible, as the anxious and patient spectators were kept in doubt as to the result, but when the news came back from Aurora that at the end of the race (under the wire, to speak in race track language) the W. W. was fourteen inches behind, we felt easier, bets were declared off, all hands took another drink and went to sleep again.

By the bursting of what is called a flake-stand at the distillery, last Thursday, a delay in the business operations of that concern was caused. We will air this much of our wisdom for the benefit of the poor unfortunates among your readers who don't know what a flake-stand is, by telling them that this one was as high as a two-story house, nearly as wide as the gable end of a church, and that it was kept filled with cold water, in which coiled the copper "serapin," that makes the diffusible stimulant for the old toper.

Speaking of whisky and whisky makers, reminds us that on last Saturday, some Government Inspectors seized over 500 barrels of what is known as "corooked whisky," at the Louisville Co., in Lawrenceburg, Ind. The crookedness was due to the fact some syrup of burnt sugar and peaches had been put into each barrel, thereby making of high wines one day old, a nice article of genuine six year old bourbon. Truly our sharpness is sharp, but murder does sometimes come to light even in a Hayes-ey dispensation.

A great degree of dissatisfaction is loudly expressed among the Democracy of this county, occasioned by the action of the Executive Committee in regard to the selection of a Representative in the next Legislature. Really there is an appearance of superfluity, and a superabundance of red tape in this particular. The necessity of a primary election and a nominating convention both, is extremely difficult to see, unless the latter is designed to annihilate or pervert the decision of the former. If in a primary election we get at the exact wish of the people, that should end the matter; and unless the Democratic engine has nearly become a double-barrel concern, the committee has certainly over-stepped the bounds of necessity in their late decision.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

BURLINGTON, KY., APRIL 26.

AT THE LAST.

The stream is calmest when it nears the tide
And flowers are sweetest at the eventide,
And birds most musical at close of day,
And saints divinest when they pass away.

Morning is holy, but a holier charm
Lies folded close in evening's robe of balm,
And weary man must ever love her best,
For morning calls to toil, but night to rest.

She comes from heaven, and on her wings doth bear
A holy fragrance, like the breath of prayer;
Foot-steps of angels follow in her trace,
To shut the weary eyes of day in peace.

All things are hushed before her as she throws
O'er earth and sky her mantle of repose;
There is a calmer beauty and a power
That morning knows not in the evening hour.

Until the evening we must weep and toil—
Plow life's stern furrow, dig the weedy soil—
Tread with sad feet our rough and thorny way,
And bear the heat and burden of the day.

Oh! when our sun is setting we may glide,
Like summer evening down the golden tide;
And leave behind us as we pass away,
Sweet, starry twilight round our sleeping clay.

Hired Help.

The New England farmer, referring to this topic, says that "Thousands of laborers have been without work during the winter because—well—that opens a great question, and one we will not stop to discuss at this time. Some men are always out of work, and not a few like to be. The best workers can usually find something to do. Probably wages will be lower this year than for several years past, but really good men—will all find places. If one would secure help of this class, he should hire early. Good help is generally the cheapest, nor is good help always the high priced. Some men will have their price, or will not work at all. Such help is in demand as spare hands when farmers get in a hurry, but men of this class seldom succeed in the long run. They have too much lost time, when they are consuming without earning. As a rule we believe it is better for both the employer and the employed to engage by the year, or for a long term. Day help can seldom be depended upon. Then, if there is about so much work to be done in a year, on a farm, or so much money to be earned by the laborer to maintain himself, it is as well for both parties to spread it rather evenly through the season, as to try to do it all in a short time. If one hires a laborer for a single day's work, at an exorbitant price, he expects an extra day's work performed, whether he gets it or not, but, if a man is working by the season, or by the year, at fair rates, one does not feel like crowding and hurrying all the time. A goodhired man will cheerfully push things a littl when the weather is favorable and the work urgent, and a kind and reasonable employer will be a little easy during rainy days." In the South the poorest farm laborers want the highest wages, and will spend all their time in idleness rather than work at a lower price.

Mystery of Dreams.

It is related that a man fell asleep as the clock tolled the first stroke of twelve. He awakened ere the echo of the twelfth stroke had died away, having, in the interval, dreamed that he committed a crime, was detected after five years, tried, and condemned; the shock of finding the halter around his neck aroused him to consciousness, when he discovered all these events had happened in an infinitesimal fragment of time. Mohammed, wishing to illustrate the wonders of sleep, told how a certain man, being a sheik, found himself, for his pride, made a poor fisherman; that he lived as one for sixty years, bringing up a family and working hard; and how, waking up from his long dream, so short a time had he been asleep, that the narrow-necked gourd-bottle filled with water, which he knew he overturned as he fell asleep, had not time in which to empty itself. How fast the soul travels when the body is asleep! Often, when awake, we shrink from going back into the dull routine of a sordid existence, regretting the pleasanter life of dreamland. How is it that sometimes, when we go to a strange place, we fancy we have soen it before? Is it possible that when one has been asleep the soul has floated away, seen the place, and has memory of it which so surprises us? In a word, how far dual is the life of man, how far not?

Honey-Dew From on High.

The Sacramento Record-Union says there is a strip of country three miles wide, stretching southwest from the Willamette River, near Oregon City to the Cascade Mountains, which is a natural honey-producing district. In the foothills of the mountains the honey-dew, which is peculiar to this district within the boundaries it covers, falls so heavily as to incrust the foliage. Throughout this belt of country, bees are better off than bees in clover, for they literally scrape up the ready made honey, and, after filling their hives, build and fill combs on the outside. Mr. Dufur says he saw eighty pounds of honey taken from the under side of a pole stretched across a fence. It would be a very interesting region for naturalists to investigate, especially as no satisfactory solution of the phenomenon has ever yet been reached, and this special locality seems to develop the so-called honey year after year in remarkble quantity.

A Petrified Forest.

Among California's most notable wonders may be mentioned the petrified forest, about half way between two celebrated summer resorts—Mark West Springs, of Sonoma County, and Calistoga Springs, in Napa County. The forest is situated in a wild and mountainous region, and at a distance appears like a mass of fallen trees. On approaching what, at a little distance, appears to be a tree stump, it proves, on examination, to be a broken section of the body of some prostrate pine petrified. Every circle or year's growth is easily discernible, so that the exact duration of the tree's existence may be determined. Next, one sees the partially excavated trunk of a large pine, lying in an inclined position. One sees in another spot a mass of solid stone, in the form of a fallen tree some seven feet in diameter—every fissure in the bark and knot plainly indicated, as in that of a tree fallen by the woodman's ax, while around, thickly strewn upon the ground, are numerous fragments similar to the chips and broken pieces of wood that are scattered by the wood-cutter in preparing a tree to be cut into logs for the mill. On striking the stony mass with a piece of petrified wood, it gives back a metallic sound very different from the dull thud produced by striking a rock against a wooden log. So are to be seen many similar trees, as we call these peculiar rocks, varying only in size and length, all, however, having the same incline and the same general position, viz., north and south. Occasionally a peculiarity is noticeable, such as the division of a tree into sections of various lengths, ranging from three to seven feet; yet so slight are the fissures that separate these sections that, at a very short distance, they have the appearance of one solid log. Another peculiarity in one tree is its color. While the general color of the stone logs is a grayish white, this tree is, to all appearances, a tree of stone-coal, and the proprietor of the forest asserts that it burns equally well with the best quality of that article. The largest of these natural wonders, as found so far, measured eleven feet in diameter, and is executed to view for a distance of sixty-eight feet, though doubtless it penetrates the hillside many feet further. The space within the inclosure is cleared of underbrush, and contains many beautiful shade trees of living oak, poung pines, manzaniti (now in full bloom), the madrona, and several other varieties peculiar to this locality. Here, indeed, is the field for the geologist. Not only in this particular place, but the whole range of mountains offers many attractive subjects for analysis.

A Familiar Face.

"Your face seems familiar to me, sir," said one man to another, on the train the other day; can I have met you before? Was it at the Centennial? Or didn't I see you at St. Louis last fall? "It may have been either, sir," courteously responded the unknown, "for I was a Turkish Pasha in the cake and coffee business at Philadelphia, and subsequently filled a brief engagement in St. Louis as a cannibal. I am now on my way to California to become a gorilla if native talent meets with any encouragement, but if business is bad I shall either let my hair grow and enter the lecture field or get a chuck-a-luck board and follow the country fairs." "Life," said the other man, musingly, "is full of vicissitudes." "She are," sententiously replied the interloeutor.

"I WISH to consult you upon a little project I have formed," said a noodle to his friend. "I have an idea in my head." "Have you?" interposed the friend, with a look of great surprise. "Then you shall have my opinion at once. Keep it there! it may be sometime before you get another."

"I WISH I were you about two hours," she said with great tenderness. "And why, my dear?" he asked with considerable interest. "Because," she said, toying affectionately with his watch chain, "because then I would buy my wife a new set of furs."

A PERSON out West is offering for sale grass seed gathered from the path of rectitude. A religious contemporary fears that the path must be sadly overgrown with grass, as it is so little traveled now-a-days.

AN Irish housemaid, boasting of her industrious habits, said she rose at four, made her fire, put on the kettle, prepared the breakfast, and made all the beds before anyone was up in the house.

"WHEN death enters a town that has vaccinated all its windows with blue glass, he grimly shakes his head and goes around and tries to sell his sickle to the agricultural implement man."

SPANISH proverbs are at a discount just now; but this one is at par: "At eighteen, marry your daughter to her superior; at twenty, to her equal; but at thirty to anybody who will have her."

THE ONION.

Wrapt is this modern mummy
In ceaseless fold on fold;
Yet what a wonderous power
The endless wrappings hold.

Of all the vegetables
From garden's length to length,
He is the one most mighty—
Epitome of strength.

Whene'er his person enters
All noses sniff the air,
And epicurean stomachs
For gastric treats prepare.

A subtile spirit rises
Of dinner in full bloom—
An appetizing odor
Prevading all the room.

When at the well-laid table,
How is the palate blest!
He betters other dishes,
Yet is himself the best.

But then call on a lady;
Why is her smile so grim?
Before a word is spoken
She knows you've been with him.

MY BRIEF ROMANCE.

CHAPTER V.

THE ESCAPE.

Her intelligence was guide enough, and soon there was light and space between us. Then, a traveling-blanket spread on the fresh earth kept her dress from the marks of the soil, and in a moment more she stood by my side, excited and triumphant.

I directed her how to reach a safe apartment of my house, and fell to work with all energy to shovel back the dirt. I had just succeeded in getting the bricks loosely in place when I heard a voice that made my heart stand still. It was that of the worthy Celt who kept the asylum grounds in order, exclaiming:

"An' what does all this mane?"

I commanded myself as well as I could, and replied:

"We are very sorry, my good fellow, but we dug a hole too close to the wall, and the dirt caved in; also, some bricks, as you see, came loose. You had best throw a little dirt on that side, and then come over for a little silver to pay for the trouble."

My explanation had truth in it, and I did not care to be more explicit. He was a good-natured fellow, and answered, cheerfully:

"That's all right. Sure, an' how is a gintleman to know dirt will fall in, an' not stand like a stun wall?"

So, as I worked on my side, I heard the welcome noise of his shovel on the other, hiding every trace of the escape. The blanket had prevented footmarks.

Just then I caught sight of my gardener, and won his supreme contempt by directing the trench of yesterday immediately closed and covered with green sod. He obeyed, as he was paid for it, but not without a hint that gentlemen had best learn their own minds. A silver compliment satisfied him, and another thrown over the wall saved me from the Celtic visitation.

At last I was free to join the escaped girl, and I found her safely locked in, and flushed with excitement.

There was a new question. The fairy prince had released the enchanted maiden. What will he do with her? I did not throw myself at her feet, nor wait for that inevitable act of "Beauty" which transforms the "Beast."

I took her hand and led her to the window, and, in a few words, told her of the necessity of a protector whose rights would be higher than those of the evil guardians, and whose claims the law would respect. Said I:

"There would be more of romance than of judgment, should you and I profess to love each other on so brief and strange an acquaintance. But I am heartfree, as you doubtless are, and I propose to give the world the strongest proof that I believe in your sanity by making you my wife. If you will risk my love, that now has no foundation but your beauty and your misfortune, I offer you my hand, as a gentleman, and will spend my life in trying to win your heart."

A flush, like that of the rose-leaf, swept over her cheeks and neck as she lifted her face to mine, just as she did at the maniac marriage, but there was no doubt of her intention this time, as the sweet lips met mine, and she did not run away.

CHAPTER VI.

IN WHICH A WEDDING IS CHRONICLED.

By 11 o'clock that day the great asylum bell gave the alarm of an escaped patient; but the brain of the Irish laborer did not connect that fact with the crumbled dirt under the wall, and I took care to meet the first inquiry on my premises in person.

I felt wonderfully self-possessed, and even walked over to the institution and asked questions as to who it was. I even fortified the story of the fair girl by asking when she came, and seeing that the date on the books was the one she had given from memory.

My next business was to my good little minister; and before I was half through with my story, he was oftentimes more excited than I was, and was ready to aid me, hand and heart. Then I procured a license from the Court of Ordinary, with no trouble beyond the usual fees and some of the usual wit about my bride to be. As the name was unknown to the clerk, he only winked when I enjoined secrecy.

A lawyer friend had an office near by, and I gave him a suppositious case to decide on. It was not a little to my gratification when he told me how easily a friendless girl might be adjudged a lunatic; for I saw a confirmation of the story of my prisoner at home.

He was a little astonished as I put the golden retaining fee in his hand, and told him to brighten up his reading for an emergency that might arise.

That night my little carriage, intended only for two persons, and drawn by a powerful and spirited horse, stood at my side gate. I held the halter and dismissed the groom. Soon a light form, in my own cloak and traveling cap, joined me, unnoticed, and I lifted her in. Then we were away.

In ten minutes we were in the parlor of my minister, with the shutters carefully closed, and no one present save his family and my astonished attorney.

A few brief words, a fervent prayer, and I was the husband of a woman for whose arrest a reward was then posted in the street.

She was much excited, and breathed quickly, but said little.

It was not my intention to seek either my home or hers, but, by the advice of my lawyer to place myself in communication with the friend who had first revealed to her the facts of her parentage, and then, as soon as possible, to get in the neighborhood of the places and records where the facts of her birth could be proved.

Possession of her was everything; and, husband as I was, I did not care to face the ordeal of a writ of habeas corpus until I was fully armed. It was a battle with pretended parents and with State authority, and the validity of our marriage was involved in the question.

CHAPTER VII.

A BRIDAL TRIP AND A STRANGE STORY.

In the age of telegraph, it was not safe to take the ears at once, and an hour later my powerful horse was making the sparks fly from the flinty road, as we sped onward in the darkness beneath the stars that winked and told no tales.

I did not know what to talk about, save the principal incidents of her past life, and so I said but little. She clung close to my side and ever and anon I could feel that a shiver ran through her frame, although she said it was not from the night air. Sometimes I would think that she was asleep; but, on looking closely at the veiled face, I could see that the eyes were wide open and very bright.

In the gray of morning she seemed to recognize objects that we passed, and once clutched my arm and said:

"I used to live on this road; you are not taking me back to them?"

I assured her that I was not, and there could be no chance of recognition. Suddenly she raised herself from the leaning position and asked:

"Am I really and lawfully married to you, and in your control, not theirs?"

I told her yes, and tried to quiet her evident and painful agitation.

She paid little attention to that, and began to say, in an excited way, that there was something she had to tell me, which it was not safe to tell before, but I should hear it all now. It began with a story, and, thinking she wished, in her unsophisticated way, to atone for the silence of the night, I let her go on. She had seemed strangely wise in some things, and a perfect child in others.

The story was of a convent, like the one to which she had once been sent. One of the nuns had filled the holy vows with reluctance and distaste, though no one had penetrated her secret or known how dissatisfied she was. So much was she trusted by the Bishop and Mother Superior, that she was made to preside over the interior details of the convent, and all the keys were given into her hands. At last the lonely, secluded life, and the longing for the outer world became unbearable, and she yielded to the temptation. Her black dress was secretly exchanged for other garments, and she sought the great hall as the avenue to the outer gate. As she passed the marble image of the Holy Virgin that stood there, she cast the keys contemptuously at the sandaled feet, and said, lightly:

"I leave you, oh, Holy Mother, to discharge my duties till I return!"

Then the gate closed behind her, and she took again her place in the gay world. There she found wealth, husband, children. Ten years passed by, and wealth departed—husband and children died.

Weary and sick of it all, she sought again the remembered walls and asked for the Superioress. To her astonishment she heard her own name. Then came questions, and she found that she had never been missed. Some woman, with the keys, had filled all her duties with the fidelity of a nun and the patience of a saint. Death made a vacancy, and she was chosen the head of the convent.

The woman sought her old cell, and found her old black raiment, as if just put off. The image of the Virgin had accepted the trust, and filled it for ten years, to save the name of the sinful woman.

As she told this, with her eyes unnaturally bright, and her frame quivering with the high excitement of belief and conviction, I grew alarmed. She was not a believer in the Catholic religion, and her quiet scorn of all pretense made her the last one to credit a modern miracle. Evidently the old story had impressed her when she heard it among the Sisters. But why revive it now and tell it to me? I hid my feelings, however, and laughingly thanked her for the second-hand fiction.

She shook my arm in her earnestness, and cried out:

"It is not fiction—it is all true. And now comes the secret that I could not breathe while under locks and bars and fear. My name is not Maria, but Mary. I was the one who kept the place of the nun till she came! Ah, you did not know who was beside you all last night, going through the dark! I am Mary, the Virgin Mother of God!"

I felt a terror creeping through me, as it the marrow in my bones were ice. My voice could have been little less strange than hers, as I said:

"For my sake—for your sake—for the Lord's sake—don't talk so! You frighten me! It is blasphemy! Don't try to frighten me—be quiet!"

She sprang up, shouting, rather than saying:

"You shall not be frightened, nor I either! I resume my power! I am the Lady of the Universe—I am the Queen of Heaven! I have chosen you, and behold, you are a king!"

I tried to draw her to the seat, but she drew violently away from my hold, and her mood changed.

"You are creeping along," she said, "and they are after us. You go slow on purpose. I never will be taken! I will drive—I will fly!"

And, seizing the reins, she grasped the whip, which stood in its socket, and violently struck the horse.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Wade Hampton's Appearance.

Gov. Hampton is a fine specimen of physical manhood, standing full six feet high in the clear, barring both heels. His form is willowy, but well knit and compact. His complexion is swarthy, tinged with enough of the rose scate hue to indicate a good liver—one who does not intend to die in debt to his stomache. In his movements he is quick, and his manner graceful. His eyes are deep brown, almost black, and they sparkle with a good deal of animation. They are expressive eyes, of the kind which reflects the inner feeling. His hair is black, though there are places where gray is making sad inroad. He wears side whiskers and mustache, the latter ending where the former begins, something after the style of Senator Burnside, though the whiskers do not stand out so prominently as do those of the Rhode Island Senator. Both mustache and whiskers are tinged with just enough gray to serve as a reminder of the inroads of time. He wears a faultless white shirt front, with pearl buttons, and a full black suit, the coat cut frock. He is of that class of men who have attractiveness which is noticed in a crowd.

Brain Food.

There is no doubt that fish forms an excellent—indeed, a very superior in brain food. But the "scientists" are all wrong in the reason they assign for this fact. It is not because fish possesses such an abundance of phosphorous; but arises from that concentration of all the faculties of the mind, which are required while eating fish, in order to successfully separate the bones from the fish, and to avoid swallowing the bones. This concentration exercises every faculty of the mind at once; and when one lives on a fish diet this constant exercise of all the mental faculties, keeping the mind closely to the business in hand—or rather in the mouth—strengthens and trains the brain in all directions, as no rigid course in mathematics or mental philosophy possibly can do. The phosphorescent theory will do for those who delight in far-fetched and fanciful reasons for things, but this latter theory will strike the average common sense of every reader as the more rational one.—Peoria Democrat.

"Now, then, state your case," said a Detroit lawyer the other day, as he put the five dollar bill away in his vest pocket. "Well," began his client, "suppose the man living next door wants to put a barn right up against my line, coming within two feet of my house?" "He can't do it, sir—can't do any such thing," replied the lawyer. "But I want to put my barn right up against his line," remarked the client. "Oh—ah—yes, I see. Well, sir, go right ahead and put your barn there. All the law in the case is on your side."

A MILWAUKEE chap kissed his girl about forty times right straight along, and when he stopped the tears came into her eyes, and she said, in a sad tone of voice, "Ah! John, I fear you have ceased to love me." "No, I haven't," replied John, "but I must breathe."

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

YOU can't expect a lawyer to dress well who never gets a suit.

TO every man there is given just time to mind his own business.

A NEW YORK dandy, wishing to be witty, accosted an old rag-man as follows: "You take all sorts of trumpery in your cart, don't you?" "Yes; jump in, jump in!"

"PAPA," said a little Western boy, "why don't women have whiskers?" "Because, my boy," was the reply, "their jaws are never still long enough for them to grow."

BAD luck is simply a man with his hands in his pockets and a pipe in his mouth, looking to see how it will come out. Good luck is a man of pluck, with his sleeves rolled up and working to make it come out right.

A BAND of counterfeiters confined in the jail at Knoxville, Tenn., have been successfully operating in their old business. Molds for nickles, twenty-five and fifty cent pieces, together with metal for molding, were found in several cells, and the men had been manufacturing the coins and sending them out by the wife of one of the gang.

A SWISS boatman pulled a would-be suicide out of Lake Geneva. An hour or two after, the boatman discovered the same man hanging by the neck to a tree, but did not interfere this time. The Magistrate summoned him to answer why he did not prevent the suicide, and he replied that he supposed the gentleman had only hung himself up to dry.

A PAIR of engaged lovers in Kentucky decided to marry inexpensively. They rode about in Nelson County day after day in order to casually meet a minister or a Justice of the Peace, so that the rite might be performed in so quiet a way that no fee would be expected. After a week of this effort, with seven sad separations at nightfall, they met with success.

"MY wife tells the truth three times a day," remarked a jocose fellow, at the same time casting a very mischievous glance at her. "Before rising in the morning, she says, 'O, dear, I must get up, but I don't want to.' After breakfast, she adds, 'Well, I suppose I must go to work, but I don't want to.' And she goes to bed saying, 'There, I have been passing all day, and haven't done anything.'"

DIP the Atlantic Ocean dry with a teaspoon; twist your heel into the toe of your boot; send up fishing-hooks with balloons and fish for stars; get astride a gossamer and chase a comet; choke a mosquito with a brick-bat—in short, prove all things hitherto considered impossible to be possible, but never attempt to coax a woman to say she will when she has made up her mind to say she won't.

THE following is, perhaps, one of the most laughable incidents that has ever occurred in reference to a locked up jury: A Gallaway bailiff, having been questioned as to whether he had spoken to the jury during the night, gravely answered, "No, my lord; they kept calling out for me to bring them whisky; but I aways said, 'Gentlemen of the jury, it is my duty to tell you that I am sworn not to speak to you.'"

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

W. L. RIDDELL,
Editor and Proprietor.

BURLINGTON, KY., MAY 3.

It seems that there are some objections made to the coupling of the Nominating Convention with the primary election provided for by the Executive Committee of the county. The objection urged is on the ground that the Convention may prevent the will of the people as expressed at the primary election. This appears to us to be a mistaken idea, as the express purpose of the Convention is to result in a choice made by a majority, and not by a plurality vote,as might be the result in a primary election when there are more than two candidates on the track. The vote cast in each district gives each candidate his proportion of the delegates to which the district is entitled. If in one district a candidate gets no votes at the primary election he will be entitled to no part of the delegate vote of that district in the Convention; if in another district he receives all the votes cast, he, on the same principle, receives the entire delegate vote of that district in the Convention. This rule holds good, let him receive any number of votes in any district. In the Convention after the first ballot the hindmost candidate is dropped, giving his friends an opportunity to support their second choice among the candidates, a privilege of which they are deprived by the primary election alone, and a trouble sought to be remedied by having the primary election followed by the Convention. We fail to see where any injustice will be done in deciding the contest by a majority vote instead of a plurality vote,as might result without the intervention of the Convention. The aspiration of none of the gentlemen offering for County Representative, are so great as to create within their breasts such a desire for the office as to render them regardless of the wishes of a majority portion of their party, and claim a right to the nomination simply upon a plurality vote, when it whould be evident that some one of his opponents was the choice of the majority. Were there but two candidates for the Legislature then a primary election would answer all the purposes. The Committee has given candidates a long time in which to present their claims and have them considered by the party.

There are many who think the United States will be greatly benefited by the Eastern war because of the increase of the price of articles of provision which the belligerent countries will purchase of this. That the war will increase the price of many things can not be denied, but at the same time we must consider what class of men will be benefited and what class will be injured. Under the first class comes the rich speculators with which the country abounds, while in the second will be found the millions of poor men in this country who depend on day-labor for their support. While the Eastern war may double the price of provisions in this country, the amount of labor required remains the same, and laborers' wages that were merely sufficient to provide for a support before will be just half enough to keep up the supplies of necessaries. So we see that the weight still rests upon the shoulders of the poor man, and he has the burden to bear.

The Eastern war is no longer in expectancy but a reality. The first battle between the Russians and Turks was fought last week on the small stream which forms the Asiatic boundary between the two empires. This conflict may become general among the foreign powers in which event it will be one of the bloodiest wars known. England is preparing an army of thirty or forty thousand men to dispatch to any point where English interests may require protection, and the Greek Government is arming itself, but at present intends occupying a neutral position. It seems that all the Governments now neutral are preparing for open conflict at a moment's warning. Gen. Sherman thinks the war now waging will culminate in the greatest outbreak which has occurred for centuries past. He thinks Austria will soon be in it and England will follow before Constantinople is taken.

Southgate, one of the band that robbed the Indiana National Bank of $20,000, was captured in Norwalk, Ohio, a few days since.

A Washington special to the Cincinnati Gazette, in speculating upon the political complexion of the next United States Senate, says: "The election of Spofford, as Democratic Senator from Louisiana, revives the comment upon a small majority in the Senate. If Judge Davis is counted as a Republican and Spofford is seated, there are but three majority according to the strictest construction, and if Eustis is seated from Louisiana (as it is said Senator Morton declares he should be), the Republican majority will be reduced to two votes. This, in view of the peculiar condition of politics, is too small for any practical party purpose. There are already some indications that the Democrats may attempt to reorganize the Senate in December with a Democratic President pro tempore, and that they expect to secure this reorganization with votes from two or three Republicans who have become hostile to the Administration. In fact this matter has received so much attention from the Democrats, and their investigation of the present feelings of several Republicans has created so much confidence, that it is almost certain that the movement for reorganizing the officers of the Senate on a Democratic basis may begin at the June session. There are several Republicans who have long been actively opposed to some of the best officers of the Senate. Of these there are enough from the South who are embittered by the President's policy to control the organization, and it is expected by the Democrats that a combination can be successfully made which shall give the Democrats force enough to accomplish their purposes, provided the Democrats will aid in removing such Republicans as these men dislike."

Elsewhere will be found the valedictory of Packard after having been bulldozed by Mr. Hayes. Packard still denies any other Government than that the one over which he presided was the legal Government of Louisiana. But in the farewell, Packard did not proclaim that his claim to the Governorship of Louisiana was founded on the identical votes that chose the Hayes electors. Mr. Packard had intimated that he would talk on that subject, but that seems to have slipped his mind.

By the Western Tobacco Journal of last week we learn that the receipts of tobacco in Cincinnati during the week were rather small for the season, but the market was generally stronger with prices a shade higher on lower grades. In Louisville the receipts were heavy, resulting in large sales for the week. The market closed strong for good grades. The highest cutting leaf sold during the week for $16.

Minort, a colored Republican, has introduced a resolution in the South Carolina Legislature requesting that body to impeach Associate Justice Wright, the black Judge of the Supreme Court of that State. Minort calculates on a large number of his party as well as many Democrats following him in his effort to impeach Wright.

Accounts from different points in Minesota, Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri are encouraging with respect to the prospects for wheat and corn. A large amount of seeding has been done within the last few weeks, and the acreage will largely surpass that of previous years.

The fighting in the East has sprung the grain market to almost an alarming extent. Men have been almost wild in buying and selling wheat for several days, and a small decline now in the market would bring a financial panic upon many of the speculators.

The report now comes up that Packard will not leave New Orleans till he gets documentary proofs that the Hayes electors were counted in by fraud. Packard will not bother himself about the Hayes electors. He is satisfied.

His skull was mashed and his body terribly mangled, and he died in a few hours.

—The Elizabethtown News says that Mr. R. M. Park, of that place, purchased last winter from a Canadian dealer, a premium Lincoln ewe, which was sheared Thursday and yielded 16½ pounds of wool, ranging from 15 to 16 inches in length. This ewe has twin buck lambs, three weeks old, which weigh 25 pounds each. The News also states that Mr. Philip Arnold, of Hardin County, sheared 44 head of sheep, among which was a Leicester buck which sheared 24 pounds of wool, measuring 21 inches in length, the texture being remarkably fine. The 44 sheep yielded 619 pounds of wool; an average of a little over 14 pounds to the fleece.

—Hayden English and Fielding Sweeney met in Elizabethtown, April 26th, got drunk, fell out and quarreled about thirty cents owing Sweeney by Englisli. Hayden left the scene to procure a pistol. Returning in a few moments he found that Sweeney had been joined by his brother, a noted desperado, and together they had jumped upon Horace English, a son of Hayden, and had succeeded in cutting his throat severely in three places, one gash serving the wind-pipe. Hayden opened fire, his first shot not taking effect. The Sweeneys then made for him, and succeeded in giving him four severe cuts upon the face and neck, by which time Hayden "got in his work" effectually with his pistol upon Fielding Sweeney, putting a ball through his head. He expired in a few moments. James Sweeney escaped without injury, and is safely lodged in jail. Hayden English had a hasty examination, and was released upon $1,500 bail. Horace English bled severely, but prompt medical attendance has saved a life of but little value to the community. The English family have a long and bloody record. The Sweeneys are also noted for their fighting qualities, having been interested in several fracases within a few years. Horace English was in the Confederate services, and killed his Lieutenant besides shooting three other men.

We have not the greatest confidence that the next Legislature will do the square thing by Judge McManama and his court. One of the leading statesmen of Kentucky informed us just before the last session of the Legislature that as soon as it was convened the court would be "wiped out." But it was not.—Ticket.

Packard's Farewell Address.

State of Louisiana,
Executive Department,
New Orleans, La., April 25, 1877.

To the Republicans of Louisiana:

On this day, the fifteenth anniversary of the surrender of New Orleans to the forces of the United States, it becomes my duty to announce to you that the aid and countenance of the National government has been withdrawn from the Republicans of Louisiana, and that a government revolutionary in form is practically on the point of usurping control of affairs in this State. I recall the circumstances of the last electoral campaign only to thank you for the fidelity to principle you then displayed. The Republican party, as you know, entered upon the canvass united and stronger than ever before; it had enlisted under its banners an influential class of native born citizens of old Whig antecedents who, to their honor be it said, still remain faithful to the principles they espoused and the Government they supported. It was further strengthened by the absence from the State an opposition of that class whose previous adherence to the party had brought it into disrepute. These causes combined to bring about the remarkable success achieved by the Republican party in all doubtful parishes with one exception, and even where the white population preponderated, and which gave us a majority in the Legislature. Except where organized violence prevailed, our State ticket carried every Republican parish, and also a number of parishes which, in the last Legislature, were represented by Democratic members. I briefly summarize the historical events that have since occurred.

The General Assembly met on the 1st of January last, organized with a full legal quorum in both Houses, passed laws which were approved by the Executive of the State, and on the 2d of January last canvassed and declared the vote for Governor. At this time the nation was agitated by doubt as to the result of the Presidential election, with expectation that Samuel J. Tilden might possibly become President of the United States; and, with no hope of success otherwise, my opponent in the late campaign established a most Legislature, and went through the form of an inauguration, in order that there might be a resemblance of a government, which Mr. Tilden, if inaugurated, could possibly galvanize into vitality. In the few days that followed, General Nicholls and his adherents were encouraged by the unexpected refusal of President Grant to recognize the State government, or to respond to the constitutional call of the Legislature, though he questioned the legality of neither. On the 9th of January I had scarcely taken my seat in the Executive Chair when the White League rose in armed insurrection, and, by a coup de main, took possession of the Supreme Court, arsenals and stations of the Metropolitan Police, all located at the Capitol. Then came orders from President Grant establishing status quo, the practical effect of which was to confirm the insurgents in the advantages they had gained, and to prevent any effort to dispossess them. On the inauguration of President Hayes, the State authorities made propositions to organize a militia force for the defense of the State government. General Nicholls' police seized upon the recruiting officers and imprisoned them for treason, without the benefit of bail or writ of habeas corpus. I telegraphed this fact to President Hayes, asking if these men could be retaken by the United States forces, all civil remedies having been exhausted. The President replied:

"Your dispatch of the 24th is received. The Secretary of War has telegraphed to General Augur that a commission will shortly visit Louisiana. In the meantime, the President desires that the situation remain unchanged."

The commission came. In the meantime, the Nicholls government had crystallized into shape. So far from permitting the situation to remain unchanged, it had broken into the Tax Collector's office of the city, had taken forcible control of State institutions, and had strengthened itself on all sides. Notwithstanding this, however, the commission found a legal Legislature still in session at the State-house, and my title unassailed and unassailable, except by force. The result of their labors during the two weeks they remained here is known to all men. They induced a number of the members of the legal House of Representatives to take seats in the Nicholls House, thus giving it a Returning Board quorum. Prior to the meeting of the Legislature, the Democrats claimed to have elected only sixty members of the House, one less than a quorum. One, at least, of the members so claimed by them was absent on the 1st of January last. No Republican or Independent member would consent to act with the Nicholls House, and consequently, in order to obtain even the appearance of an organization, they had been compelled to call to their aid three men defeated at the polls, whose election had not previously been claimed. The inquiry, therefore, seems pertinent in this connection, if a Returning Board quorum was so effective for Nicholls' claim, why was it that such quorum was ignored while it remained faithful to the legal government of the State? That government had a Returning Board quorum from the day on which the General Assembly convened, and the Legislature, duly organized, remained in legal existence until disintegrated by the direct action of the commission.

This result having been achieved, it is a matter of record that congratulatory messages were exchanged between the President and his commission. On the following day the President, by a formal order made public through the press, directed the United States troops occupying the building in the vicinity of the State-house should be removed to their barracks. These troops had been placed there by President Grant, without the formal call of the Governor, to protect the Returning Board while counting the vote for President.

I firmly believe that, had the legal government been recognized, it could have sustained itself without the intervention of troops; but the order for the withdrawal, issued under circumstances and in the manner that it was, clearly indicated even the moral support which the legal government of Louisiana should have received from the National Administration would be denied. Had the General Assembly continued in session in the State-house, I should have deemed it my duty to have asserted the right of my government to the last, notwithstanding the withdrawal of troops; but, with the Legislature disintegrated, and no prospect of present success, I can not task your tried fidelity by asking you longer to continue to aid me in the struggle I have thus far maintained.

I therefore announce to you that I am compelled to abstain for the present from all active assertion of my government. I waive none of my legal rights, but yield only to superior force. I am not wholly discouraged by the fact that, one by one, the Republican State governments of the South have been forced to succumb to force or fraud or policy. Louisiana, the first State rehabilitated after the war, is the last State whose government thus falls, and I believe it will be among the first to raise itself again to the plane of equal and honest representation. I advise that you maintain your party organization and continue to battle for the rights of citizenship and free government. We strive for these, and not for man or men. It grieves me beyond expression that the heroic efforts you have made and the cruel sufferings you have undergone to maintain Republican principles in Louisiana have had this bitter ending. To those who have so gallantly stood by me in the long contest we have passed through, I tender my heartfelt thanks. To all I counsel peace, patience, fortitude, and a firm trust that eventually right and justice will prevail.

S. B. Packard, Governor.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

St. Louis, Mo., April 28th, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

This evening closes another week of feverrisk and excitement among those with us, who make their bread and butter on 'Change. If you were ever at a big fire, or could have witnessed the burning of the Southern Hotel, you would probably be better prepared to form some idea of each day's proceedings on 'Change. Men from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. each day running to and fro, gathering in groups here and there on the Exchange floor, crying at the top of their voices "who will buy June corn? I will sell May corn! I will buy June corn!" and so on. I declare if an old fashioned, good sensed farmer, of olden times, could have looked in upon us this week, without knowing the real object of our meeting, he could have come to no other conclusion than that the Saint Louis Exchange patrons were a set of mad men and fit only for a lunatic asylum. We have been a member of the Exchange for 18 years, and we have never witnessed any thing like the present week. From seven to eight million bushels of corn changed hands with us this week on option. How is that for high? For instance, to give you an idea of the excitement, this very day between the hours of 12 m. and 1 p. m., Mr. M. P. H. came running to the regular Call Board while they were crying May No. 2 wheat, and mistaking the call for No. 3 he offered 5,000 bushels at $2 10 which was taken before the words were fairly out of his mouth and thus he went down about $750. Our next-door neighbor sold 5,000 bushels of wheat, day before yesterday, that he bought about two days since, and pocketed a profit of $2,150 on that small amount of wheat in so short a time. Wheat closes this evening about 30 cents per bushel higher than this time last week, the market being, say $2 22 for No. 2 and $2 10 to $2 12 for No. 3.

Corn is about 9 cents per bushel higher than this evening last week, No. 2 closing to-day at 53 to 54 cents cash. Rye is about 10 cents per bushel higher, ranging from 95 cents to $1 per bushel. Oats have advanced the present week about 6cents per bushel, No. 3 selling to-day at 44 cents. And all this advance and excitement brought about by the European war news.

The Coroner's jury closed its investigation in the hotel disaster yesterday evening and have published a verdict. Total number of lives known to have been lost—12. They vote a censure against the lessees: First, In that while providing the necessary material for extinguishing fires they had provided no means for their use. Second, In keeping in the store room and the wine room of the hotel, a large amount of inflammable material without adequate watching. Third, In moving from the office the gong necessary for the alarming of the guests of the hotel. Fourth, In not employing a sufficient number of watchmen, having only one man on watch on the upper floors. Fifth, In a lack of rules and instructions to employes as to their duties in time of fire. Sixth, In not waking guests sooner, &c. The jury was composed of six of our very best citizens, who declare they will never be caught in another trap of the kind. They were ten days thus engaged, examined 92 witnesses, and each received 50 cents per day for his services. Not a very pleasant, and certainly not a very paying business.

We have had rain almost every day this week. Bob A. Long.

LAST Friday evening when the 'bus drove up to the Postoffice, Capt. Bradford ascended to the hurricane deck to deliver the U. S. Mail, when to his surprise no such article could be found in the cargo aboard. The Captain craned his neck as if endeavoring to scan the entire route traversed, and with a "sulphurous" remark declared he knew it was aboard at the last station. About this time another vehicle was discovered in the distance, which, upon arriving, dispelled the Captain's fears of a total loss by delivering its treasure trove, which was the mail sack. The sack was picked up near half way between Burlington and Florence, about one mile "beyant" where Mr. B. thought he knew it was on deck.

THE race for Town Marshal in Burlington is assuming shape. The candidates, so far as we have heard, are Geo. Blythe and E. J. Butts. If the boys are industrious, they may each receive more than a few votes.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Walton.

Married, on Thursday, the 26th, by the Rev. B. F. Bristow, Mr. Lon Voshell and Miss Lib Stansifer. Attendants, Mr. Bob Willis and Miss Rose Stansifer, a sister to the bride.

Walton was favored with a most interesting lecture on the evening of the 25th by the Rev. Bailey. His subject was "The Chinese." Mr. Baily is well qualified to deliver a lecture on that subject, as he has lived with his father and mother in China, who were missionaries there for a number of years. He has also appointed a lecture for next Friday night, and will tell us still more about the "Heathen Chinee."

A debate at the school-house on last Friday. "Affirmed, That wealth has a greater influence on society than intelligence." J. N. Stewart affirmed, Judge Youell in the negative. Decided in the negative. The society then anjourned sine die.

A Sabbath-school was organized at the Baptist Church on Sunday, with Mr. Stewart as Superintendent.

The men of our town, these last few weeks, wear a most subdued, cast down and hungry look; cause, house cleaning—man's horror and detestation. The ladies are all in uniform—old calico dresses, sleeves rolled above elbow, long apron, armed with scrubbing-brush, soap and pan of water. Just wait, gentlemen, until they are through, and then the dinners with which they will regale you will entirely obliterate from your minds all remembrance of your few weeks of fasting.

That unreliable prophet, Madame Rumor, has been whispering in our ears that a popular beau of this and Verona neighborhoods is soon to lay aside the freedom of his bachelorhood for the honds of matrimony, and has selected a Verona belle for companion on the voyage of life. And, if we may judge from the papering, painting, repairing, &c., which has been going on in a house a short distance from here, we may possibly have another wedding to chronicle soon.

Mr. Park Holton has moved from Warsaw to the old Rogers homestead, which he has bought.

Mrs. Bruce has moved into her new house.

We noticed the smiling countenance of Bob Allen at church on Sunday. Walton, for some reason, seems very attractive to this youth. NEMO.

Petersburg.

With a warm and hearty welcome do we greet our friend L. H. Voshell in his new re-incarnation of double-blessedness. He and his wife spent the evening and night of last Friday at Mr. T. J. Grant's in town, and were called on during the evening by several of their friends. There was also a wedding in town, Wednesday night of last week, when Mr. A. J. Buchanan and Miss Fannie Alloway were married. Bro. Bristow was the officiating clergyman on both occasions.

Rev. S. X. Hall will hold the third quarterly meeting of this circuit at the M. E. Church here, next Saturday and Sunday. Rev. B. F. Bristow will be present, and there is a probability that the meeting will be protracted into the next week. Everybody is invited to attend.

The Odd Fellows' Celebration at Lawrenceburg, last week, was quite a magnificent affair. The leading features of the occasion were a steamboat excursion, a grand procession accompanied by two brass bands, an interesting speech by Mr. French, of Indianapolis, and a large supper, free to the members and their families.

Petersburg has the whooping-cough. This is a plain, simple statement, and if any one is skeptical about it, let him attend the first public assembly he hears of in town, and get his doubts all barked away by the whoopers.

The body of Mr. Bradley, who was drowned last Sunday, 21st ult., had not been discovered up to this writing, 29th ult., although a considerable effort has been made to find it. It might be proper to say that it was Mrs. Schramm and not Mrs. McNeely who was so nearly drowned by the same accident in which Mr. Bradley lost his life. The latter lady was not in the skiff at all. The party who furnished the RECORDER with its published account of the accident in the issue of last week, was wrong in every essential particular supplied; but as a correct account of the sad affair was contained in the unpublished portion of this correspondence last week, it is useless to repeat it.

LATER—April 30.—The remains of Mr. Bradley were found floating in the river yesterday, near Carlton in this county, and arrived here last night about 9 o'clock on the G. W. Check. The inquest was held by Thos. Stephens, a Magistrate in that district acting Coroner in the stead of Jas. Shepherd, and a verdict rendered of death by accidental drowning. The remains were buried in the cemetery here at 2 o'clock to-day.

Shearing sheep, planting corn and electioneering are about equally dividing the attention of the people of this vicinity. There are an unusual number of sheep to clip, about an average acrenge of corn to plant, and everybody is going to vote for Norman and Terrill at the approaching election. It is to be hoped the Democratic Committee will so far reconsider their late announced decision as that the voter may cast his vote for the candidate for the Legislature direct, as is the case in his vote for Senator.

GALLATIN COUNTY—Glencoe.

A few days since a son of Erin, residing at our neighboring town, Sparta, while in a state of intoxication, and during the absence of his fellow boarders, yielded to temptation, searched the most remote recesses of a trunk, where there were disclosed to his view two razors, a gold ring and other valuables. He pocketed the discoveries and came to Glencoe. This, we presume, he thought was a safe retreat for thieves and robbers. Entering a barber shop, he deposited one of his razors for a shave; and, by the way, we wish to say, in a parenthesis, that Frank Grubbs, our barber, is difficult to excel in his vocation. Ere he departed, a band of Spartans, equally as bloodthirsty as those of ancient times under Leonidas, made their appearance, captured the runaway, recovered the stolen property, and released him, giving such advice as only an Irishman can.

On Tuesday last the most disgraceful riot occurred here that it has ever been our painful duty to chronicle. Joedike Spencer, a faithful adherent of King Alcohol, and Tim Sulls had a difficulty, after which Spencer repaired to his home and armed himself with a good revolver and returned to Glencoe, intimating to several gentlemen that, ere Old Sol shrunk away in the far West, he would launch the bark of Sulls on the boundless sea of Eternity. Sulls, upon hearing these numerous threats, prepared to make a similar disposition of Spencer. Later in the day the two combatants met, and each began a very spirited work of death. Six shots were fired, three of which Sulls was the unhappy recipient of. The wounds, though not serious, were sufficient to put him hors de combat. He immediately gave himself up, had his examining trial and was acquitted. Spencer escaped unhurt, evaded the authorities, and is now gone where the woodbine twineth.

The Rev. L. H. Salin, familiarly known in Kentucky as the Converted Jew, closed the most interesting series of meetings, on last Tuesday a-week, ever held at this place. During the meeting (sixteen days), though a very busy time, the attendance was large, and better order could not have been asked. There was something very attractive in his preaching, aside from his proficiency as a theologian. His glowing eloquence and his rhetorical figures all conspired to fix one's attention as if by magic, causing regret that his sermons, though generally of an hour and a half's duration, to seem too brief. The result of his efforts was that nineteen persons made the good confession to "read their title clear," and two backsliders returned to the care of the faithful fold, claiming to have felt themselves forgiven for having strayed from the Master's field. The converts received the ordinance of baptism and the hand of church fellowship on the last day of the meeting. Many of the tried "soldiers of the cross" wept tears of deep sorrow in extending to Bro. Salin the parting hand. While we regret that he is not among us, we rejoice that the effects wrought through his instrumentality will remain a living monument, as it were, of this noble man, since he has pointed out the necessity of a house of worship, and circulated a subscription list, securing $500 for this grand purpose. Well may it be said of him that—

"His armor is his honest thought.
And simple truth his utmost skill."

LETTER FROM VIRGINIA.

URBANA, VA., April 27th, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

A few days more, and I take my departure, and bid adieu to this charming valley, where I have battled through a hard winter, amid scenes of pleasure and social enjoyment, and wend my way homeward. After all, there is no place to me like Burlington, Ky., and I anticipate much pleasure in meeting friends on my return, with whom I expect to spend the remnant of my days. But I have to return alone. The anticipations of my friend S. B. H., your Texas correspondent, can not be realized this time, though attractions are very great, and my attachments very strong toward the angelic portion of fair forms abounding in the Old Dominion.

Passing through King and Queen and King William, two old royal counties, on to Richmond, where I expect to spend a few days with friends and viewing the many objects of interest to everyone who has a taste for the grand display of the fine arts, as well as the pride of country in looking on the statuary of noble statesmen of early days adorning the park surrounding the old Capitol, I hope to reach my home in the middle of May.

Everything here bears a charming aspect. New life seems to be instilled in all moving objects. Nature is spreading herself in putting on her beautiful spring garments; forest and fields rejoicing in songs of praise, in view of the bountiful prospects for man and beast.

Should I stay long enough in Richmond to gather anything of interest, you may hear from me there. I am, truly, the RECORDER'S friend, F. SMITH.

P. S.—Mr. Lewis P. Boughman, of this place, a clever young gentleman with a small family, proposes to locate in your town and carry on the saddle and harness business. Seeing that my old friend, J. M. Riddell, has moved to Williamstown, I have strongly recommended the situation, believing we shall find in him a valued citizen. Should he receive a favorable response to references which I gave him, he may be with you in a few days to arrange for a move. F. S.

THE FUTURE LIFE.

BY WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

How shall I know thee in the sphere which keeps
The disembodied spirits of the dead,
Where all of thee that time could wither sleeps—
And perishes among the dust we tread?

For I shall feel the stings of ceaseless pain
If there I meet thy gentle presence not,
Nor hear the voice I love, nor read again
In thy serenest eyes the tender thought.

Will not thy own meek heart demand me there?
That heart whose fondest throbs to me were given—
My name on earth was ever in thy prayer,
Shall it be banished from thy tongue in heaven?

In meadows fann'd by heaven's life-breathing wind
In the resplendence of that glorious sphere,
And larger movements of the unfettered mind,
Wilt thou forget the love that joined us here?

The love that lived through all the stormy past,
And meekly with my harsher nature bore,
And deeper grew, and tenderer, to the last,
Shall it expire with life, and be no more?

A happier lot than mine, and larger light
Await thee there, for thou has bow'd thy will
In cheerful homage to the rule of right,
And lovest all and renderest good for ill.

For me the sordid cares in which I dwell,
Shrink and consume the heart, as heat the scroll
And wrath has left its scar—that fire of hell
Has left its frightful sear upon my soul.

Yet, though thou wear'st the glory of the sky,
Wilt thou not keep the same beloved name,
The same fair thoughtful brow, and gentle eye,
Lovlier in heaven's sweet climate, yet the same.

Shalt thou not teach me, in that calmer home,
The wisdom that I learned so ill in this—
The wisdom that is love—till I become Thy fit companion in that land of bliss?

—Dramatic Review.

Teach Your Boys.

Teach them that a true lady may be found in calico, quite as frequently as in velvet.

Teach them that a common school education with common sense, is far better than a college education without it.

Teach them that one good, honest trade, well mastered, is worth a dozen beggarly 'professions.'

Teach them that honesty is the best policy—that it is better to be poor than to be rich on profits of crooked whisky, etc., and point your precepts by the examples of those who are now suffering the torments of the doomed.

Teach them to respect their elders and themselves.

Teach by your own example that smoking in moderation, though the least of the vices to which men are heirs, is disgusting to others and hurtful to themselves.

Teach them that God is no respector of sex, and when He gave the seventh commandment, He meant it for them as well as for their sisters.

Teach them that by indulging their depraved appetites in the worst forms of dissipation they are not fitting themselves to become the husbands of pure girls.

Teach them that it is better to be an honest man seven days in the week than to be a Christian(?) one day and a villain six days.

Crop Prospects.

From Washington we learn that the statistical crops of the Department of Agriculture report upon the condition of wheat in 868 counties of the winter wheat region. In 218 the returns are comparatively unfavorable. In 650 a condition varying from average to superior thrift is indicated. In the Atlantic States north of North Carolina and in those of the Ohio Valley there has been far less injury from frost than usual. Of 320 counties in the Ohio basin only 45 report below an average. Grasshopper ravages are reported in 22 counties of Eastern Kansas, from Nebraska to the Eastern Territory, and as far west as Saline County. The wheat growing district in Texas is also alive with grasshoppers, which threaten the destruction of the crops in several counties. More than 20 counties report the hatching of spring broods. There is an increase of the area of wheat in Texas, and the prospects are favorable with the exception of the grasshopper ravages. In the other cotton States a dry autumn and a variable winter have depressed the condition of the wheat below an average.

DID you ever notice what a different aspect everything wears in sunshine from what it does in the shadow? And did you ever think what an analogy there was between the sunlight of the cloudless skies and the sunshine that gleams into the darkened chambers of the human soul? How bright and beautiful are the golden beams that break the riven clouds to light up the world again after a succession of dark and stormy days. How happy and peaceful are the blissful words of hope that touch the heart and fill the soul with emotions of peace and joy after a long period of sorrow! There are none living who do not, in a greate ror less degree, have an influence over the earthly happiness of others. The sense of contributing to the pleasure of others augments our own happiness. Unselfishness, Christian charity and loving kindness are sunbeams of the soul.

Words in Season.

Whatever shall prove to be the Southern policy of the present Administration, it will cause disappointment, and consequent outcery, on the part of the colored people at the South. This disappointment and outcery will be seized upon and circulated throughout the Northern States by politicians, for the purpose of enlisting the sympathy of philanthropic men, and through this sympathy holding them to a party. The true friends of the colored freedmen have need, therefore, to be on their guard.

Our National Government is not a missionary board, with Dr. Mark Hopkins for President, with Secretaries of approved intelligence to administer the free-will offerings of Northern philanthropy, to promote the gradua betterment of the colored people. If any citizen be stirred by sympathy reaching toward the colored freedmen of the South, he may safely expend that sympathy in liberal contributions to the Peabody Fund, or to the treasury of any church or society that maintains schools, shops, churches among this needy people. But the United States Government is not a missionary board. It is not an educational commission. It is not a paternal government. It is a limited partnership between States, created by the people for certain commercial, financial and political purposes, clearly specified in the articles called THE CONSTITUTION.

Among these purposes, the protection of poor and ignorant citizens against their neighbors is not mentioned. Wives are not protected against tyrannous husbands. Farmers are not protected against middle-men. Wards are not protected against swindling guardians. The citizens of New York were not protected against Boss Tweed and his gang. In like manner, we should all remember that the Southern colored freedman is not entitled to protection or fostering care.

It was a mistake (a pardonable mistake) when, during the horrors of war, the Freedman's Bureau was established by Congress and went into operation. The nation has not yet recovered from the results of that mistake. Philanthropic people have not let go the notion that they can benefit the colored man through the agency of politicians. But, if any such labor be undertaken, it must, after a fearful waste of resources, fail wholly as to the desired result. No class of people has ever been, or can ever be, bettered by being made the pets of the government. The only certain result of such a mistaken policy toward the colored man will be, as it has been in our Indian affairs, the suffocation of simple-minded philanthropists in that bottomless mire of sham and dishonesty, the congenial lurking-place of the greedy and unprincipled agents of a nation's charity.

Charity is, indeed, a godlike trait of personal character, but it has no place in the machinery and administration of a government such as ours.

Philanthropy has done its last safe or sagacious political act in behalf of the colored freedman of the South when, by constitutional amendment, citizenship was conferred upon him, carrying with it the right to vote, to bear arms, to sue and be sued in the courts of the United States, and, in short, to take his chance with fellow-citizens in the general scramble which we call getting a living. If anything more than this be attempted in behalf of the colored man, it will be a departure from the theory and practice which alone make the Federal Government safe, or even tolerable.

If, then, the present Administration returns to this salutary form of Government and citizenship, the colored people at the South will at first lose their late leaders, who have flattered and lied to them inordinately. This will be to them a cruel disappointment, and they will make outery. When the outery comes, philanthropists and intelligent citizens at the North must stand firm, like the assistants of a surgeon when the patient shrieks at the first cut of the knife that is to save life—hear the cry, but stand firm. If the colored people ever rise, they must rise by the discipline of neighborly frictions. If they emerge from barbarism at all, they must follow the same costly lines by which all other races of men have come up to the estate of self-government.

This will be a long process. No act of legislature, no executive act, can make an oak tree grow, like a mushroom, in a night, or lift up childish savages to the stature of freedmen in a day.

The present Administration, returning to these salutary doctrines as to government and citizenship, will meet terrific opposition. The artillery of disaffected partisans is already shotted and trained against this policy, and the very moment that a return to the true theory of our National Government is announced, and the necessary suffering of the colored people begins, there will be a cannonade all along the line. Intelligent Republicans by thousands will greedily read newspaper articles, and will be swept passionately along the old, deep, anti-slavery channels into condemnation of the policy. But, I repeat, intelligent citizens must learn to expend their pious and philanthropic energies through appropriate channels other than the government.

The present lull, while the people are waiting hopefully, and politicians ferociously, for the announcement of a new policy, seems to me a good time to speak these "words in season." And I will venture to add that, if to any of my fellow-citizens they seem wise or weighty, will they serve the cause dear to us all by calling the attention of other readers to them?—Rev. Thos. K. Beecher in N. Y. Independent.

Not so Short a Session.

An impression appears to prevail that the extra session of Congress will be short, and confined to the dispute over the Army bill, and the deficiency in the pay of the navy caused by the diversion of half a million of the extra sum voted for that object only six weeks ago. This view is erroneous, and the reasons for it are plain.

The withdrawal of the troops from the State Houses of South Carolina and Louisiana, where they never had a constitutional right to go, will not end the controversy. The question remains, first, as to the size of the army; and secondly, as to the power of the Executive to employ the army of the United States, at his discretion, in regulating the internal concerns of the States, and the power of the House of Representatives to impose conditions as to the use of the army, in voting the supplies for its support. It is substantially a revival of the old struggle between the Crown and the Commons, which resulted in making the latter the governing power of England, by controlling the public purse, and upsetting Ministries at the will of a majority.

Therefore, besides the discussions on the reduction of the army, involving only retrenchment, there will come up the broader and more serious debate on the respective powers of the President and the House of Representatives. The Democrats are not likely to yield this point, because a principle is at stake which really effects the stability of free government. Besides, with a fraudulent and weak President in the White House, who can rely upon these pledges for the future?

An investigation will doubtless be immediately ordered by the House, to examine into the administration of the Treasury during several years past; and another to trace the money granted for pay of the navy and applied to other uses, in violation of law, and also the million of dollars received from the sale of the Philadelphia Navy Yard which was not disbursed as law the directed. These inquiries can not be properly conclude in any brief period, if they are made searching and earnest. Consequently, they will obstruct an early adjournment.

The bill from the Judicial Committee reported by Judge Thurman, with the co-operation of Senator Edmonds, requiring the Pacific railroads to create a sinking fund for the extinction of their indebtedness to the Government, will be brought forward early, and urged to the decisive vote. Of course it will be resisted by the Rings which combined for its defeat at the last session, and who see in that legislation the downfall of other schemes for spoliating the Treasury. These and various pending measures would be sufficient in themselves to prolong the session beyond the brief time which has been assigned for its duration. But they will sink into comparative insignificance by the side of the great battle between the friends and foes of the Administration. That internecine strife is now taking as distinctive shape as the impending war between Russia and Turkey.

Preparations are now going on at Washington on both sides, looking to this conflict as if a formal declaration of war had been made between the aggressive Republicans who spurn Hayes' Southern policy and his bribes to carry it, and the so-called friends of the Administration, who crave the crumbs that fall from the Executive table. A plan of campaign has been devised, which will be opened with vigor at the meeting of Congress. The Old Guard will be on duty.

The indications are that the extra session will be long and intensely exciting, from beginning to end. The Republican party has reached a point when it must move forward with new life, or die ignominiously. Nothing can save it but bold and energetic leadership. The summer heat of the capital would ordinarily drive Congress into retreat. But unless an epidemic should break out, that cause will no more operate now than it did in 1849–50, when a condition of things not unlike that which now exists, held Congress together from the 3d of December to the 30th of the following September.—N. Y. Sun.

The Evidence Accumulating.

The evidence implicating Brigham Young in the Mormon massacre seems seems to be accumulating. It is now charged that portions of Jon D. Lee's confession were suppressed, which directly implicated Young in the Mountain Meadow affair. Another dispatch is printed relative to an order which was issued in 1858 by Brigham Young for the murder of a party of teamsters who were being escorted to the Mountain Rocks by Mormons. Mr. George Lowery, of Haverhill, Mass., says he is one of the few survivors of that band Before starting with the Mormons the teamsters got wind of the order, and bought arms from apostate Mormons. These they secreted in their baggage, and when one day's march from Salt Lake City brought them out. He pretends that this procedure saved their lives, as in a party of forty-two the Mormons only allowed one shotgun and one revolver. The story bears many marks of improbabilities, but in view of the mass of evidence which is growing about Young it deserves careful examination.

"ALLOW FOR THE CRAWL."

BY JOHN G. SAXE.

You have often, no doubt, had occasion to note,
Though the garment, at first, seemed certain to please,
That, after some wearing the sleeve of your coat
Toward the shoulder was crawling, by easy degrees;
And that's what the clothier, of course, had in his mind,
When he said to his customer: "Long?—not at all!
The sleeve is all right—as you'll presently find—
In cutting a coat you allow for the crawl!"

The expression was one wholly new to me then;
But it sets me a thinking how well it applies
Not merely to coats but to women and men,
In matters of life as they daily arise;
Consider the shrinkage of human affairs—
The promise, how great; the performance, how small!
And lest disappointment should come unawares,
Remember the sleeve—and "allow for the crawl!"

The statesman who asks for your ballot to save
Your country, so rashly imperiled to-day,
May covet an office and not be a knave,
Whatever the fierce opposition may say.
But the "platform" to which he so valiantly clings,
By which he proposes to stand or to fall—
"Resolutions," remember, are slippery things,
And in politics always "allow for the crawl!"

You are in love with the sweetest of girls,
An angel! in hoops—only wanting the wings!
(If angels could purchase such beautiful curls)
Like a seraph she smiles; like a siren she sings!
Ah! splendid and vast are the fancies of youth;
But down to plain facts they finally fall:
And happy the couple who, finding the truth,
In conjugal kindness, "allow for the crawl!"

In brief, recollect that in human affairs;
In social connections; in travel and trade;
In courtship, and marriage; in sermons and prayers,
Some grains of concession must always be made.
In fine, be a prudent, though generous man;
Unfriendly with none, veracious with all;
Believe in your neighbors as much as you can,
And always be sure to "allow for the crawl!"

From Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.]

MY BRIEF ROMANCE.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE ACCIDENT.

Probably the noble brute had never been struck before, for he bounded almost straight up under the lash, and then caught the bit in his teeth, and dashed away like the lightning. Half frantic myself, I strove to hold her in the vehicle, and to get the reins from her hands. I was conscious of our swift motion through the dust, and that her mood became one of terror of the old days as she screamed:

"Murder! murder! help! They will kill me! They will beat me to death! Help!

This increased the speed only, and in another moment we were out of the road and dashed violently against a tree. Whether wheel or body struck first, I know not, or how the horse tore loose from the harness, or we were thrown from the vehicle. I found myself lying by a log, half buried in leaves, the carriage a wreck, and the animal gone.

I arose, bruised and sore, my left arm useless, and saw my wife lying near me insensible. In falling, her head had struck a rough stone, and was bleeding freely from a large wound. She was not dead but might die, as I was almost helpless. There was no water near, and no help.

Sore and bruised as I was, my heart suffered worst, for the deep pity for her, blent with the accusations of conscience, that, from silly romance, I had eloped with a maniac, and, perhaps, caused her death. It was little consolation to remember how perfect the deception had been, and how reasonable the story. The insanity was beyond all doubt, and I, the ignorant victim, had involved her, the innocent.

Perhaps I was not so far from madness myself, when relief came in the welcome sound of wheels. A stout farmer, in a light market-wagon drove rapidly up. The flying horse had passed his gate, as he was starting the other way, and he came to see who was hurt. He did not wait to ask questions, but helped me at once with my insensible burden.

His house was not far off, and as we went I saw him look often and curiously at the pale face; and I asked him if he thought she was certain to die.

"No," he said, "it is not that, but she looks so much like a poor crazy girl that used to live as neighbor to me."

That was more proof, had I needed any, but I did not reply.

Carefully was she laid at last in the great white bed, and the wounds and bruises (for there were many) dressed by the farmer's wife. When the surgeon was sent for in the nearest village, I thought I would rather face one I knew than the relatives; and so I wrote a brief note to the asylum physician. I had a strange repugnance to surrendering my charge to those who were probably—yea, undoubtedly, her father and mother.

The next day the principal physician of the asylum came, and I told him all.

He was grave and stern, but I did not blame him. One thing alone pleased me. He took entire charge of the patient; and saying that life hung on a thread, turned all away from the chamber save the farmer's wife. Even the parents, who came soon, were excluded, as any agitation might prove fatal. I only learned that the poor runaway was alive, but hardly conscious of anything.

Of course I could claim no rights under our void and null marriage, and I went to the village tavern to wait results. I did not care to be seen at home.

CHAPTER IX.

CONVALESCENT.

Days and weeks passed—two months, and nothing remarkable, save that the doctor I had summoned left the entire care of the asylum to his assistant, and watched the poor woman, day and night, keeping all others away. I knew that she lived, with some hope of recovery, but he generally paid no attention to my questions.

One day he came to my room, and said, abruptly:

"Tell me all about that again."

I did so, not to excuse myself, but as a duty. When I was through, he mused awhile, and said:

"Then you think you really loved her?"

"Yes," said I. "It was hard to understand my new passion, but it was the sweetest and brightest dream of my life. It seemed as if the whim of the poor pretender to Christ's divinity had something lawful in it, and my second kiss in my own house was as sacred as the memory of my mother. I did love her, and I love her yet. I would give half of my own intellect to restore hers, and half of my life for her love. When she is out of danger I shall go away, but not to forget. The brief, beautiful romance has died out forever; but, among the blessed and holy things of life's memory, will be the short hours when I thought the poor crazy girl was my wife."

He bit his lips and frowned, but did not look angry. At last he said:

"She was crazy. She was so when she came to the asylum, and often undoubtedly so since. But I, too, had been affected by her story before you were; and might have thought more of it, only it was the remaining symptoms of the disorder. I have staid here for another purpose besides care for her life. I have found out what made her insane. It was the abuse she told you of, for her story was true."

I sprang up excitedly, but he bade me sit down, and gave me some papers to read. There was a mist over everything; but I saw formal copies of deeds to a name that did not belong to the pretended father, and certificates of the birth and baptism of a girl child that was not his.

I leaned my head on the table and cried like a child.

The doctor did not say a word; and when I looked up, his eyes were red, but he was quietly smoking a cigar.

"Is there no hope?" I asked.

"I have fixed it all," said he. "I went to the two impostors, and told them if they staid twelve hours longer I would raise a mob and burn them in their house. They fled in the dark and the property is all right."

With a gesture of impatience, I exclaimed:

"What is property to a brain destroyed! Can't you mend that? Is medicine all a farce, that it can not cure what misery has made diseased?"

He smoked for a little while, with a queer contraction about the mouth, and then answered:

"I think she was perfectly sane when she ran away with you, and had been for some months. The excitement of the escape, and the night drive past the old, familiar scenes of suffering, brought it on again."

"Then, I am her destroyer?" said I.

"Not exactly. There might never have been an investigation, and despair would have brought madness or death. She is rather quiet to-day. Would you like to see her?"

"Above all things," I answered.

"Can you command your feelings, so as not to excite her?"

"Yes, and I will."

He took his hat and led the way. I followed. Very soon we reached the old farmhouse, and I was admitted where I helped to lay the insensible form over two months before. Time had proved a good physician to us both, for my sprained arm was quite well, and she was not only conscious, but a flush of returning health glowed on her cheek.

As I approached her, my heart gave a great bound of joy, for there was no insanity in the calm eyes that met mine. She held out her hand to take mine, and said, with a smile:

"Your little wife is not so crazy as she was. Are you going to put her back in the asylum?"

My voice failed me as I stooped over her, and I could only kiss her again and again, as a reply. She drew me to her for a moment, and then turned to the doctor, saying:

"What do you think of my case?"

He answered:

"I think you have more sense than a man who drives runaway horses, and I prescribe a pair of gentle ones for your first drive."

Again she turned to me and said, quietly:

"I know you love me, for you risked your fair name and honor for the poor stranger. Then I have heard how you haunted this vicinity at night when I was nearly dead. The fall and loss of blood was good for me, and your shadow stood by me all the time, like a good angel, till the dark cloud of terror that hung over my girlhood faded away forever. The doctor tells me that love and hope have been my cure. Now, if you will try me again, you won't have to dig under a wall for me any more, and I will never frighten another horse."

I fear that my promise to control myself, and not appear excited, was poorly kept. It was she who was calm, as she curled my hair over her fingers, and called me her preserver, her darling, and her husband.

CHAPTER X.

CONCLUSION.

In another week we took possession of the deserted house where her home had been, and it was just in time to save it from being burned by a mob, who had learned the story, and, in their zeal to punish the real criminals, could hardly be made to understand that it belonged to the victim, and not to those who had fled.

My wife had not the slightest fear remaining of the old places, and talked unrestrainedly of it all.

Our return to my house was a delightful drive, and she insisted that the same horse should be one of the pair, laughing merrily at the tragedy.

The entry into the town was triumphal, and the minister and the lawyer led the procession of Sabbath-school children, who stood under an arch of flowers at my gate.

That afternoon we walked through the asylum grounds, at her request, and the old man who first tried to marry us did not seem to know either of us.

Love and wedded life were smooth enough after that, and I had the best and the wisest little wife in the world. She would at times say:

"I am a little foolish about you sometimes; but the old terror can never come again. God and you fill my whole soul, and I know how true it is that 'perfect love casteth out fear.'"

My "romance" was gone, but the sweet reality will out last the stars.

Does the Farm Pay.

Hon. George Geddes, one of the foremost farmers of central New York, has an original method of arguing that agriculture is profitable. His method is approved by the experience of many men of our acquaintance. He writes to the Country Gentleman as follows:

"When we go into paper estimates of the profits of agriculture, it would be well to credit the farm generally with those comforts that make our quiet and happy homes. Let us consider what the farm gives us in the way of food, of houses, and of fuel for our fires, horses to draw us, and the many nameless things that people living in cities and villages buy at great cost. I have seen more than one comfortable and well-to-do farmer sell broad acres for narrow town-houses, and under the delusion of educating their children, of living more easy lives, to get nearer lecture and church privileges, and by various other devices of self-deception, persuade themselves into the fatal move which soon proved that farming was better to support families than the price of farm at interest. Generally these mistaken men have found that money received as interest has a way of going easily, and a very few years has been sufficient to cause them to wish themselves again the owners of farms, and to teach them (as no other experience could) that though it might be easy to prove on paper that wheat could not be raised for its selling price, and that no animal (from a chicken to a horse) could be raised on a farm for its market value, yet that somehow all the final results proved just the reverse; for farmers do live well, educate their children well, and leave them, at their own deaths, valuable estates—accumulated, it is true, by slow processes, but nevertheless entirely the fruits of their own labor on their farms. Can any other body of men show more uniform success, and more real enjoyment of life?

"The baby has got a new tooth, but the old lady is laid up with a cold in head," remarked a gentleman to a defeated candidate. "What do I care?" was the reply. "Well," said the gentleman slowly, "before the election you used to take me aside and ask me how my family was coming on, and I've been hunting you all over town to tell you, and that's the way you talk to me. But it don't make any difference. I voted for the other candidate anyhow."

A KENTUCKIAN of immense leisure has ascertained that there are in one of the unabridged dictionaries 335 words of seven syllables, 24 of eight syllables, and 2 of nine.

Is Pork Unhealthy?

It is common to indulge in a tirade against pork as being injurious to health, but it is seldom that anyone takes the trouble to investigate into the case. On this question the Live Stock Journal has the following: "If one thing needs reforming more than another, it is the manner of raising and feeding swine. From the day they are large enough to eat, they are offered all manner of refuse about the place, such as rank weeds, filthy slops, spoiled vegetables and meats, dead fowl, etc. They are allowed to rummage the dung-yard and glean the refuse of food in the fæces of cattle and horses on the grounds of economy. But we imagine that the quantity of food saved in this way is very insignificant—not to exceed the value of a bushel of shelled corn a year among the whole stock on an ordinary sized farm. The objections to the practice of keeping swine in this way are so serious, however, that the reasons in favor of it have no force at all. The origin of the trichinosis in swine in may be always traced to the consumption of vile stuffs in the food, or being housed and yarded amid filth and foul air. Interests as dear as health and life require a thorough reform in keeping swine. Let their food be as pure as that which other animals consume; let them be kept in clean quarters and have pure air; let diseased or unthrifty animals be separated from those in health, and we may have no fears of trichinosis among either swine or human beings." That food, even in the lifetime of an animal, can produce a great effect upon the flesh of an animal, how much greater will be the effect after successive generations?

A New Wheat County.

There is now in Texas quite a lively agitation of the question whether that State can not be developed into one of the great wheat growing and food exporting sections of the country. The success which has apparently followed the experiments of raising wheat during the past few years, and the great favor which the grain raised in that State is said to have gained among flour manufacturers, have raised hopes among the people of Galveston of making their city one of the principal grain and flour marts of the world. During the war a small quantity of wheat was grown in the northern counties of the State, but since the war cotton has been the principal crop raised, until a few years ago, when attention was turned once more to the cultivation of wheat. The section now devoted to that cereal is said to extend into the center of the State. Thirteen counties produced last year 7,500,000 bushels of wheat, valued at 88,000,000. It is estimated that wheat could be grown in 170 counties, and that the annual value of the wheat crop could be raised to $575,000,000.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Dried Eggs.

A large establishment has been opened in St. Louis for drying eggs. It is in full operation, and hundreds of thousands of dozens are going into its insatiable maw. The eggs are carefully "candled" by hand—that is, examined by light to ascertain whether good or not—and are then thrown into an immense receptacle, where they are broken, and by a centrifugal operation the white and yolk are separated from the shell very much as liquid honey is separated from the comb. The liquid is then dried by heat, by patent process, and the dried article is left, resembling sugar; and it is put in barrels and is ready for transportation anywhere. This dried article has been taken twice across the equator in ships, and then made into omelet, and compared with omelet made of fresh eggs in the same manner, and the best judges could not detect the difference between the two. Is this not an age of wonders? Milk made solid, cider made solid, apple butter made into bricks! What next?—Philadelphia Trade Journal.

On one occasion Webster was on his way to his duties at Washington. He was compelled to proceed at night by stage from Baltimore. He had no traveling companion, and the driver had a sort of felon look which produced no inconsiderable alarm in the Senator. "I endeavored to tranquilize myself," said Webster, "and had partialy succeeded, when we reached the dark woods between Bladensburg and Washington—a proper scene for murder or outrage—and here, I confess, my courage again deserted me. Just then the driver turned to me, and, with a gruff voice, inquired my name. I gave it to him. 'Where are you going?' said he. The reply was, 'To Washington. I am a Senator.' Upon this the driver seized me fervently by the hand, and exclaimed, 'How glad I am! I have been trembling in my seat for the last hour; for when I looked at you I took you to be a highwayman.'"

Announcements.

We are authorized to announce Dr. S. S. Scott as a candidate for State Senator, subject, however, to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Capt. L. C. Norman as a candidate for State Senator, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Granville V. Rouse as a candidate for the office of Representative in the Legislature for the ensuing term.

We are authorized to announce Geo. W. Terrill as a candidate for the Legislature, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Reuben Conner, Esq. as a candidate for the Legislature, subject to the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Jas. L. Henderson as a candidate for the Legislature.

Notwithstanding the inclement weather last Monday, a large crowd was in town, but not so much for the purpose of attending court as hearing the candidates for Senator and Representative speak. The speaking commenced about 1:30 p. m. Capt. Norman lead off in a brief speech, taking sides against State lotteries, pronouncing them the direst of swindles and an outrage on the people of the State. He then referred to the high tolls charged by the turnpikes in the State, claiming that these tolls should be reduced and the State stock turned over to the counties through which the pikes pass.

To Normal Schools he is bitterly opposed, believing teachers should be educated in the same manner that other professional men are.

Laws passed, he believes, should, as far as possible, be general, and the local acts when passed, instead of being printed and bound with the General Laws, should be certified to the counties to which they apply and there spread upon the records of the County Court, thus avoiding the cost of public printing to that extent.

The school law does not correspond with his notion of a school law. One change suggested is in the route the school money travels after it is collected. Instead of the money going via Frankfort to the School Commissioner's hands, and being handled by an army of officers, he thinks the law might be so amended as to shorten the transit of the money from the collector's hands to the hands of the Commissioner. In the close of his speech Mr. Norman declared it to be his purpose to represent, if elected, the will of the people regardless of his own private views on any question requiring legislation.

Dr. Scott followed Norman, taking the same position regarding lotteries and turnpikes, except he does not favor the State's yielding up her stock to the counties because they would neglect them.

The Doctor is also very much opposed to Normal Schools.

He thinks the Criminal Court should be knocked on the head, the jurisdiction of Justices should be increased to $100 and the Quarterly Court to $300, besides being required to try all misdemeanors.

The office of Superintendent of Public Instruction he thinks should be expunged, and the Auditor required to perform the duties of Superintendent.

The Doctor considers the dog a pest, but is willing that the head every family be allowed one dog exempt from tax.

He dissects the stock law and holds on to the third section, saying it is quite sufficient on that subject.

This was the last subject noticed by the Doctor.

Mr. Norman came forward again and stated that his views regarding the Criminal Court, were about the same as those of Dr. Scott.

Of the candidates for Representative, Mr. G. V. Rouse was the first. He falls back on section three of the stock law, and says it is sufficient and that the first and second sections are unconstitutional.

He is willing for the head of each family to have one dog, but the surplus canines he would tax heavily.

The road law he thinks should be so amended as to allow the Supervisors to collect the money and pay it out for work, keeping an account of the money expended and be required to report, under oath, to the justices of their respective districts.

He entertains the same views regarding Normal Schools and the Criminal Court that the Senators do.

He thinks six jurors sufficient to try a case in a Justice's court and that they should be allowed pay for their services.

Mr. Conner came next. His views concerning the dog law, the stock law, the road law and the Normal schools do not materially differ from his opponents. The Criminal Court he wants wiped out and the County Judge given more to do in both criminal and civil business.

Capt. Terrill was the next on docket. He said that just six years ago he refused to have passed just such a stock law as we now have. He did not think the people wanted it then, nor does he think they want it now. Section three of the law he considers sufficient law on that subject. Mr. Terrell wants the people protected, but is willing that the head of each family be allowed one dog exempt from taxes, and where a person has more than one dog and refuses to pay the tax, he wants the Sheriff allowed to kill the dog without so much unnecessary advertising, &c. That persons be allowed to kill all dogs not muzzled found on their premises, except fox hounds when on the chase. He is opposed to granting lottery franchises, making appropriations for locking and damming the Kentucky River, or increasing the school tax in any way whatever. His notion of the road law is about the same as that of Mr. Rouse.

Mr. Henderson is for everything as it was under the old dispensation.

The following question was reduced to writing and put to each candidate at the close of his speech:

"If a bill should be brought before the Legislature giving further time to collect what is known as the Boone County Bounty Fund Tax, will you (if elected) vote for or against said bill?"

It is hardly necessary to say each candidate declared he would vote against any such bill.

The Cincinnati Tobacco Journal of last week says: "Receipts and offerings at auction this week show no improvement in quantity or quality. Prices in the earlier part of the week were not quite so strong for low and common grades, but toward and at the close, they recovered fully their former strength, and are now fully up to quotations. For all the better sorts of both old and new cutting stock the market has ruled firm and steady."

The folloing are some of the quotations:

There seems to be a general "kick" against the convention as ordered by the County Executive Committee. The dissatisfaction is not confined to the friends of any particular candidate but is universal. We heard it repeatedly suggested, Monday, that the Committee be requested to rescind the Convention ordered to follow the Primary Election.

The European war still progresses. No additional belligerent powers as yet.

HIS Honor, Jno. S. His object in procuring this list is to enable the Sheriff of the county to properly distribute the poll tax to each district. It will not only be of great assistance to the Sheriff, but will insure an early distribution of the tax, and it is to be hoped the Road Overseers will act promptly in this matter.

THE Burlington Literary Society has become a thing of the past. It drew its last breath about 10:30 o'clock on the night of the 24th ult. During its dying moments, but while of sound mind and disposing memory, it disposed of the contents of its exchequer by devise, the Burlington Sabbath-school being the sole devisee. The will nominated and constituted C. C. Conner executor of the estate of the deceased society. It is believed that, after the just debts of the society are satisfied, there will remain cash to the amount of 62½ cents with which to inflate the Sabbath-school treasury. Nearly the entire list of the society's life-long friends witnessed it shuffle off the mortal coil and pass from existence.

The Error of the Executive Committee.

BURLINGTON, KY., May 8, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

An axiom is a self-evident proposition—one easily and clearly capable of lucid demonstration—and if it is not an axiom that the piece of machinery set on wheels by our Democratic Central Committee on the 16th ult. is supplied with a superfluous, cumbersome and useless wheel, then we are utterly in the dark and don't know what the powers of a central committee are. In the first place, they have presumed—guessed, if you please—that only two gentlemen of all our population would offer themselves as candidates for Senatorial honors, and, therefore, the Democratic voter might split his vote direct for the aforesaid candidates, and a majority of the popular vote was to nominate a candidate to be voted for at the ensuing August election. So far, good; but now, suppose when the 30th day of June comes we have the names of three or more gentlemen before the candidates in the race for Senator, the plurality of votes would, under the present ruling of the committee, make the nomination. Now, we ask why this guess work and conjecture? Because only two candidates are in the field now is no plausible reason ever for arriving at the conclusion that in the two and one-half months of time yet intervening between the deciding of the committee and the primary election that more may not be in the field. It is a distinction without a difference, and has no place in the business or precedent for its establishment. Why, suppose more than two candidates at any final election are voted for, does not the plurality elect? It has been the time-honored custom and usage of all parties that the one receiving the highest number of votes is declared elected. A primary election was the alternative, and to do away with the necessity for a convention, for the simple reason that conventions, as a general rule, defeated, instead of accomplishing, the will of the people.

Now, let us examine a little further the rulings of our committee. In the first place, there is no advice that the delegates from each precinct be instructed by the voters of said precinct how to cast their votes in subsequent ballots, in case their favorite is dropped after the first. This, of course, will not do with a plan that will leave the delegate at perfect liberty to cast his vote according to his own private inclination. Now, does not this defeat the will of the voter? and how is the delegate to know the will of the voter unless he expresses it at the ballot? The best way is to pull that convention wheel out of the concern, and it will be like pouring the oil of consolation on the troubled political waves. Again, look carefully at the distribution of the delegates in this cumbersome machine, under the ruling of the committee, and a few items of startling unfairness present themselves. For instance, this town casts 34 votes more than Union, 22 more than Taylorsport, 18 more than Petersburg and 41 more than Hamilton; yet she has only 4 votes in the convention. Why, we only lack three votes of being entitled to 5 votes under the rule, while Verona lacks 6 votes of having 166, yet gets 3 votes in the convention! If the committee intend to persist in their determination to have a convention, let them divide the vote of each precinct by actual fractions, thus: If Burlington casts her vote at the primary election a unit for A, let A have 4 23-50 votes in the convention; and let the officers of the election also divide the vote of the people as to their second choice, so that the delegates may represent those who send them. Again, suppose Burlington, at the primary election, should cast for A 50 votes, for B 125 votes, and for C 40 votes, and this should be all the votes cast, then will A have his proportional part of the whole vote of the precinct, and B and C fare the same way. Of course, this would bring about a complication of fractional votes, but it has the one requisite of fairness, which the present arrangement essentially lacks.

The reason we have said so much about this is that the above strong reasons have stood out plainly against the action of the committee, and the article in the RECORDER of last week did not dissect the engine for the view of the people. This committee, as individuals, have private preferences, of course; but in this matter they are the servants of the Democracy of Boone County, and should lay all such preferment aside in their deliberation and conduct of nominating conventions and primary elections. We are sure that a majority of the party in Boone county are opposed to holding a convention, after the primary election has fairly settled the nomination.

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

ST. LOUIS, MO., May 3, 1877.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

We have had anything but pleasant weather since we last wrote. We had cold drizzling rain Saturday night, and most of the day Sunday. In the afternoon of same day cleared up, and Sunday, Monday and Tuesday nights we had quite heavy frosts, and the daily papers report quite a snow-storm at Hannibal on last Sunday. Yesterday about noon, rain set in again, and cold drizzling rain continues to fall up to this p. m.

But so far as this State is concerned, we believe the fruit crop as yet is considered safe. Springfield, Ill., papers report slight damage to the crops in central and northern Ill. Encouraging reports concerning the wheat crop continue to come in from all quarters, with the exception of a few spots in Texas, which are said to be nipped by the hoppers. Speaking of grasshoppers reminds us that the wise man said that "there is nothing new under the sun." If he lived in this day of wonders it is possible he might be induced to change his mind in this particular. It was only the other day that our wise Legislators declared war against this monstrous pest the 'hoppers. Yes, sir, they passed a regular war bill or declaration making every road overseer a captain, or commander with full power to muster into service all males between the ages of 14 and 60 years, and any man or boy refusing to fight valiantly until honorably discharged by the aforesaid commander, or master shall pay a fine to the extent of what it would cost to hire a man to take his place. The bill does not declare how the war shall be conducted, what weapons shall be used, how many Quartermasters or Commissaries there shall be to each brigade, but all of this is left to the good judgment and soldierly qualifications of the aforesaid road master. Now, is this not something new. We think it is, at least we never heard of such an army before, and we are of the opinion that history can not furnish such an incident. Only think of it—"every man and boy between the ages of 14 and 60, in the great State of Missouri, a soldier." My goodness! it is a wonder the grasshoppers don't get scared out of to Kentucky where the people are not so belligerent. Well, as for ourselves, we don't believe this a good year for grasshoppers, so we, as yet, have made no preparations for going to war this year, and we would advise all the timid to plant and sow, and in due time they will reap a bountiful harvest.

So far as this city is concerned, the European war is the all absorbing topic, in the drawing-room, on the street, on 'Change and in the pulpit, particularly so as regards the two latter. It is perfectly wonderful the amount of theological knowledge this terrible struggle has furnished the pulpit. As late as last Sunday, the writer heard one of the most learned divines in this city announce form the pulpit, that he had watched this struggle with a great interest, and that it was almost certain to be a long and bloody war, and that it was possible before the conclusion thereof, all Christendom would be engaged therein. But Christ's Kingdom was to be extended and more permanently established on earth at the conclusion thereof. We are of the opinion that one of his flock bought largely of corn the next day. Now, we would be the last man on earth to speak irreverently of things divine, but, somehow or other, can't help thinking that war is generally come of the lust of the eye, the pride of life, and the great love of power that man has possessed ever since Adam walked amid buds, blossoms, and evergreens in the garden of Eden. In fact, we never heard of a war but what somebody was hurt, and the Apostle James positively declares that they come of the flesh. And lastly, we have been taught to believe that Christ was the embodiment of meekness, gentleness, and the Prince of Peace. Viewing war from this standpoint, we can but conclude that "His Satanic Majesty" has more to do with war and discord than any other power in this world or the Universe.

Leaving this subject we will say our old friend and former schoolmate, Mr. Jno. M. Gibson, a Boone County man by birth and education, dropped in on us Tuesday, looking as good as a new, and as happy as a big sunflower. He is at this time, as well as for many years past, acting as the Western Agent of a wholesale house in the city of Louisville, Ky. He informed me that he spends half is now sojourning with her father in the neighborhood of Union, in your county. It is always refreshing to us to meet with our friends of boyhood days. He is now on a western trip in the interest of his house, and we wish him a full realization of his most sanguine expectations.

We have had another week of excitement among the grain dealers, but for the week so far, the "shorts" have largely the advantage of the "longs." The liberal stocks found to be in store here and in Chicago on the last day of last month had a very depressing effect upon the market, so much so, in fact, that wheat, on Monday, declined fully 15c. per bushel, corn 4@5c., and oats and rye 4@6c. per bushel, and then again on Tuesday the market went down eh wheat 5@7c., corn 2@3c., and 1@2c. on oats and rye. Market yesterday and to-day recovered somewhat on wheat, but it is fully 10 cents per bushel lower to-day than on Saturday, and corn about 5@6c. per bushel lower. We quote to-day as follows: Wheat, $1 95@2 10 for No. 2 red and 3; corn, 49@50c. for No. 2 and white mixed; oats, 42@43c.; rye, 88@90 for No. 2. The stock of grain in store with us on the last day April was not uncommonly large, but was sufficient, as receipts are liberal from day to day. Stock with us the 30th day of April, "say," wheat, 204,683 bushels; corn, 274,980 bushels; oats, 37,913 bushels; rye, 46,912 bushels; barley, 35,056 bushels. This we say may be considered a reasonable stock, with daily receipts of wheat from 15,000 to 25,000 bushels, and corn from 50,000 to 75,000 bushels. But the stock in Chicago on the 30th of April was simply immense, "say," wheat, 2,351,302 bushels; corn, 3,740,428 bushels; oats, 410,369 bushels; rye, 203,174 bushels; barley, 577,776 bushels. So you see there is no danger of any person starving in this section of the country on account of the scarcity breadstuffs.

Our letter is now long enough and for the present we will close. Yours truly.

BOB A. LONG.

LETTER FROM MISSOURI.

WOODLAWN FARM, }
SALINE CO., MO., April 30, 1877. }

To the Editor of the Recorder:

As some compensation for the many favors and kindness which I have received at the hands of both the editor-in-chief and the "locals," I write these articles, hoping also through this channel to communicate with many dear friends in old Boone.

"Another one of the beautiful snows of the season" sprinkled us here this morning. These beautiful snows are becoming somewhat monotonous, and, if old Mother Earth does look beautiful robed in white, it is certainly a beautiful sight to witness the genial rays of old Sol, as he peeps over the eastern horizon and warms the beautiful flakes into insignificance.

This is certainly the most beautiful country it has ever been our pleasure to look upon. Good old Mother Earth has already donned her Persian robe of green; and it is a great pleasure, not appreciated by those unacquainted with beauties of the West, to sally forth among the beauties of Dame Nature, inhaling the fragrance of delightful and most beautiful flowers and blossoms that greet you at every step, with the exception of a dash of the aforesaid snow (¾ of an inch deep).

Our beautiful weather continues. It is very pleasant to-day, and the wind is howling a warm gale from the southwest. There was a general outcry that the fruit crop was somewhat damaged, and there was also considerable "going back" on corn and vegetables planted early; but I have found out that no fruit has been hurt sufficiently to shorten the crop.

Corn is coming up nicely, "green over the ground," and scarcely shows a trace of freeze or frost. Such sharp weather coming in September as we have would certainly cut the full grown crop down as if scored by fire. What condition of things is it that will suffer the ground frozen two inches in depth, and frosts succeed each other day in and day out, and such tender crops as corn and beans go uninjured? Of the seasons generally, we might say that, as regards wheat (which is high enough to hide your dog law in), grass and spring grain, it is fully two weeks ahead of the average season. So say the old natives.

Pears are fully in bloom, and cherries just going out, while apples are putting forth a tremendous bloom. In fact, the blossom is very heavy with all varieties.

There seems to be an epidemic of general improvement going on in the West this spring, and we hope that by fall said epidemic will be evenly spread among a certain class of farmers that we (you) in Kentucky would class as poor farmers. The poorest farmers in the country are, I believe, as a general rule, to be found just outside the limits of our interior towns and cities. It seems that when a farmer of the West lives just near enough to an interior city, town or village for a market to visit it and return the same day (say within a four-mile limit) he is pretty apt to do so, and his farm suffers accordingly. Beyond that limit daily getting to town becomes more difficult; consequently better improvements and neater farms are to be seen between the fourth and sixth mile than between the first and fourth, though the maximum of neglect occurs between the second and fourth, while the maximum of neatness, order and thrift occur between the sixth and tenth. (Here is where we live.) I state these facts as curious and amusing examples of how much we are all of us creatures of circumstances, and as a warning to all visitors that they can not thoroughly judge a country unless they go beyond the maximum limit.

Monthly sales are becoming very popular in this part of the West. The whole town population, and half the females, make it a custom and a habit to visit town on each and every sale day. Up to this time the sales have been confined to horses, mules, cattle, hogs, &c., on the part of the males, and dry goods, notions, leather belts, Wa-hoo bonnets and striped hose on the part of the females. One excellent feature of the sales is that the bidding is generally bona fide, and terms cash. This promises to be one of those great things that begin small, but which finally develop into a striking feature in the growth and civilization of a new country.

As we are frequently receiving letters from friends in your county asking for information in regard to crops, chances of buying land, price of same, and many other inquiries, we take this opportunity of saying to them that we will extend a hearty welcome and every protection in the rights of person and property. Land is abundant and cheap (prices from $10 to $100, according to location) with no taxes found in "your craw" and are not afraid to soil your hands at work, we say come; if you have not these requisites, stay where you are.

I fear that I have already trespassed upon your columns and patience. The RECORDER (long live the noble sheet!) is received regularly every Saturday morning at 8 o'clock, just three hours before the Believeans get theirs of same date. It appears that in this case "distance lends enchantment to the (Bell)view."

Again we thank you and our host of friends for the many papers and other acts of kindness shown us. We will, at no distant day, send you the local news, together with a short history of the business transactions of this county. Yours most respectfully.

C. G. INGRAM.

HAVE you been at Wiles', Lawrenceburg, Ind.? He is now prepared to make clothes up in the latest and best style.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Willow Vale.

We hear of a farmer who had 10 acres corn cut down last cold snap. Is too big a hurry, Billy R.

Tobacco strippers are lively.

J. W. Kennedy has bought a few crops of the weed.

The mill is taking a rest, on account of corn planting. The miller is very busy preparing to move the little mill on Gunpowder.

C. H. Parsons is hauling rock for a boiler wall on the creek.

Some very fine monuments have lately been erected in the Big Bone cemetery. Among the most handsome are those of Mrs. Polly Garrison and Robt. Hucy.

We think there is a very good prospect for fried chicken in the near future, for the seed planted came up bountifully.

Beaver Lick.

For the past week we have been visited by a continual rain shower, and vegetation presents the appearance of rapid growth. The foliage presents a beautiful scene, emitting a fragrance that is perfectly delectable, making one feel as if he were resident of that celestial Paradise.

Mr. John Shiflet has moved into Beaver, where he intends to ply his favorite vocation, which is blacksmithing. Look out, Mich, for rivalry; you know he means it.

At the request of the community I ask you, Mr. Editor, to please announce that the voters of the Big Bone Precinct wish the aspirants of Boone for the office of Representative would all meet at Beaver or Big Bone Springs on some day before the primary elections and deliver their intentions severally, that he is much contemplated in regard to this point. Let them set a day and come to time, in order that the people may be posted in the object of the elected Representative.

INCOGNITO.

Waterloo.

I send you the news and gossip of this place.

Rev. John Underhill preached at the Universalist church Sunday to a large congregation, composed of Baptists, Universalists and others.

The late frosts have caused serious injury to the fruit crop, and tobacco plants in some localities have been killed by it.

Richard L. Ayler, our city merchant, has purchased several patent bee-hives, and is taking a bee journal, with a view of becoming an apiarist.

Samuel Ryan, of this place, was notified that he must be sent to the lunatic asylum, in consequence of being very unsocial, and Mr. Ryan became very indignant. He says higher powers are controlling him, and immediately gavo leg ball.

Henry Clore went down the Big Bone road this evening all spread out. What does this mean, Henry? UNO.

[Continue your good work and let us hear from you often.—ED.]

Plattsburg.

Farm work moves on, in spite of the cold east wind which has been blowing so constantly this spring; but, on waking Thursday morning, and finding that it would be no day for out door work, on account of a cold east rain, anything but a smile could be seen in the face of the sturdy farmer.

Planting corn is all the rage now, but very few have finished. A small acreage of wheat was sown last fall, though what there is promises to be excellent. Tobacco plants are rather backward, but there are millions of them. Mr. Simeon Baldon expects to have not far from twenty acres of the weed on his farm, grown by experienced tobacco raisers.

Professor Tolin took his departure recently for the purpose of fulfilling an engagement to teach a school term of twelve weeks in the Adams District. Success to his labors, wherever he goes.

The season is now at hand for the reopening of the country Sabbath-school, but so far no steps have been taken in that direction in these parts. Who is responsible for the manner in which the Sabbath is spent by the children and youth of the country? This is a question of vital importance, and should be seriously considered, not only by parents and guardians, but by all who feel interested in the welfare of their fellow-man.

Lizzie Jarrell is having a very severe spell of chronic rheumatism—no better at this writing.

Health not generally good, probably on account of so much east wind. We hope summer is not far away. EX TEMPORE.

Petersburg.

Owing to rain, bad roads, pressing farming and other interests, and perhaps a slight degree of want of inclination among the natives, the Quarterly Conference of the M. E. Church, in this district, last Saturday and Sunday, had rather a small attendance. The friends and members of the East Bend Church are exonerated from the above charge, however, for behold! they chartered the flying Betsey Pearl, and came by scores to attend the services Sunday. By way of compliment to their zeal, the next Quarterly Meeting of the circuit will be held at their church some time in August.

Bro. Bristow preached the funeral of Mr. Warren Rogers last Saturday, to a large audience, who, out of regard for the deceased, assembled at his late residence, notwithstanding the pouring rain which fell almost without cessation during the entire day. Mr. Rogers had a number of warm friends in the neighborhood where he has lived from his birth, and their sincere regret at his loss, is a true indication of the high position he occupied among them.

There appears to be a hill of difficulty in the way of the new City Fathers, for, beyond supplying themselves with new hats, they have done absolutely nothing since their election. The obstruction, we are informed, is the fault of the ancient "dads" of the last Centennial year, who, for some unknown cause best known to themselves, have failed to give an account of their stewardship, and until that is done the new board are in the dark. It would strike a thinking man that as a nice warm fire built under a balky horse will make him move, when all other persuasion fails, and as the old board have as much of that article to anticipate in the next world as they can possibly appreciate, it is quite likely that the report would be out at the earliest possible moment, if the new hat muscle-pliability will try the experiment. There is lying moldering among the important documents belonging to the new board, an urgent prayer to the same, that they will take such immediate steps for the prevention of the game of base-ball within the corporate limits of this important city, as shall be most conducive to the peace and quietude of the petitioners, which same document is hindered in its force and effect by the reckless carelessness of those same old boys.

By an accidental fall on a hot stove, last week, Mr. John Norris burned his hands very severely, and otherwise crippled himself. In the case of a young man the casualties would be trifling, but as Mr. Norris is over 86 years old and weighs, perhaps, 275 pounds, they are much more serious.

Rabbit Hash.

Hon. James L. Henderson addressed a large crowd at this place last Saturday. He made a stirring speech—one that will long be remembered. He said he wanted all those old gray-headed men who have toiled out all their days on the public highways, set free and the road worked under the old "dispensation." He is opposed to the stock law, and wants the widows and orphans to get the benefit of the pastures that are not inclosed. He wants the widows and orphans protected (so do we). He says that he is opposed to school tax. Let every body school their own children under the old "dispensation." But of all the taxes that worry him most is the dog tax. He says that two little dogs that are really not worth more than four cents are taxed $2. He says that he is in favor of everybody having just as many dogs as they want, free from tax like they did under the old "dispensation." He is in favor of everybody selling their "pianers" and buying spinning wheels that will go "buzz, buzz, buzz." He says that he has spun flax many a day, as well as yarn(s) under the old "dispensation." Mr. H. is opposed to seining in Gunpowder holes, but every fish when you please with pole and line, like they did under the old "dispensation." Mr. H. impressed us with his executive ability, and his willingness to work for the good of Boone County and the Government. He says he would not sit idly down and see the Government trampled under foot. He has been said by some that the great and successful workers are seldom good talkers; this is not the case with Henderson. While he can plan and execute, he can also talk with a felicity and power surpassed by few. I wish everybody in the county could have been present on this occasion, when his great soul glowed with the grandeur of his theme, and the eloquent words and majestic sentences rolled from his lips as the gushing stream rolls from the mountain side. His hearers were swayed by the power of his oratory as the trees are moved by the passing tempest. It was remarkable how much pathos and tenderness he could throw into a few simple sentences. His mind is rigorously logical and his frame robust, compact and well knit together, so we are all for H. Hurrah for H. for he is a "bardacious" worker for his country.

Messrs. Reuben Conner and Geo. W. Terrill were in town last week.

The young folks of this neighborhood had a social dance at Mrs. Minerva Ryle's, last Saturday eve. Everybody seemed to enjoy themselves to the utmost extent. Among the merry faces were Miss Sena Walton and Dr. L. C. Cowen, Miss Emma Walton and Zack T. Holmes, Miss Lizzie Hagerty, of Ludlow, and Lucien Calvert. The talk is wish they would have another.

Mr. Robert Holmes and lady spent a few days in our midst last week. We are glad to hear that Robert is doing well, for he is a commodating and a good workman, and we wish him all the success we can.

Mr. Geo. W. Griffith has been quite sick for some time, but is now some better. L. C. Cowen, physician.

Farmers are busy planting corn, and a good deal of the "creeter" is being planted.

Last Saturday night between 11 and 12 o'clock there were some parties trying to enter the store of H. J. Calvert, and Dr. Cowen hearing them, got up from his bed and, while reading and taking a single barrel pistol, the only fire arms that were at his command, proceeded to the sidewalk and asked what was going on there, when the parties broke and run. Cowen firing at them. Up to this time it is not known who the parties were. MICKEY.

CARROLL COUNTY—Liberty Station.

Liberty Station, nestling, as it does, in the ralo known as Eagle Valley, and surrounded on the southeast by the hills of Owen County and on the northwest by the hills of (Carroll) county, forming one of the loveliest valleys to be found in the favorite State of the Union, "Old Kentucky," enjoys an unmolested repose. We might say it has no tippling shops, for, though it has two hotels, they can not be called tippling shops, both being presided over by men perfect gentlemen, who will not allow anything of an inebriated nature to transpire under the roofs of their respective buildings, they regarding the peace and welfare of the community with which they are identified with too much esteem to contribute an individual favor to such malfeasance. In giving an illustration, we say the origin of our town was in the year 1868, was incorporated in 1871, and has now a population which, in numbers, may be estimated between 300 and 500, with a rapid increase. This is a splendid outlet for the farmers of this and Owen counties, and the business transacted here in consequence is great. We have two macadamized roads leading to this place from the two most important points, which are always kept in good condition for travel. Our business establishments are not so great in number as those of some towns, but they contribute the more here to those engaged. The manufacturing and business interests of our town are at present represented by two hotels, two dry goods and grocery stores, two livery and sale stables, two blacksmith shops, one wagon shop, two drug stores, one gunsmith shop, barber shop, two grist mills, one a saw and grist, the other a water mill, a good church and school building, one meat and family grocery, a milliner shop, and last, though not least, a tin shop. We could elucidate matters further regarding the town, but space in this letter won't admit.

A gentleman, Mr. Crit Ireland, of Louisville, purchased a herd of six horses here about, paying from $140 to $350. You see our stock men raise some find and valuable horses.

The wedding of Mr. P. S. Jenkins and Miss Lou Brown, of New Liberty, Owen County, which event occurred at the above place, the residence of the bride, on the 24th ult., we regard as deserving of notice. We were not present, but we understand that it was the most attractive and important occasion of the kind that has occurred in our (almost) midst for the past half century. The bride and groom and their attendants, consisting of some eight or ten couples, passed this place the next day, en route for the Mammoth Cave. They stopped at the Campbell House a few hours, where they were serenaded by the Blue Lick Cornet Band. The boys rendered some very excellent music. After this the happy couple boarded the westward bound train, in conjunction with those of their friends who desired to participate in the wedding tour. May God bestow upon them an eternity of pleasure and happiness.

Crop prospects bid fair. The tobacco plants, though small, are plentiful. Wheat never was better nor more of it under cultivation in this section. Fruit non est this season. Corn is being planted, though somewhat retarded by the recent rains. Corn, which has been selling at $1 25 per barrel, has advanced very recently to $1 75, and it is being withheld for $2 and $3. A frost on the morning of the 1st inst. killed most all the garden stuff. Potatoes, which were developing finely, were bitten badly.

Horses! Horses!

WM. CROPPER has reduced the price for services of Eclipse Clay to $10 to insure. The following is the description and pedigree of this celebrated animal:

ECLIPSE CLAY is a deep blood bay, with black points, foaled May 6th, 1870, and is full 16 hands high. He won the first race he ever started in, making a record of 2:42 in the fourth heat, on a very slow half-mile track. He could trot both in 2:35 and better last season, when in condition. He is square-gaited and level-headed, good tempered and has a good constitution.

ECLIPSE CLAY was sired by Cassius M. Clay, Jr., (Steadee's) with whose pedigree the people of this community are well acquainted; first dam, Lady Hockaday, by Trimble's Eclipse; second dam by Brown's Bellfounder. Lady Hockaday has proven herself a mother of racers, being the mother of Lodge, Black Chief and Sylvador, all full brothers to ECLIPSE CLAY, who could all trot down in the thirties with very little training. 33-tf

THE FORTY-ACRE FARM.

I'm thinking, wife, of neighbor Jones, that man with stalwart arm,
He lives in peace and plenty on a forty-acre farm;
While men are all around us with hands and hearts a score,
Who own two hundred acres and still are wanting more.

He has a pretty little farm, a pretty little house,
He has a loving wife within, as quiet as a mouse;
His children play around the door, their father's life to charm,
Looking as neat and tidy as the tidy little farm.

No weeds are in the corn fields, no thistles in the oats,
The horses show their keeping by their fine and glossy coats;
The cows within the meadows, resting 'neath the beechen shade,
Learn all the gentle manners of the gentle milking maid.

Within the fields—on Saturdays—he leaves no cradled grain
So be gathered on the morrow, for fear of coming rain;
He keeps the Sabbath holy—his children learn his ways—
And plenty fills his barns and bins after the harvest days.

He never has a lawsuit to take him to the town,
For the very reason there are no line fences down;
The bar-room in the village does not have him for a charm;
I can always find my neighbor on his forty-acre farm.

His acres are so very few he plows them very deep,
'Tis his own hands that turn the sod; 'tis his own hands that reap;
He has a place for everything, and things are in their place;
The sunshine smiles upon his fields, contentment in his face.

May we not learn a lesson, wife, from prudent neighbor Jones,
And not,—for what we haven't got—give up to sighs and moans?
The rich ain't always happy, nor free from life's alarms,
But blest are those who live content, though small may be their farms.

Monthly Report from the Bureau of Agriculture, Horticulture, and Statistics.

FRANKFORT, KY., May 1, 1877.

In February, the warm, seasonable weather gave time to the farmers for breaking up much of the corn, tobacco, and hemp lands, and put the ground in excellent order for burning plant-beds. The result was, that when March came the planters were beforehand with their work, and were then enabled to set their fences, sow the oat and grass crops, and haul out their barnyard manures in good time.

April has been a remarkably fine month for the country. The lands have not been too wet for work, except for a few days at the time, just enough to allow time to prise the old tobacco crop, which is now generally out of the way. The coolness of the atmosphere, while it has kept back partially the early budding of vegetation, has not produced damaging frosts. The heavy winter freezes in December and January made the soil turn and work easy, and pulverize with great facility; and have probably destroyed, for this season, al argep oportion of the eggs of bugs and larvæ of troublesome insects. Stimulated by the advancing tendency in prices of meats and grain, the farmers have gone forward, and are now in a better condition with the new crops than they have been since the civil war.

Wheat, is doing well in the most parts of the State. The drilled wheat is showing much better than that sown broadcast. The Fultz, the Tappahannock, the Red May, and Lanimas varieties are the favorites. Very little spring wheat has been sown, and that only by way of experiments. Winter wheat does best in this latitude. In the mountain counties the acreage reported 105 (the average is 100), and the present condition 110; in the blue-grass counties the acreage is 100, and condition 105; in the river counties above Louisville acreage is 90 and condition 95. On many farms in Carroll, Grant, Henry, Oldham and Pendleton the wheat is thin on the land and looks yellow. These lands need superphosphates and land plaster badly. In the counties south of the "blue-grass" and east of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad the acreage is 90, and the condition 95; in Nelson and part of Larue it is too thin; these lands need bone-dust and gypsum or German kainit and ashes. In the Green river counties west of the L. & N. Railroad the acreage is 100, and condition 105 in Daviess and McLean counties, but only 90 in Mead and Breckinridge; elsewhere, 100. In the cavernous limestone counties on the south side of the State the acreage is 110 and the condition 105. Barren County reports some crops too thin, and condition only 90. Beyond the Tennessee river the acreage is 110, and present condition 110.

Hay and Grass—The high price in clover seed has caused a falling off in the acreage to 80, but the present condition is 105. The usual amount of grass seed has been sown, and preparations are making for a large crop of millet. In the Ohio and Kentucky river counties above Louisville there has been a large increase in orchard grass for seed raising. The clover and grass pastures and meadows are in present condition 110 throughout the State.

Corn—This great staple is being planted slightly over an average in almost every county in the State on account of the European war news. In the tobacco-growing counties it is reported at 105, and elsewhere at 108. Of course, as the season for planting is not over, these figures may be slightly varied (either above or below), depending on the effect the war news will have upon the prices of tobacco and hemp within the next two or three weeks.

The Barley and Rye crops are particularly good in Grenup, Lewis, Mason, and other river counties, both in acreage and condition. Oats have been sown in excess of last year, and are coming up finely.

Hemp and Flax—These crops, owing to the low price, will not, from present reports, be more than 90 in acreage.

Potatoes are being planted in excess of an average throughout the State of 10 per cent. The early planting in the southern counties is doing well.

Garden Products will be 110, and at present their condition is 110 in both family and market gardens. A great many persons in several of the counties are experimenting with chemical fertilizers on their vegetables.

Orchards, Vineyards, and Fruits—An unusually large number of orchards and small vineyards are being planted this spring. Many farmers, whose children have only depended on their neighbor's orchards, will soon have the satisfaction to see them supplied at home. The native grapevines are used almost exclusively, such as the Catabas, Concords, Delawares, Hartford, Prolific, &c. Boyd, Grenup, Johnson, Menifee, Clay, Rockcastle, Harlan, and other mountain counties, report peach trees in bloom, with a good prospect for all kinds of fruit. The limestone counties generally report the peaches winter killed, except in some few places on the sandstone ridges, where seedling trees will bear a tolerably good crop. The early varieties of cherries are mostly killed—the later varieties are generally blooming well. Apples, plums, pears, quinces, and smaller fruits, nuts and berries, will be abundant, if no more frosts come to damage them. The grapes will bloom abundantly and promise a full vintage.

Dry Products are an ample supply and are reported in the State at an average of 110. Several new cheese factories have been started.

Tobacco—The amount of plant land sown in February and March was greater than it has been any year since the war. The season has been propitious for the young plants; bugs and parasites have not made their appearance in usual numbers, and until the European war rumors caused a decline in the tobacco markets of the world the prospects were that a very heavy crop was about to be planted. This zeal of the farmers for a "big crop" has considerably quieted, and many now report that they expect to plant less tobacco and more corn and millet. How far the wise conclusion govern the planters we can not yet tell, but presume now, with the prospects of high prices for provisions and low prices for tobacco, that it will make a change of at least 10 or 15 per cent. in the crop prospects from what they were one month ago. Plants are reported plenty in every tobacco raising county.

Horses and Mules are in unusually good order and condition throughout the State. In the Kentucky Purchase counties there is an increase in mules and an average in horses. In the cavernous limestone counties west of the L. & N. Railroad there is an increase in horses and a decrease in mules. The Green river counties have an increase in mules and a small decrease in horses. The Blue-grass counties report an increase in horses, with close attention being paid to the breeding of fancy racing and trotting stock. The mountain counties report a large improvement in horses in the last few years.

Cattle are increasing in number slowly in every section of the State. The Short-horns, Devons, Alderneys, and other choice breeds are being imported in greater numbers than usual, and males of good pedigrees are finding their way into every neighborhood in Kentucky.

Sheep have increased in the mountain, central, and river counties, but rather fallen back in some of the interior counties in numbers, but the breeds have been greatly improved by crossing the common stock with choice Cotswold, Merinoes, Southdowns, Shropshiredowns, &c. Mr. J. Bruce, of Henry County, says: "Our farmers are intent upon improving their stock. The Kentucky wool-growers held their convention last week at Eminence. We can boast here not only of the finest sheep but also of enterprising farmers, who are active workers in improving this class of stock. The hog cholera killed our hogs till I scarcely know of a farm where there are any large hogs left." In this section the best bloods of sheep in the State are to be found, many individuals of which will weigh gross over four hundred pounds, and shear over 30 pounds of good wool.

Hogs over six months old are exceedingly scarce everywhere in the State. Pigs are more numerous, but even these are dying off with cholera. The only counties reporting hogs at 100 are Greenup, Lawrence, Pendleton, Carroll, Garrard, Marion, Hickman, and Fulton. The other counties average about 70, except Trigg, Christian, Mead, Grayson, and Ohio, which report below 50. The hog cholera is more prevalent than at any previous time; scarcely any county in the State is free from its ravages although reports are worse from Daviess, Ohio, Christian, Mead, Grayson, Trigg, McCracken, Henry, Scott, Garrard and Nicholas. Several remedies have been proposed, but none prove to be very effective. A physician prescribes calomel in large doses. As a preventive and a cure in the early stages of the disease, ex-Gov. Jacob and others recommend coal ashes and coal cinders. Several others recommend corn steeped in coal oil, and also charcoal scattered where the hogs can get it.

Poultry is largely on the increase and is fast becoming a most profitable branch of farming; new varieties are being introduced, bred especially with a view of getting good egg-laying stocks.

Bees were considerably increased during the last year, but many hives that were not protected died out during the cold weather in December and January. Those protected are doing well, and there will be another large increase this year.

European War—The bearing of the war in Turkey will be seriously felt by the farmers and other citizens of Kentucky, as well as by the balance of the world. Unfortunately for mankind, the aggrandizing spirit of the Czar of Russia has caused that power, under the false pretense of defending the the rights of the Christians of the Greek Church, to declare war against the Turkish government, and, raising the banners of religious intolerance, the Czar proposes to murder and blot out of existence a nation of fully thirty millions of human beings. When this war gets fairly under way, it may draw into its vortex England, Austria, France, and Italy on the one side to drive back the Russian bear, and on the other Prusia, to aid the Czar with an eye to conquest. It will then be long, cruel, disastrous, and will seriously affect the great body of the American people, by unsettling the values of staple commodities, and cause a spirit of reckless speculation in trading to be inaugurated.

The great staples of cotton and tobacco will, in all probabilty, decline below the price of profitable production while bread stuffs and meats will advance rapidly. If all the people were meat and bread producers, ship owners and bondholders, our country might become rich over the blood of the victims; but, unfortunately, only 45 per cent. of the American people are farmers, and of these less than one-half raise more bread and meat than will support themselves; so that less than one-fourth of the entire people of the United States will be benefited and three-fourths severely injured by being forced to pay high prices for eatables with no means for increasing their income. Of course mechanics, manufacturers, cotton and tobacco and hemp raisers—to say nothing of the poor of the land—will be completely in the hands of the moneyed men, food producers and speculators; wages will probably be lessened, strikes will become fashionable, and the poor-houses crowded. Fortunately for Kentucky, her people can lessen their hemp and tobacco crops and increase their corn, hay and wheat; and wisdom at this time indicate to our farmers to look at these things well before they plant too large a tobacco crop. I do not profess to give advice, but simply state the case, and leave it to the farmers to carry out their own plans according to their interest and wisdom.

Chemical Fertilizer—At the request of several correspondents I will give the following formulas for fertilizing tobacco lands, which will no doubt be satisfactory to any one who will try the experiment:

To fertilize one acre for tobacco, use German kainit, 400 pounds; Gypsum (landplaster), 80 pounds; Sulphate of Potash, 100 pounds; Superphosphate, 100 pounds.

Mix intimately before hilling the ground for planting.

Second formula—

Superposphate, 100 pounds; Sulphate of Potash, 75 pounds; Landplaster (gypsum) 75 pounds; Skeens complete plant-food (made in Louisville), 300 pounds sown broad cast in the same manner.

Either of these will increase the yield over 500 pounds to the acre. This "plant food" alone is excellent for wheat, corn or gardens. Mr. R. C. Harris, of Marion County says: "I have used several tons of land plaster on vegetables, and think it pays well. I have plowed in green rye and find it an excellent fertilizer. I also have used bone flour, superphosphates, and bromophytes on my vegetables with good results. Subsoiling also pays." The inquiry by farmers for mineral fertilizers is very great; the dealers and State Grange Agency, in Louisville, tell me that thirty times more are being used in Kentucky than were ordered last year, and that all who tried them last year give most satisfactory results.

I am under many obligations for the prompt and full responses of my many correspondents throughout the State.

THE other day a would-be fashionable lady called at a lady's at what she thought would be supper time. "We are having tableaux." "I'm so glad," said the visitor. "I thought I smelt'em, and I like them better than anything for supper."

A NEW YORK girl sang "Darling I am growing old," with an expression so pertinent and truthful that her procrastinating lover left her for good.

SPRING.

Now doth the little onion
Poke up its little head,
And the restless little radish
Stretch in his little bed.

The sunfish and the minnow
Wag their shiny little tails,
While the chipmunks and the robin
Adorn the fence's rails.

The blossom by the hedge side,
And along the city street,
Tells of the beautious spring-time
And the roses blooming sweet.

Dogs.

It is well known there are certain standing topics at which every Legislature takes a tilt. Of these we had nothing to say during the setting. Now there is no reason for silence, and all topics are free; we do not, therefore, hesitate to touch that standard topic of Legislation—that the bete noir of debate—the dog, and we proceed to say that certain recent developments have been made which are very much to the dog's discredit. Mr. Zurn, of Liepsic, recently delivered a lecture in that city on taxing dogs in which he gave a good deal of hitherto unknown information. The dog a lone goes mad by spontaneous effort. The dog is not only the most useless and expensive of the domestic animals, but he is most dangerous. He communicates hydrophobia to every other animal, man included. But this is his mildest fault. He is infested by parasites to a degree unknown to other animals. He has within him four kinds of tape worms. He is also proprietor of a kind of louse, called the pentastomen for short, which lays within the dog's carcass myriads of eggs which the dog scatters pretty much over all creation by the sneezing process—the dog is a famous animal to sneeze. These parasitic creatures often produce fatal disease in men, and give mnneeessary trouble to all other animals with which the dog associates. This would seem to be bad news concerning the dog, and if that animal has any friends now is the time for their friendship to show itself.

Apropos to the topic, it may be mentioned that the Massachusetts Legislature, which wisely proceeds by appointing a commission first, is considering the advisability of abolishing the Spitz dog. When the commission reports, the Spitz dog has had his day, and will pass out of the State.—Indianapolis Journal.

Enter Conkling.

Conkling enters in his most studied manner and at the most effective moment. He has an audience worth his histrionic parts. Though the two ranks are filled with golden-robed strangers, and the magistrates of the Supreme Bench in silken sables are in line on the circular back of the seats near the desk, and though there is beauty unsurpassed, and fashion, and rank, and pretense, and picturesque shoddy, and affluence, all eyes are fixed on the towering figure of the New York Senator. It would be trivial to note details in most men, but this creature is all detail, and without them it is impossible to reproduce the amazing compdeil from the crown of his extraordinary head to the soul of his exquisite foot. He was the center of thousands of eyes, and he knew it and he meant it, and he meant that every one should have their fill of wonder and sight-seeing. Wrapped in a great beaver overcoat, resurrected from the untimely chill of the day, his figure stood out Apollo-like among the careless crowd on the Senate floor. His crowning glory, the golden hair, tinged here and there with a non-committal whitish gray, was evidently fresh from the curling tongs. There were joeose comments among the reporters as he stood demurely, pretending that he could get no seat, while reveling with intoxicating delight in the wondering comments which he could hardly help hearing in the gallaries. Even the almond-eyed Japs regarded the handsome fellow with wonder, and made a motion of asking who and what he was. —Chicago Times.

THE President's gallantry led him to say to the St. Louis lawyeress when she spoke of being at his inauguration: "My dear Miss Cozzens, in that case I should have kissed something else besides the book." Next morning, says the Graphic, Mrs. Hayes was surprised, on looking from the window, to see twenty-seven tramps crawl out of the straw back of the executive barn and shake themselves. Then they came to the door and asked what she was going to do about it. They were divorce lawyers.

DON'T go asleep during the first part of your minister's sermon. At least pay him the compliment of supposing he will be both entertaining and instructive. If, however, after fifteen minutes, you feel drowsy, you can go to sleep with a quiet conscience, because you have given him a fair chance to keep you awake and he couldn't do it.

IT is proposed that, instead of moving the remains of General Custer and those who fell with him on the banks of the Rosebud, to erect a monument where they lie, and engrave the names of each of the fallen upon it.

POLITICAL POINTS.

LET the past, with all its shame and suffering, be set aside; let the men who have wronged us, robbed us and oppressed us be undisturbed; extend to them the broadest protection of the law, and let it not be said abroad that the people of Louisiana stained their glorious triumph by a single act of vilolence, persecution or vengance.—N. O. Democrat.

THE State Department at Washington has received from the United States Minister to Mexico, official information of the release of the American Consul at Acapulco, who was recently imprisoned there by the local authorities without cause, and Secretary Evarts has instructed the Minister to enter a formal protest and demand from the Government of Mexico an apology and full reparation for the outrage.

AT the time Packard entered on the last campaign he was worth twenty or twenty-five thousand dollars. He is said to have expended every cent of this in the attempt to keep his government up, and he is now in destitute circumstances, with a large family on his hands. It is therefore argued that Packard will be compelled to swallow his resentment against the President and take whatever is offered to him. —Baltimore Sun.

THE theory of the Administration is that a special session of Congress at this time would "disarrange the business of the country." It is very strange that the meeting of the people's representatives in Congress should "disarrange business affairs." This is the first argument of a tyrant. The second would naturally be that it would "disarrange the business affairs of the country" for Congress to meet at all. Possibly this delightful Administration entertains the idea that the meeting of the people themselves to discuss the questions of the hour "disarrange business affairs." If it does not entertain this idea it will find its "business affairs" very materially "disarranged" during the next year. The people will be heard, and it is no gentle zephyr that will play about the ears of the Administration when they do speak. Mr. Hayes is making a little parasol of time, and indulges in that fond delusion that that will ward off the gale, but he will find himself mistaken.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

AT the extra session of Congress a vigorous effort will be made to get an appropriation for Captain Howgate's Arctic expedition. Captain Howgate is offered a suitable vessel for the transportation of fifty men and their provisions, outfits and other necessary material for a three years' stay at Lady Franklin Bay, for the sum of eighteen thousand dollars. The vessel offered is a propeller of six hundred and fifty tons burden, copper fastened throughout, and draws fourteen feet of water loaded, and under way makes from ten to twelve knots per hour. She can be made ready for the expedition in ten days from the receipt of notice. The sum asked is high, even when the unusual risks incured in navigating the Arctic seas are taken in consideration. A three years' supply of provision will cost, at current wholesale rates, twenty seven thousand dollars, and the amount needed for the purchase of buildings for the colony, boats, sledges, instruments, and other essentials, is estimated at ten thousand dollars, making an aggregate of fifty-five thousand dollars for the expedition, exclusive of any compensation to be tendered the hardy adventurers who will consecrate themselves to the work of discovery.—Washington Special.

IT is said that the Southern Democrats intend insisting on controlling the question of the Speakership of the next House, which, it will be remembered, in the last Congress they left to their fellow-Demoerts in the North and West, with the result of Mr. Kerr's election. They did this from a feeling that with their recent accession to power it would, be in view of the Presidential election, good policy as well as in good taste to allow their claims as a majority of the dominant party in Congress to lie in abeyance, but with the complete restoration of the South to its constitutional place in the Union there are no sectional differences to be recognized. The country is a unit, and a candidate from the South has as good a right to the Speakership as one from the North. Hence it is proposed to run Mr. Goode, of Virginia, in opposition to Mr. Randall from the North and Morrison from the West, and let the best man win in the caucus. The movement is said to have the support of Senator Gordon, of Georgia and to be undertaken out of the friendship to President Hayes, who would find a Southern Speaker a better supporter of his policy than a Northern Democrat.—Washington Special New York Herald.

THEY have a curious way of deciding law suits in Siam. Both parties are put under cold water, and the one staying longest wins the suit. In this country both parties are got into hot water and then kept there as long as possible. The result in the is end the same.

How Pat Got the Pig.

A Yorkshireman, having killed a pig, and not wanting to divide with his neighbors, as was the custom, said to his man (who, by the way, was a son of the Emerald Isle):

"Pat, if I give the neighbors, who have given me, a piece of my pork, I'll have none for myself. Can you tell me what I am to do?"

"Bedad, sir," said Pat, "it's myself that can do that same thing."

"Good," says the Yorkshireman, rubbing his hands and looking at Pat. "Now, tell me what I am to do?"

"Faith, sir," said Pat, "sure and when the crather is cleaned, be afther hanging it against the door, where ivery mother's son of them will see it, and early in the morning, before any one is about, get up and take in your pig and hide it away. Thin, when your neighbors come, just be afther telling them that the pig was stolen."

"Capital idea, Pat!" exclaimed the Yorkshireman. "I'll do it, by George!"

So, when the pig was cleaned, it was hung up outside, so that the neighbors might see it. The countryman anxiously awaited the approaching night, and at last retired to bed, but not to sleep. Pat, under the cover of the darkness of the night, crept around the house and stole the pig.

What was the astonishment of the Yorkshireman, when at early dawn he arose to hide away his pig, but found no pig there, can be better imagined than described. Pat came in with his:

"Top o' the mornin' to ye, sir," and, giving him a knowing wink, said, "Master, how about the pig?"

"Well, Pat, the pig was stolen in reality."

"Faith, and that sounds just as natural as if you had lost your pig," said Pat, with another knowing wink.

"But, you blockhead, I tell you the pig was stolen."

"Faith, and be gorra, the sorra a bit o' me thought you could act so well. Just stick to that; it's natural as life."

"By George!" roared the now irate Yorkshireman, "I tell you the pig was stolen."

"Och! be jabers!" said Pat, "stick to it, and yer nabors will belave you, and sorra a bit of it they'll get. Faith, I didn't think ye could do it so well."

An Irishman's Will.

In the name of God, amen! I, Timothy Doolan, of Brarydownlary, in the county Clare, farmer, being sick, wake on my legs, but of sound mind and kind heart—Glory be to God!—do make this my first and last and will ould and new testament. First, I give my soul to God, when it plases him to take it—shure no thanks to me, for I can't help it then—and my body to be buried in the ground at Barrydowndarry Chapel, where all my kith and kin that have gone before me, and those who live after, peace to their ashes, and may the sod rest lightly over their bones. Bury me near godfather and my mother, who lie separated all together at the other end of the chapel yard. I lave the bit of ground containg eight acres—rale old Irish acres—to my eldest son Tim, after the death of his mother if she lives to survive him. My daughter Mary and her husband, Paddy O'Reagal, are to have the black sow that is going to have twelve black bonifs. Teddy, my second boy that was killed in the war in Ameiky, might have got his pick of poultry, but as he has gone I'll lave them to his wife, who died a week before him; I bequeath to all mankind fresh air of heaven, all fishes of the sea they can take, and all the birds of the air they can shoot; I lave to them all the sun, moon and stars. I lave to Pete Raffety a pint of poteen I can't finish, and may God be mereiful to him.

IN weighing reports regarding the Mormons, it is well to remember the situation of affairs in Utah. The Mormons have built up a flourishing Territory, dotted with towns and villages, and having for a capital one of the prettiest towns in the world. The Territory contains a considerable number of Gentiles, as non-Mormons are called, living in peace with their Mormon neighbors. It also contains not a few adventurers, who look with longing eyes upon the riches accumulated by the industry of the older inhabitants. To those adventurers an anti-Mormon crusade might give a chance to seize the reins of power and revel in the plunder of the land, just as the worst of the carpet-baggers reveled in the stealing of the Southern States. Hence the appeal for the disfranchisement of the Mormons, which would mean the disfranchisement of nearly all the industrious inhabitants of the Territory. Hence, no doubt, the story that the Mormons are organizing to resist the arrest of Brigham Young. At present there is no country in which the laws of the United States are more readily obeyed than in Utah, and there is no reason to believe that the Mormons can be provoked to a breach of the peace.
